SWINBURNE'S POEMS.*

* * * * *

We are not old enough to recollect the sensation caused by the appearance of the 1866 "Poems and Ballads"; and those of us who first came under the spell when the "Song of Italy" and the "Songs before Sunrise" had had time to clear the air and add an extraordinary radiant humanity and an ideal cry for freedom to the poet's account, were, if anything, fortunate in being so far belated. Out of the last-named volume, and out of "Atalanta in Calydon," we had our measure of delight filled to overflowing, and gained our sense—one of the pleasantest that can fall to mortal man—of poetry alive and operative in our midst and making all the while for our deliverance—for the things that counted and the things we really cared about. It was so we read "Hertha":—

"I am in thee to save thee,
As my soul in thee saith;
Give thou as I gave thee,
My life-blood and breath,

Green leaves of thy labour, white flowers of thy thought, and red fruit of thy death."

There was a background of real events, too, to that lyric ecstasy; the Italian break for liberty, the names of Mazzini, Aurelio Saffi, and Garibaldi were still themes to stir the blood afresh. I remember, many years later, talking to Mme. Venturi in Chelsea about Mazzini and realising again how he and his cause had irradiated the hopes of the party of youth all over Europe—yes, reflected a vivid ray or two into English politics as well as into the thoughts of the new young English poets who were immediately contemporary.

Mr. Swinburne had gone to Italy on leaving Oxford, and meeting Mazzini in London soon afterwards had got very near the head-spring of that revolt. He tells us that it was in fact his ode on the insurrection in Candia which drew from Mazzini a letter of appreciation and so led to the actual beginning of their personal intercourse. The poet's mother—Lady Jane Henrietta Ashburnham—had been educated in Florence; and Florentine and Italian associations, early and late, were threaded from the beginning into the texture of his early life. It is not being too fanciful, perhaps, to relate to the same associations Dante Gabriel Rossetti's following in Oxford, when Burne-Jones and Swinburne were among the followers. Afterwards the Rossetti influence became for a time paramount. It immensely affected the younger poet; possibly it taught him some new imaginative subtleties, although it could teach him nothing of that marvellous command of unsuspected cadences in which he already excelled. But beyond that one cannot help thinking that while Rossetti may not have played exactly the part of the pigmy-king, who invited Herla underground, his effect was in some ways rather akin to the stronger lure of Gautier and Baude-laire.

As the opening volume of this edition* may help to recall, the original "Queen-Mother and Rosamund," a scarce book now, was dedicated to Rossetti. That was in 1860. Five years later "Atalanta in Calydon" was published, and still the public was but dully sensible of the new poet and his new music, "large-toned and sweet, and equal in lyric compass to every demand of his imaginative and dramatic idea." Then came the first "Poems and Ballads" volume; and the excitement and the outcry that ensued came very near to producing an apoplexy among the critics and to shaking and disturbing severely one old-established firm of publishers.

What seems to have happened precisely was this. An early copy of the "Poems and Ballads" volume came into the hands of Dallas, then chief literary reviewer to The Times, who, after ruminating on what we will call the pigmy-poems, strode off to Moxon's with an ultimatum. Either, said he, let them withdraw the book or he would denounce it and destroy it. As they had no wish to be denounced or destroyed themselves, they preferred to accept the former alternative. John Camden Hotten brought out the book, and thereby began that independent publisher's tradition which, continued by his successors, has ever since been associated with Mr. Swinburne's writings.

The noise that the critics and reviewers, responsible and irresponsible, made over the book, helped as always is the case to give it a sudden vogue. It became notorious. Both enemies and honest men attacked it; the poet and his friends furiously resisted. The pigmies were delighted and flocked to the encounter. Only those who truly cared about the fortunes of poetry and knew the endless possibilities of the poet himself were disturbed at the encounter. They heartily wished the offending poems at the bottom of the sea; and I daresay many of them now would confess to a desire, that with the lapse of time and the cooling of the argument, they should have been allowed to sink finally into limbo.

However, the poet, who has the casting vote, has decided otherwise; and since they, with the rest of his reprinted poems, remain exactly as they were originally printed and written, we must take the consolation of perceiving that, ranged with the mass of his work even in the single volume of the six, they seem rather grotesque than anything and more abnormal than wicked.

But what a relief to escape from the caves to the upper air and the ampler region of Mr. Swinburne's ideal and most magical control; there, indeed, one breathes free and hears the voices of the gods as they have sounded not often in all the major range of English verse.

"I, last, least voice of her voices
Give thanks that were mute in me long
To the soul in my soul that rejoices
For the song that is over my song.
Time gives what he gains for the giving
Or takes for his tribute of me
My dreams to the wind ever living
My song to the sea."

So, too, one hears it, set to a superb music, in the exchange of lament at the passing of Meleager:—

Meleager.

Unto each man his fate
Unto each as he saith
In whose fingers the weight
Of the world is as breath:

Yet I would that in clamour of battle mine hands had laid hold upon death.

Chorus.

Not with cleaving of shields
And their clash in thine ear,
When the lord of fought fields
Breaketh spearshaft from spear,

Thou art broken, our lord, thou art broken, with travail, and labour, and fear.

Meleager.

Would God he had found me
Beneath fresh boughs,
Would God he had bound me
Unawares in mine house,

With light in mine eyes, and songs in my lips, and a crown on my brows.

And in the same lyric tragedy of Althæa and Atalanta, one hears it in Althæa's noble speech at the beginning of the end:—

"I would I had died unwedded, and brought forth
No swords to vex the world; for these that spake
Sweet words long since, and loved me will not speak
Nor love nor look upon me; and all my life
I shall not hear nor see them living men."

But thinking of Althæa, we go on to recall Iseult and Mr. Swinburne's essays in the Arthurian cycle late and early. And Iseult and Tristram tempt us to picture the time again when the P. R. B. were alive and very potential; and when William Morris, and Rossetti, and Burne-Jones, and others were venturing into the domain of the Cymric king—allured as a Chrestien de Troyes and a Marie de France had been in an older day by that great fantasy. But this London Pre-Raphaelite and post-Tennysonian coterie wore its Arthurian and other colours with a difference. Their music had a stamp of its own. They seemed to be reared up in a little private music-gallery in the Victorian house of fame; with curious instruments and tapestries (which were really new, but looked old) hanging from the balustrade.

It was not long, however, before the author of "Tristram of Lyonesse" came out of that close confraternity, persuaded, it may be, by the one mysterious man, who was unknown to the outer public, who had written nothing, painted nothing, done nothing that they knew of; but who, it was whispered, pulled many of the strings which moved the outward and visible performances of the rest. This was Mr. Theodore Watts, better known now as Mr. Watts-Dunton, who had a private door into the gallery and occasionally took one of its occupants, jaded by the over-charged æsthetic atmosphere, for a little walk in the open air.

Common interests, and common topics—Aeschylus, let us say; the Elizabethan playwrights and the gospel of the P. R. B., may have drawn Rossetti's "friend of friends" into a closer friendship, too, with Rossetti's younger companion at Chatham House. Other ties and other associations contributing, we see how even "Tristram of Lyonesse" became a subject painted in "pleinair," and how its writer became more and more confirmed now in his innate love for the sea, and for its "joyful and fateful beauty," and for all that roving life with which his London days were intermitted. And if Rossetti pulled one way, Rossetti's friend, or so one conjectures, pulled hard the other way; and that other way led always back to the sea—to Guernsey and Sark and Dunwich, and back to the veritable original of Joyous Gard on the Northumbrian coast.

From this time forth, Mr. Swinburne's poetry turned more expressly to landscape and place-effects, and one does not know whether to think it good or bad, seeing that descriptive verse can so easily be overdone. But, says Mr. Swinburne himself, if a "mere descriptive poetry of the pre-pense and formal kind" is open to reproach, there is another kind of poetry where the emotion of the spectator and the poet is clearly felt and where there is corresponding life in the written page. "This note," he says, "is more plain and positive than usual in the poem which attempts—at once a single and an ambitious attempt—to render the contrast and the concord of night and day on Loch Torridon; it is, I think, duly sensible though implicitly subdued in four poems of the west undercliff, born or begotten of sunset in the bay and moonlight on the cliffs, noon or morning in a living and shining garden, afternoon or twilight on one left flowerless and forsaken."

This is a retrospect of the days when the Isle of Wight and the coast between Bonchurch and Ventnor figures largely in the story; when "the majestic and exquisite glory of cliff and crag, lawn and woodland, garden and lea," inspired the four poems, "In the Bay," "On the Cliffs," "A Forsaken Garden," and the dedication of "The Sisters."

However, it was not Mr. Swinburne's impassioned poetry of nature but his impassioned and much more typical song of man which gave him a distinctive effect upon his most susceptible hearers in the impulsive first period. And what he himself says of this part of his work is so absolutely characteristic of the spirit in which it was conceived and written that it is impossible not to quote it:—

The writer of "Songs before Sunrise," from the first line to the last (he says), wrote simply in submissive obedience to Sir Philip Sidney's precept "Look in thine heart, and write." The dedication of these poems, and the fact that the dedication was accepted, must be sufficient evidence of this. . . . These poems, and others which followed or preceded them in print, were inspired by such faith as is born of devotion and reverence: not by such faith, if faith it may be called, as is synonymous with servility or compatible with prostration of an abject or wavering spirit and a submissive or dethroned intelligence.

This is enough perhaps to suggest what can best be completed by a leading passage from one of the poems he refers to. The "Mater Triumphalis" in this series would alone go far to support the view that the prevalent notion of his work and inspiration entertained by the outer public to-day is a hugely mistaken one:—

"One hour for sleep,' we said, 'and yet one other;
All day we served her, and who shall serve by night?'
Not knowing of thee, thy face not knowing, Oh mother,
Oh, light, wherethrough the darkness is as light.

"Men that forsook thee hast thou not forsaken,
Races of men that knew not hast thou known,
Nations that slept thou hast doubted not to waken,
Worshippers of strange Gods to make thine own.

* * * * *

"Death is subdued to thee, and hell's bands broken;
Where thou art only is heaven; who hears not thee
Time shall not hear him; when men's names are spoken,
A nameless sign of death shall his name be.

"Deathless shall be the death, the name be nameless;
Sterile of stars his twilight time of breath;
With fire of hell shall shame consume him shameless,
And dying, all the night darken his death.

"I have no spirit of skill with equal fingers
At sign to sharpen, or to slacken strings;
I keep no time of song with gold-perched singers
And chirp of linnets on the wrists of kings.

"I am thy storm-thrush of the days that darken,
My petrel in the foam that bears thy bark
To port through night and tempest; if thou hearken
My voice is in thy heaven before the lark.

"My song is in the mist that hides thy morning,
My cry is up before the day for thee;
I have heard thee and beheld thee and give warning
Before thy wheels divide the sky and sea.

"Birds shall wake with thee voiced and feathered fairer,
To see in summer what I see in spring;
I have eyes and heart to endure thee, oh thunder-bearer,
And they shall be who shall have tongues to sing."

With this note of prophetic enthusiasm sounding in one's ears, one is not only led to the conviction that the popular idea of Mr. Swinburne, as the voice of a perverse and wicked generation is, as I said, mistaken, but that he is, of all poets of our era, that one who has suffered most from excess of moral energy, a too religious sense of pity and a too fierce, impassionate sympathy for his fellows. It is this incalculable, emotional excess that tempted him in his earlier period to the inartistic and immature extremes he hints at in his Dedicatory Epistle; and that has led him on occasion in much later volumes to the desperate necessity of denouncing God and Mr. Gladstone.

Recognising this as a sign of a vehemence of nature and imagination, which is certainly not like that of the typical English writers in verse or prose to-day, we shall be better able to realise how irresistible was the prime force that accompanied Mr. Swinburne's advent in the Victorian field. And as we measure his powers, too, in the major field of English poetry we are better able to relate him to those other English poets, who have, in the same way, taken Atlas's burden on their shoulders.

If there is in his work, as there is in theirs, a characteristic resumption of things and influences not English, it may be indeed, it is, because, while he learnt from the noblest English masters, from Marlowe and Shakespeare, and their kin, he learnt, too, from the Hebrew poets and Greek dramatists. To Aeschylus, he added Ezekiel; and from the Bible, as from the Elizabethans, he gained, no doubt, something of that alarming biblical freedom of speech, which, joined to his vivid imagination of all sensuous and terrestrial things, has had much to do with the sudden indignation he has aroused among many honest folk. But they, one fears, do not always realise what an amazing book the Old Testament is, or how dangerous to the minds and vocables of imaginative youth it may have proved.

Far then from ranking the earlier Mr. Swinburne's "Songs before Sunrise," and the "Poems and Ballads," with the poets of an English decadence, we ought to count him with the Victorian humanists, who, if they went astray, did so from excess of zeal. They took up new weapons on behalf of this much misunderstood and estreated humanity of ours, drove out the traffickers that would make of free men vassals of kings and slaves of tradition, and carried the cry of their indignation, as Victor Hugo in his rôle of the new Prometheus had done, up to the gates of heaven itself. It does not at all impair the force of this suggestion, to have to admit that the leaders in the humanitarian revolt did sometimes, in error or in wrath, furiously belabour each other and each other's disciples. Moral enthusiasm, like the poetic imagination, is a thing sui generis; it exists apart from the objects to which the intellectual or the æsthetic perceptions may guide it. Mr. Swinburne, denouncing his fellow republicans as the unfortunate anarchists and monarchs of this imperfect world, or the disciples and idolisers of a noble leader in the same cause oversea, is still acting strictly ac-

ording to the temperamental law of his being. We may see renewed in him indeed an old predicament of many poets, at odds with themselves or their time; we see, that is to say, the prophet struggling in him with the poet, and at times overwhelming the poet; and then again we see the poet taking his lyric revenge. It was so that an earlier generation once saw, in the intellectual tragedy of Coleridge, the metaphysician in him gradually overtaking, and dragging down, and killing out the poet.

Probably we shall find this struggle, in Mr. Swinburne's case, continue in its other way, both for good and evil, on to the very end. That the spirit of pure poetry is by no means dead in him, we should know, if from nothing else, by the eloquence with which in his "Dedicatory Epistle" to the collected edition, he defends and maintains his practice of, and his loyalty to its tenets and its art. We should know it above all, if all that has been said on this count is true, by the significant close of this epistle addressed to his associate of twenty-five years past, to his "best and dearest friend," and Rossetti's "friend of friends,"—Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton. "It is nothing to me," concludes Mr. Swinburne, "that what I write should find immediate or general acceptance; it is much to know that on the whole it has won for me the right to address this dedication, and inscribe this edition to you." Here, to be sure, is the echo of an old intolerance for the public, which may appear to suggest the voice in the wilderness; but the true incidence of this close is in its final clause, and may be more plainly seen when one realises that it is an appeal from that public, not to the gods or pigmies, but to a fellow-poet.

ERNEST RHYS.

DEDICATION

1865

THE sea gives her shells to the shingle,
 The earth gives her streams to the sea;
 They are many, but my gift is single,
 My verses, the first fruits of me.
 Let the wind take the green and the grey leaf,
 Cast forth without fruit upon air;
 Take rose-leaf and vine-leaf and bay-leaf
 Blown loose from the hair.

The night shakes them round me in legions
 Dawn drives them before her like dreams;
 Time sheds them like snows on strange regions,
 Swept shoreward on infinite streams;
 Leaves pallid and sombre and ruddy,
 Dead fruits of the fugitive years;
 Some stained as with wine and made bloody,
 And some as with tears.

Some scattered in seven years' traces,
 As they fell from the boy that was then;
 Long left among idle green places,
 Or gathered but now among men;
 On seas full of wonder and peril,
 Blown white round the capes of the north;
 Or in islands where myrtles are sterile
 And loves bring not forth.

xvii

O daughters of dreams and of stories
That life is not wearied of yet,
Faustine, Fragoletta, Dolores,
Félise and Yolande and Juliette,
Shall I find you not still, shall I miss you,
When sleep, that is true or that seems,
Comes back to me hopeless to kiss you,
O daughters of dreams.

They are past as a slumber that passes,
As the dew of a dawn of old time;
More frail than the shadows on glasses,
More fleet than a wave or a rhyme.
As the waves after ebb drawing seaward,
When their hollows are full of the night,
So the birds that flew singing to me-ward
Recede out of sight.

The songs of dead seasons, that wander
On wings of articulate words;
Lost leaves that the shore-wind may squander,
Light flocks of untameable birds;
Some sang to me dreaming in class time
And truant in hand as in tongue;
For the youngest were born of boy's pastime,
The eldest are young.

Is there shelter while life in them lingers,
Is there hearing for songs that recede,
Tunes touched from a harp with men's fingers
Or blown with boy's mouth in a reed?
Is there place in the land of your labor,
Is there room in your world of delight,
Where change has not sorrow for neighbor
And day has not night?

In their wings though the sea-wind yet quivers,
Will you spare not a space for them there
Made green with the running of rivers
And gracious with temperate air;
In the fields and the turreted cities,
That cover from sunshine and rain
Fair passions and bountiful pities
And loves without stain?

In a land of clear colors and stories,
In a region of shadowless hours,
Where earth has a garment of glories
And a murmur of musical flowers;
In woods where the spring half uncovers
The flush of her amorous face,
By the waters that listen for lovers,
For these is there place?

For the song-birds of sorrow, that muffle
Their music as clouds do their fire:
For the storm-birds of passion, that ruffle
Wild wings in a wind of desire;
In the stream of the storm as it settles
Blown seaward, borne far from the sun,
Shaken loose on the darkness like petals
Dropt one after one?

Though the world of your hands be more gracious
And lovelier in lordship of things
Clothed round by sweet art with the spacious Warm heaven of her imminent wings,
Let them enter, unfledged and nigh fainting,
For the love of old loves and lost times;
And receive in your palace of painting
This revel of rhymes.

Though the seasons of man full of losses
Make empty the years full of youth,
If but one thing be constant in crosses,
Change lays not her hand upon truth;
Hopes die, and their tombs are for token
That the grief as the joy of them ends
Ere time that breaks all men has broken
The faith between friends.

Though the many lights dwindle to one light,
There is help if the heavens has one;
Though the skies be discrowned of the sunlight
And the earth dispossessed of the sun,
They have moonlight and sleep' for repayment,
When, refreshed as a bride and set free
With stars and sea-winds in her raiment,
Night sinks on the sea.

CLEOPATRA

I

Her mouth is fragrant as a vine,
A vine with birds in all its boughs;
Serpent and scarab for a sign
Between the beauty of her brows
And the amorous deep lips divine.

II

Her great curled hair makes luminous
Her cheeks, her lifted throat and chin.
Shall she not have the hearts of us
To shatter, and the loves therein,
To shed between her fingers thus?

III

Small ruined broken strays of light,
Pearl after pearl she shreds them through
Her long sweet sleepy fingers, white
As any pearl's heart veined with blue,
And soft as dew on a soft night.

IV

As if the very eyes of love
Shone through her shutting lids, and stole

The slow looks of a snake or dove;
 As if her lips absorbed the whole
 Of love, her soul the soul thereof.

V

Lost, all the lordly pearls that were
 Wrung from the sea's heart, from the green
 Coasts of the Indian gulf-river;
 Lost, all the loves of the world—so keen
 Towards this queen for love of her.

VI

You see against her throat the small
 Sharp glittering shadows of them shake;
 And through her hair the imperial Curled likeness of the river snake,
 Whose bite shall make an end of all.

VII

Through the scales sheathing him like wings,
 Through hieroglyphs of gold and gem,
 The strong sense of her beauty stings,
 Like a keen pulse of love in them,
 A running flame through all his rings.

VIII

Under those low, large lids of hers
 She hath the histories of all times;
 The fruit of foliage stricken years;
 The old seasons with their heavy chime
 That leaves its rhyme in the world's ears.

IX

She sees the heart of death made bare,
 The ravelled riddle of the skies,
 The faces faded that were fair,
 The mouths made speechless that were wise,
 The hollow eyes and dusty hair;

X

The shape and shadow of mystic things,
 Things that fate fashions or forbids;
 The staff of time-forgotten kings
 Whose name falls off the Pyramids,
 Their coffin-lids and grave-clothings;

XI

Dank dregs, the scum of pool or clod,
 God-spawn of lizard-footed clans,
 And those dog-headed hulks that trod
 Swart necks of the old Egyptians,
 Raw draughts of man's beginning God;

XII

The poised hawk, quivering ere he smote,
 With plume-like gems on breast and back;
 The asps and water-worms afloat
 Between the rush-flowers moist and slack;
 The cat's warm, black, bright, rising throat.

XIII

The purple days of drouth expand
 Like a scroll opened out again;

The molten heaven drier than sand,
The hot red heaven without rain,
Sheds iron pain on the empty line.

XIV

All Egypt aches in the sun's sight;
The lips of men are harsh for drought,
The fierce air leaves their cheeks burnt white,
Charred by the bitter blowing south,
Whose dusty mouth is sharp to bite.

XV

All this she dreams of, and her eyes
Are wrought after the sense hereof.
There is no heart in her for sighs;
The face of her is more than love—
A name above the Ptolomies.

XVI

Her great grave beauty covers her
As that sleek spoil beneath her feet
Clothed once the anointed soothsayer;
The hallowing is gone forth from it
Now, made unmeet for priests to wear.

XVII

She treads on gods and god-like things,
On fate and fear and life and death,
On hate that cleaves and love that clings,
All that is brought forth of man's breath
And perisheth with what it brings.

XIX

She holds her future close, her lips
Hold fast the face of things to be;
Actium, and sound of war that dips
Down the blown valleys of the sea,
For sails that flee, and storms of ships;

XX

The laughing, red, sweet mouth of wine
At ending of life's festival;
That space of cerecloths, and the fine
White bitter dust funereal
Sprinkled on all things for a sign.

XXI

His face, who was and was not he,
In whom, alive, her life abode;
The end, when she gained heart to see
Those ways of death wherein she trod,
Goddess by god, with Antony.

A BALLAD OF LIFE

I FOUND in dreams a place of wind and flowers,
Full of sweet trees and color of glad grass,
In midst whereof there was
A lady clothed like summer with sweet hours,
Her beauty, fervent as a fiery moon
Made my blood burn and swoon
Like a flame rained upon.

Sorrow had filled her shaken eyelids' blue,
 And her mouth's sad red heavy rose all through Seemed sad with glad things gone.

She held a little cithern by the strings,
 Shaped heartwise, strung with subtle-colored hair
 Of some dead lute player
 That in dead years had done delicious things.
 The seven strings were named accordingly;
 The first string charity,
 The second tenderness,
 The rest were pleasure, sorrow, sleep, and sin,
 And loving kindness, that is pity's kin
 And is most pitiless.

There were three men with her, each garmented
 With gold and shod with gold upon the feet;
 And with plucked ears of wheat.
 The first man's hair was wound upon his head:
 His face was red, and his mouth curled and sad;
 All his gold garment had
 Pale stains of dust and rust.
 A riven hood was pulled across his eyes;
 The token of him being upon this wise
 Made for a sign of Lust.

The next was Shame, with hollow heavy face
 Colored like green wood when flame kindles it.
 He hath such feeble feet
 They may not well endure in any place.
 His face was full, grey old miseries,
 And all his blood's increase
 Was even increase of pain.
 The last was Fear, that is akin to Death;
 He is Shame's friend, and always as Shame saith
 Fear answers him again.

My soul said in me; This is marvellous,
 Seeing the air's face is not so delicate
 Nor the sun's grace so great,
 If sin and she be kin or amorous.
 And seeing where maidens served her on their knees,
 I bade one crave of these
 To know the cause thereof.
 Then Fear said: I am Pity that was dead.
 And Shame said: I am Sorrow comforted.
 And Lust said: I am Love.

Thereat her hands began a lute-playing
 And her sweet mouth a song in a strange tongue;
 And all the while she sung
 There was no sound but long tears following
 Long tears upon men's faces, waxen white
 With extreme delight.
 But those three following men
 Became as men raised up among the dead;
 Great glad mouths open, and fair cheeks made red
 With child's blood come again.

Then I said: Now assuredly I see
 My lady is perfect, and transfigureth
 All sin and sorrow and death,
 Making them fair as her own eyelids be,
 Or lips wherein my whole soul's life abides;
 Or as her sweet white sides
 And bosom carved to kiss.
 Now therefore, if her pity further me,
 Doubtless for her sake all my days shall be
 As righteous as she is.

Forth, ballad, and take roses in both arms,
 Even till the top rose touch thee in the throat
 Where the least thornprick harms;

And girdled in thy golden singing-coat,
 Come thou before my lady and say this;
 Borgia, thy gold hair's color burns in me,
 Thy mouth makes beat my blood in feverish rhymes;
 Therefore so many as these roses be,
 Kiss me so many times.
 Then it may be, seeing how sweet she is,
 That she will stoop herself none otherwise
 Than a blown-vine-branch doth,
 And kiss thee with soft laughter on thine eyes,
 Ballad, and on thy mouth.

A BALLAD OF DEATH

KNEEL down, fair Love, and fill thyself with tears,
 Girdle thyself with sighing for a girth
 Upon the sides of mirth,
 Cover thy lips and eyelids, let thine ears
 Be filled with rumor of people sorrowing;
 Make thee soft raiment out of woven sighs
 Upon the flesh to cleave,
 Set pains therein and many a grievous thing,
 And many sorrows after each his wise
 For armlet and for gorget and for sleeve.

O Love's lute heard about the lands of death,
 Left hanged upon the trees that were therein;
 O Love and Time and Sin,
 Three singing mouths that mourn now under breath,
 Three lovers, each one evil spoken of;
 O smitten lips where through this voice of mine
 Came softer with her praise;
 Abide a little for our lady's love.
 The kisses of her mouth were more than wine,

And more than peace the passage of her days.
 O Love, thou knowest if she were good to see.
 O Time, thou shalt not find in any land
 Till, cast out of thine hand,
 The sunlight and the moonlight fail from thee,
 Another woman fashioned like as this.
 O Sin, thou knowest that all thy shame in her
 Was made a goodly thing;
 Yea, she caught Shame and shamed him with her kiss,
 With her fair kiss, and lips much lovelier
 Than lips of amorous roses in late spring.

By night there stood over against my bed
 Queen Venus with a hood striped gold and black,
 Both sides drawn fully back
 From brows wherein the sad blood failed of red,
 And temples drained of purple and full of death.
 Her curled hair had the wave of sea-water
 And the sea's gold in it.
 Her eyes were as a dove's that sickeneth.
 Strewn dust of gold she had shed over her,
 And pearl and purple and amber on her feet.

Upon her raiment of dyed sendaline
 Were painted all the secret ways of love
 And covered things thereof,
 That hold delight as grape-flowers hold their wine;
 Red mouths of maidens and red feet of doves,
 And brides that kept within the bride-chamber
 Their garment of soft shame,
 And weeping faces of the wearied loves
 That swoon in sleep and awake wearier,
 With heat of lips and hair shed out like flame.
 The tears that through her eyelids fell on me
 Made my own bitter where they ran between
 As blood had fallen therein,

She saying; Arise, lift up thine eyes and see
 If any glad thing be or any good
 Now the best thing is taken forth of us;
 Even she to whom all praise
 Was as one flower in a great multitude,
 One glorious flower of many and glorious,
 One day found gracious among many days:

Even she whose handmaiden was Love—to whom
 At kissing times across her stateliest bed
 Kings bowed themselves and shed
 Pale wine, and honey with the honeycomb,
 And spikenard bruised for a burnt-offering;
 Even she between whose lips the kiss became
 As fire and frankincense;
 Whose hair was as gold raiment on a king,
 Whose eyes were as the morning purged with flame,
 Whose eyelids as sweet savor issuing thence.
 Then I beheld, and lo on the other side
 My lady's likeness crowned and robed and dead.
 Sweet still, but now not red,
 Was the shut mouth whereby men lived and died.

And sweet, but emptied of the blood's blue shade,
 The great curled eyelids that withheld her eyes.
 And sweet, but like spoilt gold,
 The weight of color in her tresses weighed.
 And sweet, but as a vesture with new dyes,
 The body that was clothed with love of old.

Ah! that my tears filled all her woven hair
 And all the hollow bosom of her gown—
 Ah! that my tears ran down
 Even to the place where many kisses were,
 Even where her parted breast-flowers have place,
 Even where they are cloven apart—who knows not this?

Ah! the flowers cleave apart
 And their sweet fills the tender interspace;
 Ah! the leaves grown thereof were things to kiss
 Ere their fine gold was tarnished at the heart.

Ah! in the days when God did good to me,
 Each part about her was a righteous thing;
 Her mouth an almsgiving,
 The glory of her garments charity,
 The beauty of her bosom a good deed,
 In the good days when God kept sight of us;
 Love lay upon her eyes,
 And on that hair whereof the world takes heed:
 And all her body was more virtuous
 Than souls of women fashioned otherwise.

Now, ballad, gather poppies in thine hands
 And sheaves of briar and many rusted sheaves
 Rain-rotten in rank lands,
 Waste marigold and late unhappy leaves
 And grass that fades ere any of it be mown;
 And when thy bosom is filled full thereof
 Seek out Death's face ere the light altereth,
 And say "My master that was thrall to Love
 Is become thrall to Death."
 Bow down before him, ballad, sigh and groan,
 But make no sojourn in thy outgoing;
 For haply it may be
 That when thy feet return at evening
 Death shall come in with thee.

LAUS VENERIS

ASLEEP or waking is it? for her neck
 Kissed over close, wears yet a purple speck,
 Wherein the pained blood falters and goes out;
 Soft, and stung softly—fairer for a fleck.

But though my lips shot sucking on the place,
 There is no vein at work upon her face;
 Her eyelids are so peaceable, no doubt
 Deep sleep has warmed her blood through all its ways

Lo, this is she that was the world's delight;
 The old grey years were parcels of her might;
 The strewings of the ways wherein she trod
 Were the twain seasons of the day and night.

Lo, she was thus when her clear limbs enticed
 All lips that now grow sad with kissing Christ,
 Stained with blood fallen from the feet of God,
 The feet and hands whereat our souls were priced.

Alas, Lord, surely thou art great and fair.
 But lo her wonderfully woven hair!
 And thou didst heal us with thy piteous kiss;
 But see now, Lord; her mouth is lovelier.

She is right fair; what hath she done to thee?
 Nay, fair Lord Christ, lift up thine eyes and see;
 Had now thy mother such a lip—like this?
 Thou knowest how sweet a thing it is to me.

Inside the Horsel here the air is hot;
 Right little peace one hath for it, God wot;
 The scented dusty daylight burns the air,
 And my heart chokes me till I hear it not.

Behold, my Venus, my soul's body, lies
 With my love laid upon her garment-wise,
 Feeling my love in all her limbs and hair
 And shed between her eyelids through her eyes.

She holds my heart in her sweet open hands
 Hanging asleep; hard by her head there stands,
 Crowned with gilt thorns and clothed with flesh like fire,
 Love, wan as foam blown up the salt burnt sands—

Hot as the brackish waifs of yellow spume
 That shift and steam—loose clots of arid fume
 From the sea's panting mouth of dry desire;
 There stands he, like one laboring at a loom.

The warp holds fast across; and every thread
 That makes the woof up has dry specks of red;
 Always the shuttle cleaves clean through, and he
 Weaves with the hair of many a ruined head.

Love is not glad nor sorry, as I deem;
 Laboring he dreams, and labors in the dream,
 Till when the spool is finished, lo I see
 His web, reeled off, curls and goes out like steam.

Night falls like fire; the heavy lights run low,
 And as they drop, my blood and body so
 Shake as the flame shakes, full of days and hours
 That sleep not neither weep they as they go.

Ah yet would God this flesh of mine might be
 Where air might wash and long leaves cover me,
 Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,
 Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea.

Ah yet would God that stems and roots were bred
 Out of my weary body and my head,
 That sleep were sealed upon me with a seal,
 And I were as the least of all his dead.

Would God my blood were dew to feed the grass,
 Mine ears made deaf and mine eyes blind as glass,
 My body broken as a turning wheel,
 And my mouth stricken ere it saith Alas!

Ah God, that love were as a flower or flame,
 That life were as the naming of a name,
 That death were not more pitiful than desire,
 That these things were not one thing and the same!

Behold now, surely somewhere there is death;
 For each man hath some space of years, he saith.
 A little space of time ere time expire,
 A little day, a little way of breath.

And lo, between the sundawn and the sun,
 His day's work and his night's work are undone;
 And lo, between the nightfall and the light,
 He is not, and none knoweth of such an one.

As God, that I were as all souls that be,
 As any herb or leaf of any tree,
 As men that toil through hours of laboring night,
 As bones of men under the deep sharp sea.

Outside it must be winter among men;
 For at the gold bars of the gates again
 I heard all night and all the hours of it,
 The wind's wet wings and fingers drip with rain.

Knights gather, riding sharp for cold; I know
 The ways and woods are strangled with the snow;
 And with short song the maidens spin and sit
 Until Christ's birthnight, lily-like, arow.

The scent and shadow shed about me make
 The very soul in all my senses ache;
 The hot hard night is fed upon my breath,
 And sleep beholds me from afar awake.

Alas, but surely where the hills grow deep,
 Or where the wild ways of the sea are steep,
 Or in strange places somewhere there is death,
 And on death's face the scattered hair of sleep.

There lover-like with lips and limbs that meet
 They lie, they pluck sweet fruit of life and eat;
 But me the hot and hungry days devour,
 And in my mouth no fruit of theirs is sweet.

No fruit of theirs, but fruit of my desire,
 For her love's sake whose lips through mine respire;
 Her eyelids on her eyes like flower on flower,
 Mine eyelids on mine eyes like fire on fire.

So lie we, not as sleep that lies by death,
 With heavy kisses and with happy breath;
 Not as man lies by woman, when the bride
 Laughs low for love's sake and the words he saith.

For she lies, laughing low with love; she lies
 And turns his kisses on her lips to sighs,
 To sighing sound of lips unsatisfied,
 And the sweet tears are tender with her eyes.

Ah, not as they, but as the souls that were Slain in the old time, having found her fair;
 Who, sleeping with her lips upon their eyes,
 Heard sudden serpents hiss across her hair.

Their blood runs round the roots of time like rain.
 She casts them forth and gathers them again;
 With nerve and bone she weaves and multiplies
 Exceeding pleasure out of extreme pain.

Her little chambers drip with flower-like red,
 Her girdles, and the chaplets of her head,
 Her armlets and her anklets; with her feet,
 She tramples all that winepress of the dead.

Her gateways smoke with fume of flowers and fires,
 With loves burnt out and unassuaged desires;
 Between her lips the steam of them is sweet,
 The langor in her ears of many lyres.

Her beds are full of perfume and sad sound,
 Her doors are made with music and barred round
 With sighing and with laughter and with tears,
 With tears whereby strong souls of men are bound.

There is the knight Adonis that was slain,
 With flesh and blood she chains him for a chain;
 The body and the spirit in her ears
 Cry, for her lips divide him vein by vein.

Yea, all she slayeth; yea, every man save me;
 Me, love, thy lover that must cleave to thee
 Till the ending of the days and ways of earth.
 The shaking of the sources of the sea.

Me, most forsaken of all souls that fell;
 Me, satiated with things insatiable;
 Me, for whose sake the extreme hell makes mirth,
 Yea, laughter kindles at the heart of hell.

Alas thy beauty! for thy mouth's sweet sake
 My soul is bitter to me, my limbs quake
 As water, as the flesh of men that weep,
 As their heart's vein whose heart goes nigh to break.

Ah God, that sleep with flower-sweet finger-tips
 Would crush the fruit of death upon my lips;
 Ah, God, that death would tread the grapes of sleep
 And wring their juice upon me as it drips.

There is no change of cheer for many days,
 But change of chimes high up in the air, that sways
 Rung by the running fingers of the wind;
 And singing sorrows heard on hidden ways.

Day smiteth day in twain, night sundereth night,
 And on mine eyes the dark sits as the light;
 Yea, Lord, thou knowest I know not, having sinned,
 If heaven be clean or unclean in thy sight.

Yea, as if earth were sprinkled over me,
 Such chafed harsh earth as chokes a sandy sea,
 Each pore doth yearn, and the dried blood thereof
 Gasps by sick fits, my heart swims heavily.

There is a feverish famine in my veins;
 Below her bosom, where a crushed grape stains
 The white and blue, there my lips caught and clove
 An hour since, and what mark of me remains?

I dare not always touch her, lest the kiss
 Leave my lips charred. Yea, Lord, a little bliss,
 Brief bitter bliss, one hath for a great sin;
 Nathless thou knowest how sweet a thing it is.

Sin, is it sin whereby men's souls are thrust
 Into the pit? yet had I a good trust
 To save my soul before it slipped therein,
 Trod under by the fire-shod feet of lust.

For if mine eyes fail and my soul takes breath,
 I look between the iron sides of death
 Into sad hell where all sweet love hath end,
 All but the pain that never finisheth.

There are the naked faces of great kings,
 The singing folk with all their lute-playings;
 There when one cometh he shall have to friend
 The grave that covets and the worm that clings.

There sit the knights that were so great of hand,
 The ladies that were queens of fair green land,
 Grown grey and black now, brought unto the dust,
 Soiled, without raiment, clad about with sand.

There is one end for all of them; they sit
 Naked and sad, they drink the dregs of it,
 Trodden as grapes in the wine-press of lust,
 Trampled and trodden by the fiery feet.

I see the marvellous mouth whereby there fell
 Cities and people whom the gods loved well,
 Yet for her sake on them the fire gat hold,
 And for their sakes on her the fire of hell.

And softer than the Egyptian lote-leaf is,
 The queen whose face was worth the world to kiss,
 Wearing at breast a suckling snake of gold;
 And large pale lips of strong Semiramis.

Curled like a tiger's that curl back to feed;
 Red only where the last kiss made them bleed;
 Her hair most thick with many a carven gem,
 Deep in the mane, great-chested, like a steed.

Yea, with red sin the faces of them shine;
 But in all these there was no sin like mine;
 No, not in all the strange great sins of them
 That made the wine-press froth and foam with wine.

For I was of Christ's choosing, I God's knight,
 No blinkard heathen stumbling for scant light;
 I can well see, for all the dusty days
 Gone past, the clean great time of goodly fight.

I smell the breathing battle sharp with blows,
 With shriek of shafts and snapping short of bows;
 The fair pure sword smites out in subtle ways,
 Sounds and long lights are shed between the rows

Of beautiful mailed men; the edged light slips,
 Most like a snake that takes short breath and dips
 Sharp from the beautifully bending head,
 With all its gracious body lithe as lips

That curl in touching you; right in this wise
 My sword doth, seeming fire in mine own eyes,
 Leaving all colors in them brown and red
 And flecked with death; then the keen breaths like sighs,

The caught-up choked dry laughters following them,
 When all the fighting face is grown a flame
 For pleasure, and the pulse that stuns the ears,
 And the heart's gladness of the goodly game.

Let me think yet a little; I do know
 These things were sweet, but sweet such years ago,
 Their savor is all turned now into tears;
 Yea, ten years since, where the blue ripples blow,

The blue curled eddies of the blowing Rhine,
 I felt the sharp wind shaking grass and vine
 Touch my blood, too, and sting me with delight
 Through all this waste and weary body of mine

That never feels clear air; right gladly then
 I rode alone, a great way off my men,
 And heard the chiming bridle smite and smite,
 And gave each rhyme thereof some rhyme again,

Till my song shifted to that iron one;
 Seeing there rode up between me and the sun
 Some certain of my foe's men, for his three White wolves across their painted coats did run.

The first red-bearded, with square cheeks—alack,
 I made my knave's blood turn his beard to black;
 The slaying of him was a joy to see:
 Perchance, too, when at night he came not back,

Some woman fell a-weeping, whom this thief
 Would beat when he had drunken; yet small grief
 Hath any for the ridding of such knaves;
 Yea, if one wept, I doubt her teen was brief.

This bitter love is sorrow in all lands,
 Draining of eyelids, wringing of drenched hands,
 Sighing of hearts and filling up of graves;
 A sign across the head of the world he stands,

As one that hath a plague-mark on his brows;
 Dust and spilt blood do track him to his house
 Down under earth; sweet smells of lip and cheek,
 Like a sweet snake's breath made more poisonous

With chewing of some perfumed deadly grass,
 Are shed all round his passage if he pass,
 And their quenched savor leaves the whole soul weak,
 Sick with keen guessing whence the perfume was.

As one who hidden in deep sedge and reeds
 Smells the rare scent made where a panther feeds,
 And tracking ever slotwise the warm smell
 Is snapped upon by the sweet mouth and bleeds,

His head far down the hot sweet throat of her—
 So one tracks love, whose breath is deadlier,
 And lo, one springé and you are fast in hell
 Fast as the gin's grip of a wayfarer.

I think now, as the heavy hours de cease
 One after one, and bitter thoughts increase
 One upon one, of all sweet finished things;
 The breaking of the battle; the long peace

Wherein we sat clothed softly, each man's hair Crowned with green leaves beneath white hoods of vair;

The sounds of sharp spears at great tourneyings,
 And noise of singing in the late sweet air.

I sang of love too, knowing nought thereof;
 "Sweeter," I said, "the little laugh of love
 Than tears out of the eyes of Magdalen,
 Or any fallen feather of the Dove.

"The broken little laugh that spoils a kiss,
 The ache of purple pulses, and the bliss
 Of blinded eyelids that expand again—
 Love draws them open with those lips of his,

"Lips that cling hard till the kissed face has grown
 Of one same fire and color with their own;
 Then ere one sleep, appeased with sacrifice,
 Where his lips wounded, there his lips atone."

I sang these things long since and knew them not;
 "Lo, here is love, or there is love, God wot,
 This man and that finds favor in his eyes,"
 I said, "but I, what guerdon have I got?

"The dust of praise that is blown everywhere
 In all men's faces with the common air;
 The bay-leaf that wants chafing to be sweet
 Before they wind it in a singer's hair."

So that one dawn I rode forth sorrowing;
 I had no hope but of some evil thing,
 And so rode slowly past the windy wheat,
 And past the vineyard and the water-spring,

Up to the Horsel. A great elder-tree
 Held back its heaps of flowers to let me see
 The ripe tall grass, and one that walked therein,
 Naked, with hair shed over to the knee.

She walked between the blossom and the grass;
 I knew the beauty of her, what she was,
 The beauty of her body and her sin,
 And in my flesh the sin of hers, alas!

Alas! for sorrow is all the end of this.
 O sad kissed mouth, how sorrowful it is!
 O breast whereat some suckling sorrow clings,
 Red with the bitter blossom of a kiss!

Ah, with blind lips I felt for you, and found
 About my neck your hands and hair enwound,
 The hands that stifle and the hair that stings,
 I felt them fasten sharply without sound.

Yea, for my sin I had great store of bliss
 Rise up, make answer for me, let thy kiss
 Seal my lips hard from speaking of my sin,
 Lest one go mad to hear how sweet it is.

Yet I waxed faint with fume of barren bowers,
 And murmuring of the heavy-headed hours;
 And let the dove's beak fret and peck within
 My lips in vain, and Love shed fruitless flowers.

So that God looked upon me when your hands
 Were hot about me; yea, God brake my bands
 To save my soul alive, and I came forth
 Like a man blind and naked in strange lands

That hears men laugh and weep; and knows not whence
 Nor wherefore, but is broken in his sense;
 Howbeit I met folk riding from the north
 Towards Rome, to purge them of their souls' offence.

And rode with them, and spake to none; the day
 Stunned me like lights upon some wizard way,
 And ate like fire mine eyes and mine eyesight;
 So rode I, hearing all these chant and pray,

And marvelled; till before us rose and fell
 White cursed hills, like outer skirts of hell
 Seen where men's eyes look through the day to night,
 Like a jagged shell's lips, harsh, untunable,

Blown in between by devils' wrangling breath;
 Nathless we won well past that hell and death,
 Down to the sweet land where all airs are good,
 Even unto Rome where God's grace tarrieth.

Then came each man and worshipped at his knees
 Who in the Lord God's likeness bears the keys
 To bind or loose, and called on Christ's shed blood,
 And so the sweet-souled father gave him ease.

But when I came I fell down at his feet,
 Saying, "Father, though the Lord's blood be right sweet,
 The spot it takes not off the panther's skin,
 Nor shall an Ethiop's stain be bleached with it.

"Lo, I have sinned and have spat out at God,
 Wherefore his hand is heavier and his rod
 More sharp because of mine exceeding sin,
 And all his raiment redder than bright blood

"Before mine eyes; yea, for my sake I wot
 The heat of hell is waxen seven times hot Through my great sin." Then spake he some sweet word,
 Giving me cheer; which thing availed me not;

Yea, scarce I wist if such indeed were said;
 For when I ceased—lo, as one newly dead
 Who hears a great cry out of hell, I heard
 The crying of his voice across my head.

"Until this dry shred staff, that hath no whit
 Of leaf nor bark, bear blossom and smell sweet,
 Seek thou not any mercy in God's sight
 For so long shalt thou be cast out from it."

Yea, what if dried-up stems wax red and green,
 Shall that thing be which is not nor has been?
 Yea, what if sapless bark was green and white,
 Shall any good fruit grow upon my sin?

Nay, though sweet fruit were plucked of a dry tree,
 And though men drew sweet waters of the sea,
 There should not grow sweet leaves on this dead stem,
 This waste wan body and shaken soul of me.

Yea, though God search it warily enough,
 There is not one sound thing in all thereof;
 Though he search all my veins through, searching them
 He shall find nothing whole therein but love.

For I came home right heavy, with small cheer,
 And lo my love, mine own soul's heart, more dear
 Than mine own soul, more beautiful than God,
 Who hath my being between the hands of her—

Fair still, but fair for no man saving me,
 As when she came out of the naked sea
 Making the foam as fire whereon she trod,
 And as the inner flower of fire was she.

Yea, she laid hold upon me, and her mouth
Clove unto mine as soul to body doth,

And, laughing, made her lips luxurious;
Her hair had smells of all the sunburnt south,

Strange spice and flower, strange savor of crushed fruit

And perfume the swart kings tread underfoot
For pleasure when their minds wax amorous,
Charred frankincense and grated sandal-root.

And I forgot fear and all weary things,
All ended prayers and perished thanksgivings,
Feeling her face with all her eager hair
Cleave to me, clinging as a fire that clings

To the body and to the raiment, burning them;
As after death I know that such-like flame
Shall cleave to me for ever; yea, what care,
Albeit I burn then, having felt the same?

Ah love, there is no better life than this;
To have known love, how bitter a thing it is,
And afterward be cast out of God's sight;
Yea, these that know not, shall they have such bliss

High up in barren heaven before his face
As we twain in the heavy-hearted place,
Remembering love and all the dead delight,
And all that time was sweet with for a space?

For till the thunder in the trumpet be,
Soul may divide from body, but not we
One from another; I hold thee with my hand,
I let mine eyes have all their will of thee,

I seal myself upon thee with my might,
Abiding always out of all men's sight
Until God loosen over sea and land
The thunder of the trumpets of the night
EXPLICIT LAUS VENERIS.

THE TRIUMPH OF TIME.

BEFORE our lives divide for ever,
While time is with us and hands are free,
(Time, swift to fasten and swift to sever
Hand from hand, as we stand by the sea)
I will say no word that a man might say
Whose whole life's love goes down in a day;
For this could never have been; and never,
Though the gods and the years relent, shall be.

Is it worth a tear, is it worth an hour,
To think of things that are well outworn?
Of fruitless husk and fugitive flower,
The dream foregone and the deed forborne?
Though joy be done with and grief be vain,
Time shall not sever us wholly in twain;
Earth is not spoilt for a single shower;
But the rain has ruined the ungrown corn.

It will grow not again, this fruit of my heart,
Smitten with sunbeams, ruined with rain.
The singing seasons divide and depart
Winter and summer depart in twain.
It will grow not again, it is ruined at root,
The bloodlike blossom, the dull red fruit;
Though the heart yet sickens, the lips yet smart,
With sullen savor of poisonous pain.

I have given no man of my fruit to eat;
 I trod the graves, I have drunken the wine.
 Had you eaten and drunken and found it sweet,
 This wild new growth of the corn and vine,
 This wine and bread without lees or leaven.
 We had grown as gods, as the gods in heaven,
 Souls fair to look upon, goodly to greet,
 One splendid spirit, your soul and mine.

In the change of years, in the coil of things,
 In the clamor and rumor of life to be
 We, drinking love as the furthest springs,
 Covered with love at a covering tree,
 We had grown as gods, as the gods above,
 Filled from the heart to the lips with love,
 Held fast in his hands, clothed warm with his wings,
 O love, my love had you loved but me!

We had stood as the sure stars stand, and moved
 As the moon moves, loving the world; and seen
 Grief collapse as a thing disproved,
 Death consume as a thing unclean,
 Twain halves of a perfect heart, made fast,
 Soul to soul while the years fell past;
 Had you loved me once, as you have not loved;
 Had the chance been with us that has not been.

I have put my days and dreams out of mind,
 Days that are over, dreams that are done.
 Though we seek life through, we shall surely find
 There is none of them clear to us now, not one.
 But clear are these things; the grass and the sand,
 Where, sure as the eyes reach, ever at hand,
 With lips wide open and face burnt blind,
 The strong sea-daisies feast on the sun.

The low downs lean to the sea; the stream,
 One loose thin pulseless tremulous vein,
 Rapid and vivid and dumb as a dream,
 Works downward, sick of the sun and the rain;
 No wind is rough with the rank rare flowers;
 The sweet sea, mother of loves and hours,
 Shudders and shines as the grey winds gleam,
 Turning her smile to a fugitive pain.

Mother of loves that are swift to fade,
 Mother of mutable winds and hours.
 A barren mother, a mother-maid,
 Cold and clean as her faint salt flowers.
 I would we twain were even as she,
 Lost in the night and the light of the sea,
 Where faint sounds falter and wan beams wade,
 Break, and are broken, and shed into showers.

The loves and hours of the life of a man,
 They are swift and sad, being born of the sea
 Hours that rejoice and regret for a span,
 Born with a man's breath, mortal as he;
 Loves that are lost ere they come to birth,
 Weeds of the wave, without fruit upon earth.
 I lose what I long for, save what I can,
 My love, my love, and no love for me!

It is not much that a man can save
 On the sands of life, in the straits of time,
 Who swims in sight of the great third wave
 That never a swimmer shall cross or climb.
 Some waif washed up with the strays and spars
 That ebb-tide shows to the shore and the stars;
 Weed from the water, grass from a grave.
 A broken blossom, a ruined rhyme,

There will no man do for your sake, I think,
 What I would have done for the least word said.
 I had wrung life dry for your lips to drink,
 Broken it up for your daily bread:
 Body for body and blood for blood,
 As the flow of the full sea risen to flood
 That yearns and trembles before it sink,
 I had given, and lain down for you, glad and dead.

Yea, hope at highest and all her fruit,
 And time at fullest and all his dower,
 I had given you surely, and life to boot,
 Were we once made one for a single hour.
 But now, you are twain, you are cloven apart,
 Flesh of his flesh, but heart of my heart;
 And deep in one is the bitter root,
 And sweet for one is the lifelong flower.

To have died if you cared I should die for you, clung
 To my life if you bade me, played my part
 As it pleased you—these were the thoughts that stung,
 The dreams that smote with a keener dart
 Than shafts of love or arrows of death;
 These were but as fire is, dust or breath,
 Or poisonous foam on the tender tongue
 Of the little snakes that eat my heart.

I wish we were dead together to-day,
 Lost sight of, hidden away out of sight,
 Clasped and clothed in the cloven clay,
 Out of the world's way, out of the light,
 Out of the ages of worldly weather,
 Forgotten of all men altogether,
 As the world's first dead, taken wholly away.
 Made one with death, filled full of the night.

How we should slumber, how we should sleep,
 Far in the dark with the dreams and the dews!
 And dreaming, grow to each other, and weep,
 Laugh low, live softly, murmur and muse;
 Yea, and it may be, struck through by the dream,
 Feel the dust quicken and quiver, and seem Alive as of old to the lips, and leap
 Spirit to spirit as lovers use.

Sick dreams and sad of a dull delight;
 For what shall it profit when men are dead
 To have dreamed, to have loved with the whole soul's might,
 To have looked for day when the day was fled?
 Let come what will, there is one thing worth,
 To have had fair love in the life upon earth:
 To have held love safe till the day grew night,
 While skies had color and lips were red.

Would I lose you now? would I take you then,
 If I lose you now that my heart has need?
 And come what may after death to men,
 What thing worth this will the dead years breed?
 Lose life, lose all; but at least I know,
 O sweet life's love, having loved you so,
 Had I reached you on earth, I should lose not again,
 In death nor life, nor in dream or deed.

Yea, I know this well: were you once sealed mine,
 Mine in the blood's beat, mine in the breath,
 Mixed into me as honey in wine,
 Not time that sayeth and gainsayeth,
 Nor all strong things had severed us then;
 Not wrath of gods, nor wisdom of men,
 Nor all things earthly, nor all divine,
 Nor joy nor sorrow, nor life nor death.

I had grown pure as the dawn and the dew,
 You had grown strong as the sun or the sea.
 But none shall triumph a whole life through:
 For death is one, and the fates are three.
 At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
 There are worse things waiting for men than death;
 Death could not sever my soul and you,
 As these have severed your soul from me.

You have chosen and clung to the chance they sent you,
 Life sweet as perfume and pure as prayer.
 But will it not one day in heaven repent you?
 Will they solace you wholly, the days that were?
 Will you lift up your eyes between sadness and bliss,
 Meet mine and see where the great love is,
 And tremble and turn and be changed? Content you;
 The gate is strait; I shall not be there.

But you, had you chosen, had you stretched hand,
 Had you seen good such a thing were done,
 I too might have stood with the souls that stand
 In the sun's sight, clothed with the light of the sun;
 But who now on earth need care how I live?
 Have the high gods anything left to give,
 Save dust and laurels and gold and sand?
 Which gifts are goodly; but I will none.

O all fair lovers about the world,
 There is none of you, none, that shall comfort me.
 My thoughts are as dead things, wrecked and whirled
 Round and round in a gulf of the sea;
 And still, through the sound and the straining stream,
 Through the coil and chafe, they gleam in a dream,
 The bright fine lips so cruelly curled,
 And strange swift eyes where the soul sits free.

Free, without pity, withheld from woe,
 Ignorant; fair as the eyes are fair.
 Would I have you change now, change at a blow,
 Startled and stricken, awake and aware?
 Yea, if I could, would I have you see
 My very love of you filling me,
 And know my soul to the quick, as I know
 The likeness and look of your throat and hair?

I shall not change you. Nay, though I might,
 Would I change my sweet one love with a word?
 I had rather your hair should change in a night,
 Clear now as the plume of a black bright bird;
 Your face fail suddenly, cease, turn grey,
 Die as a leaf that dies in a day.
 I will keep my soul in a place out of sight,
 Far off, where the pulse of it is not heard.

Far off it walks, in a bleak blown space,
 Full of the sound of the sorrow of years.
 I have woyen a veil for the weeping face,
 Whose lips have drunken the wine of tears;
 I have found a way for the failing feet,
 A place for slumber and sorrow to meet;
 There is no rumor about the place,
 Nor light, nor any that sees or hears.

I have hidden my soul out of sight, and said
 "Let none take pity upon thee, none
 Comfort thy crying: for lo, thou art dead,
 Lie still now, safe out of sight of the sun.
 Have I not built thee a grave, and wrought
 Thy grave-clothes on thee of grievous thought
 With soft spun verses and tears unshed,
 And sweet light visions of things undone?"

"I have given thee garments and balm and myrrh,
 And gold, and beautiful burial things.
 But thou, be at peace now, make no stir;
 Is not thy grave as a royal king's?
 Fret not thyself though the end were sore;
 Sleep, be patient, vex me no more.
 Sleep; what hast thou to do with her?
 The eyes that weep, with the mouth that sings?"

Where the dead red leaves of the years lie rotten,
 The cold old crimes and the deeds thrown by,
 The misconceived and the misbegotten,
 I would find a sin to do ere I die,
 Sure to dissolve and destroy me all through,
 That would set you higher in heaven, serve you
 And leave you happy, when clean forgotten,
 As a dead man out of mind, am I.

Your lithe hands draw me, your face burns through me,
 I am swift to follow you, keen to see;
 But love lacks might to redeem or undo me,
 As I have been, I know I shall surely be;
 "What should such fellows as I do?" Nay,
 My part were worse if I chose to play;
 For the worst is this after all; if they knew me,
 Not a soul upon earth would pity me.

And I play not for pity of these; but you,
 If you saw with your soul what man am I,
 You would praise me at least that my soul all through
 Clove to you, loathing the lives that lie;
 The souls and lips that are bought and sold,
 The smiles of silver and kisses of gold,
 The lapdog loves that whine as they chew,
 The little lovers that curse and cry.

There are fairer women, I hear; that may be.
 But I, that I love you and find you fair,
 Who are more than fair in my eyes if they be,
 Do the high gods know or the great gods care?
 Though the swords in my heart for one were seven,
 Would the iron hollow of doubtful heaven,
 That knows not itself whether night-time or day be,
 Reverberate words and a foolish prayer?

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
 Mother and lover of men, the sea.
 I will go down to her, I and none other,
 Close with her, kiss her and mix her with me;
 Cling to her, strive with her, hold her fast;
 O fair white mother, in days long past
 Born without sister, born without brother,
 Set free my soul as thy soul is free.

O fair green-girdled mother of mine,
 Sea, that art clothed with the sun and the rain,
 Thy sweet hard kisses are strong like wine,
 Thy large embraces are keen like pain.
 Save me and hide me with all thy waves,
 Find me one grave of thy thousand graves,
 Those pure cold populous graves of thine,
 Wrought without hand in a world without stain.

I shall sleep, and move with the moving ships,
 Change as the winds change, veer in the tide;
 My lips will feast on the foam of thy lips,
 I shall rise with thy rising, with thee subside;
 Sleep, and not know if she be, if she were,
 Filled full with life to the eyes and hair,
 As a rose is fulfilled to the roseleaf tips
 With splendid summer and perfume and pride.

This woven raiment of nights and days,
 Were it once cast off and unwound from me,
 Naked and glad would I walk in thy ways,
 Alive and aware of thy ways and thee;
 Clear of the whole world, hidden at home,
 Clothed with the green and crowned with the foam,
 A pulse of the life of thy straits and bays,
 A vein in the heart of the streams of the sea.

Fair mother, fed with the lives of men,
 Thou art subtle and cruel of heart, men say
 Thou hast taken, and shalt not render again;
 Thou art full of thy dead, and cold as they.
 But death is the worst that comes of thee;
 Thou art fed with our dead, O mother, O sea,
 But when hast thou fed on our hearts? or when,
 Having given us love, hast thou taken away?

O tender-hearted, O perfect lover,
 Thy lips are bitter, and sweet thine heart.
 The hopes that hurt and the dreams that hover,
 Shall they not vanish away and apart?
 But thou, thou art sure, thou art older than earth;
 Thou art strong for death and fruitful of birth;
 Thy depths conceal and thy gulfs discover;
 From the first thou wert; in the end thou art.

And grief shall endure not for ever, I know.
 As things that are not shall these things be;
 We shall live through seasons of sun and of snow,
 And none be grievous as this to me.
 We shall hear, as one in a trance that hears,
 The sound of time, the rhyme of the years;
 Wrecked hope and passionate pain will grow
 As tender things of a spring-tide sea.

Sea-fruit that swings in the waves that hiss,
 Drowned gold and purple and royal rings,
 And all time past, was it all for this?
 Times unforgotten, and treasures of things?
 Swift years of liking, and sweet long laughter,
 That wist not well of the years thereafter
 Till love woke, smitten at heart by a kiss,
 With lips that trembled and trailing wings?

There lived a singer in France of old,
 By the tideless dolorous midland sea.
 In a land of sand and ruin and gold
 There shone one woman, and none but she.
 And finding life for her love's sake fail,
 Being fain to see her, he bade set sail,
 Touched land, and saw her as life grew cold,
 And praised God, seeing; and so died he.

Died, praising God for his gift and grace:
 For she bowed down to him weeping, and said
 "Live;" and her tears were shed on his face
 Or ever the life in his face was shed.
 The sharp tears fell through her hair, and stung
 Once, and her close lips touched him and clung
 Once, and grew one with his lips for a space;
 And so drew back, and the man was dead.

O brother, the gods were good to you.
 Sleep, and be glad while the world endures.
 Be well content as the years wear through;
 Give thanks for life, and the loves and lures;
 Give thanks for life, O brother, and death,
 For the sweet last sound of her feet, her breath,
 For gifts she gave you, gracious and few,
 Tears and kisses, that lady of yours,

Rest and be glad of the gods; but I,
 How shall I praise them, or how take rest?
 There is not room under all the sky
 For me that know not of worst or best,
 Dream or desire of the days before,
 Sweet things or bitterness, any more.
 Love will not come to me now though I die,
 As love came close to you, breast to breast.

I shall never be friends again with roses;
 I shall loathe sweet tunes, where a note grown strong
 Relents and recoils, and climbs and closes,
 As a wave of the sea turned back by song.
 There are sounds where the soul's delight takes fire,
 Face to face with its own desire;
 A delight that rebels, a desire that reposes,
 I shall hate sweet music my whole life long.

The pulse of war and passion of wonder,
 The heavens that murmur, the sounds that shine,
 The stars that sing and the loves that thunder,
 The music burning at heart like wine,
 An armed archangel whose hands raise up
 All senses mixed up in the spirit's cup
 Till flesh and spirit are molten in sunder—
 These things are over, and no more mine.

These were a part of the playing I heard
 Once, ere my love and my heart were at strife;
 Love that sings and hath wings as a bird,
 Balm of the wound and heft of the knife,
 Fairer than earth is the sea, and sleep
 Than overwatching of eyes that weep,
 Now time has done with his one sweet word,
 The wine and leaven of lovely life.

I shall go my ways, tread out my measure,
 Fill the days of my daily breath
 With fugitive things not good to treasure,
 Do as the world doth, say as it saith;
 But if we had loved each other—O sweet,
 Had you felt, lying under the palms of your feet,
 The heart of my heart, beating harder with pleasure
 To feel you tread it to dust and death—

Ah, had I not taken my life up and given
 All that life gives and the years let go,
 The wine and honey, the balm and leaven,
 The dreams reared high and the hopes brought low?
 Come life, come death, not a word be said;
 Should I lose you living, and vex you dead?
 I never shall tell you on earth; and in heaven
 If I cry to you then, will you hear or know?

LES NOYADES.

WHATEVER a man of the sons of men
 Shall say to his heart of the lords above,
 They have shown man verily, once and again,
 Marvellous mercies and infinite love.

In the wild fifth year of the change of things,
 When France was glorious and blood-red, fair
 With dust of battle and deaths of kings,
 A queen of men, with helmeted hair;

Carrier came down to the Loire and slew,
 Till all the ways and the waves waxed red:
 Bound and drowned, slaying two by two,
 Maidens and young men, naked and wed.

They brought on a day to his judgment-place
 One rough with labor and red with fight,
 And a lady noble by name and face,
 Faultless, a maiden, wonderful, white.

She knew not, being for shame's sake blind,
 If his eyes were hot on her face hard by.
 And the judge bade strip and ship them, and bind
 Bosom to bosom to drown and die.

The white girl winced and whitened; but he Caught fire, waxed bright as a great bright flame
 Seen with thunder far out on the sea,
 Laughed hard as the glad blood went and came.

Twice his lips quailed with delight, then said,
 "I have but a word to you all, one word,
 Bear with me; surely I am but dead;"
 And all they laughed and mocked him and heard.

"Judge, when they open the judgment-roll,
 I will stand upright before God and pray:
 'Lord God, have mercy on one man's soul,
 For his mercy was great upon earth, I say.

"'Lord, if I loved thee—Lord, if I served—
 If these who darkened thy Son's fair face
 I fought with, sparing not one, nor swerved
 A hand's-breadth, Lord, in the perilous place—

"I pray thee say to this man, O Lord,
Sit thou for him at my feet on a throne.
 I will face thy wrath, though it bite as a sword,
 And my soul shall burn for his soul and atone.

"For Lord, thou knowest, O God most wise,
 How gracious on earth were his deeds toward me.
 Shall this be a small thing in thine eyes,
 That is greater in mine than the whole great sea?"

"I have loved this woman my whole life long,
 And even for love's sake when have I said
 'I love you?' when have I done you wrong,
 Living? but now I shall have you dead.

"Yea, now, do I bid you love me, love?
 Love me or loathe, we are one not twain.
 But God be praised in his heaven above
 For this my pleasure and that my pain!

"For never a man, being mean like me,
 Shall die like me till the whole world dies.
 I shall drown with her, laughing for love; and she Mix with me, touching me, lips and eyes.

"Shall she not know me and see me all through.
 Me, on whose heart as a worm she trod?
 You have given me, God requite it you,
 What man yet never was given of God."

O sweet one love, O my life's delight,
 Dear, though the days have divided us,
 Lost beyond hope, taken far out of sight,
 Not twice in the world shall the gods do thus

Had it been so hard for my love? but I,
 Though the gods gave all that a god can give,
 I had chosen rather the gift to die,
 Cease, and be glad above all that live.

For the Loire would have driven us down to the sea,
 And the sea would have pitched us from shoal to shoal;
 And I should have held you, and you held me,
 As flesh holds flesh, and the soul the soul.

Could I change you, help you to love me, sweet,
 Could I give you the love that would sweeten death,
 We should yield, go down, locked hands and feet,
 Die, drown together, and breath catch breath;

But you would have felt my soul in a kiss,
 And known that once if I loved you well;
 And I would have given my soul for this
 To burn for ever in burning hell

A LEAVE-TAKING

LET us go hence, my songs; she will not hear.
 Let us go hence together without fear;
 Keep silence now, for singing-time is over
 And over all old things and all things dear.
 She loves not you nor me as all we love her.
 Yea, though we sang as angels in her ear,
 She would not hear.

Let us rise up and part; she will not know.
 Let us go seaward as the great winds go,
 Full of blown sand and foam; what help is there?
 There is no help, for all these things are so,
 And all the world is bitter as a tear.
 And how these things are, though ye strove to show,
 She would not know.

Let us go home and hence; she will not weep,
 We gave love many dreams and days to keep,
 Flowers without scent, and fruits that would not grow,
 Saying, "If thou wilt, thrust in thy sickle and reap."
 All is reaped now; no grass is left to mow;
 And we that sowed, though all we fell on sleep,
 She would not weep.

Let us go hence and rest; she will not love.
 She shall not hear us if we sing hereof,
 Nor see love's ways, how sore they are and steep.
 Come hence, let be, lie still; it is enough.
 Love is a barren sea, bitter and deep;
 And though she saw all heaven in flower above,
 She would not love.

Let us give up, go down; she will not care.
 Though all the stars made gold of all the air,
 And the sea moving saw before it move
 One moon-flower making all the foam-flowers fair;
 Though all those waves went over us, and drove Deep down the stifling lips and drowning hair
 She would not care.

Let us go hence, go hence; she will not see.
 Sing all once more together: surely she,
 She too, remembering days and words that were,
 Will turn a little toward us, sighing; but we,
 We are hence, we are gone, as though we had not been there.
 Nay, and though all men seeing had pity on me,
 She would not see.

ITYLUS.

SWALLOW, my sister, O sister swallow,
 How can thine heart be full of the spring?
 A thousand summers are over and dead.
 What hast thou found in the spring to follow?
 What hast thou found in thine heart to sing?
 What wilt thou do when the summer is shed?

O swallow, sister, O fair swift swallow,
 Why wilt thou fly after spring to the south,
 The soft south whither thine heart is set?
 Shall not the grief of the old time follow?
 Shall not the song thereof cleave to thy mouth?
 Hast thou forgotten ere I forget?

Sister, my sister, O fleet sweet swallow,
 Thy way is long to the sun and the south;
 But I, fulfilled of my heart's desire,
 Shedding my song upon height, upon hollow,
 From tawny body and sweet small mouth
 Feed the heart of the night with fire.

I the nightingale all spring through,
 O swallow, sister, O fair swift swallow,
 All spring through till the spring be done,
 Clothed with the light of the night on the dew,
 Sing, while the hours and the wild birds follow,
 Take flight and follow and find the sun.

Sister, my sister, O soft light swallow,
 Though all things feast in the spring's guest-chamber,
 How hast thou heart to be glad there of yet?
 For where thou fliest I shall not follow,
 Till life forget and death remember,
 Till thou remember and I forget.

Swallow, my sister, O singing swallow,
 I know not how thou hast heart to sing.
 Hast thou the heart? is it all past over?
 Thy lord the summer is good to follow,
 And fair the feet of thy lover the spring:
 But what wilt thou say to the spring thy lover?

O swallow, sister, O fleeting swallow,
 My heart in me is a molten ember
 And over my head the waves have met.
 But thou wouldst tarry or I would follow,
 Could I forget or thou remember,
 Couldst thou remember and I forget.

O sweet stray sister, O shifting swallow
 The heart's division divideth us.
 Thy heart is light as a leaf of a tree;
 But mine goes forth among sea-gulfs hollow
 To the place of the slaying of Itylus,
 The feast of Daulis, the Thracian sea.

O swallow, sister, O rapid swallow,
 I pray thee sing not a little space.
 Are not the roofs and the lintels wet?
 The woven web that was plain to follow,
 The small slain body, the flower-like face,
 Can I remember if thou forget?

O sister, sister, thy first-begotten!
 The hands that cling and the feet that follow,
 The voice of the child's blood crying yet
Who hath remembered me? who hath forgotten?
 Thou hast forgotten, O summer swallow,
 But the world shall end when I forget.

ANACTORIA.

My life is bitter with thy love; thine eyes
 Blind me, thy tresses burn me, thy sharp sighs
 Divide my flesh and spirit with soft sound,
 And my blood strengthens, and my veins abound.
 I pray thee sigh not, speak not, draw not breath;
 Let life burn down, and dream it is not death.
 I would the sea had hidden us, the fire
 (Wilt thou fear that, and fear not my desire?)
 Severed the bones that bleach, the flesh that cleaves,
 And let our sifted ashes drop like leaves.

I feel thy blood against my blood: my pain
 Pains thee, and lips bruise lips, and vein stings vein.
 Let fruit be crushed on fruit, let flower on flower,
 Breast kindle breast, and either burn one hour.
 Why wilt thou follow lesser loves? are thine
 Too weak to bear these hands and lips of mine?
 I charge thee for my life's sake, O too sweet
 To crush love with thy cruel faultless feet,
 I charge thee keep thy lips from hers or his,
 Sweetest, till theirs be sweeter than my kiss.

Lest I too lure, a swallow for a dove,
 Erotion or Erinna to my love.
 I would my love could kill thee; I am satiated
 With seeing thee live, and fain would have thee dead.
 I would earth had thy body as fruit to eat,
 And no mouth but some serpent's found thee sweet.
 I would find grievous ways to have thee slain,
 Intense device, and superflux of pain;
 Vex thee with amorous agonies, and shake
 Life at thy lips, and leave it there to ache:

Strain out thy soul with pangs too soft to kill,
 Intolerable interludes, and infinite ill;
 Relapse and reluctance of the breath,
 Dumb tunes and shuddering semitones of death.
 I am weary of all thy words and soft strange ways,
 Of all love's fiery nights and all his days,
 And all the broken kisses salt as brine
 That shuddering lips make moist with waterish wine,
 And eyes the bluer for all those hidden hours
 That pleasure fills with tears and feeds from flowers,
 Fierce at the heart with fire that half comes through,
 But all the flower-like white-stained round with blue;
 The fervent underlid, and that above
 Lifted with laughter or abashed with love;
 Thine amorous girdle, full of thee and fair,
 And leavings of the lilies in thine hair.
 Yea, all sweet words of thine and all thy ways,
 And all the fruit of nights and flower of days,
 And stinging lips wherein the hot sweet brine
 That love was born of burns and foams like wine,
 And eyes insatiable of amorous hours,
 Fervent as fire and delicate as flowers,
 Colored like night at heart, but cloven through
 Like night with flame, dyed round like night with blue,
 Clothed with deep eyelids under and above —
 Yea, all thy beauty sickens me with love;
 Thy girdle empty of thee and now not fair,
 And ruinous lilies in thy languid hair.
 Ah, take no thought for Love's sake; shall this be,
 And she who loves thy lover not love thee?
 Sweet soul, sweet mouth of all that laughs and lives,
 Mine is she, very mine; and she forgives.
 For I beheld in sleep the light that is
 In her high place in Paphos, heard the kiss
 Of body and soul that mix with eager tears
 And laughter stinging through the eyes and ears;

Saw Love, as burning flame from crown to feet,
 Imperishable, upon her storied seat;
 Clear eyelids lifted toward the north and south,
 A mind of many colors and a mouth
 Of many tunes and kisses; and she bowed,
 With all her subtle face laughing aloud,
 Bowed down upon me, saying, "Who doth the wrong,
 Sappho?" but thou—thy body is the song,
 Thy mouth the music; thou art more than I,
 Though my voice die not till the whole world die;
 Though men that hear it madden; though love weep,
 Though nature change, though shame be charmed to sleep,
 Ah, wilt thou slay me lest I kiss thee dead?
 Yet the queen laughed from her sweet heart and said:
 "Even she that flies shall follow for thy sake,
 And she shall give thee gifts that would not take,
 Shall kiss that would not kiss thee" (yea, kiss me)
 "When thou wouldst not"—when I would not kiss thee!
 Ah, more to me than all men as thou art,
 Shall not my songs assuage her at the heart?
 Ah, sweet to me as life seems sweet to death,
 Why should her wrath fill thee with fearful breath?
 Nay, sweet, for is she God alone? hath she Made earth and all the centuries of the sea,
 Taught the sun ways to travel, woven most fine
 The moonbeams, shed the starbeams forth as wine,
 Bound with her myrtles, beaten with her rods,
 The young men and the maidens and the gods?
 Have we not lips to love with, eyes for tears,
 And summer and flower of women and of years?
 Stars for the foot of morning, and for noon
 Sunlight, and exaltation of the moon;
 Waters that answer waters, fields that wear
 Lilies, and languor of the Lesbian air?
 Beyond those flying feet of fluttered doves,
 Are there not other gods for other loves?

Yea, though she scourge thee, sweetest, for my sake,
 Blossom not thorns, and flowers not blood should break,
 Ah that my lips were tuneless lips, but pressed
 To the bruised blossom of thy scourged white breast!
 Ah that my mouth for Muses' milk were fed
 On the sweet blood thy sweet small wounds had bled!
 That with my tongue I felt them, and could taste
 The faint flakes from thy bosom to the waist!
 That I could drink thy veins as wine, and eat
 Thy breasts like honey! that from face to feet
 Thy body were abolished and consumed,
 And in my flesh thy very flesh entombed!
 Ah, ah, thy beauty! like a beast it bites,
 Stings like an adder, like an arrow smites.
 Ah sweet, and sweet again, and seven times sweet,
 The paces and the pauses of thy feet!
 Ah sweeter than all sleep or summer air
 The fallen fillets fragrant from thine hair!
 Yea, though their alien kisses do me wrong,
 Sweeter thy lips than mine with all their song;
 Thy shoulders whiter than a fleece of white,
 And flower-sweet fingers good to bruise or bite
 As honeycomb of the inmost honey-cells,
 With almond-shaped and rose-leaf colored shells,
 And blood like purple blossom at the tips
 Quivering; and pain made perfect in thy lips
 For my sake when I hurt thee; O that I
 Durst crush thee out of life with love, and die,
 Die of thy pain and my delight, and be
 Mixed with thy blood and molten into thee.
 Would I not plague thee dying overmuch?
 Would I not hurt thee perfectly? not touch
 Thy pores of sense with torture, and make bright
 Thine eyes with bloodlike tears and grievous light
 Strike pang after pang as note is struck from note,
 Catch the sob's middle music in thy throat.

Take thy limbs living, and new-mould with these
 A lyre of many faultless agonies?
 Feed thee with fever and famine and fine drouth,
 With perfect pangs convulse thy perfect mouth,
 Make thy life shudder in thee and burn afresh,
 And wring thy very spirit through the flesh?
 Cruel? but love makes all that love him well
 As wise as heaven and crueller than hell.
 Me hath love made more bitter toward thee
 Than death toward man; but were I made as he
 Who hath made all things to break them one by one,
 If my feet trod upon the stars and sun
 And souls of men as his have always trod,
 God knows I might be crueller than God.
 For who shall change with prayers or thanksgivings
 The mystery of the cruelty of things?
 Or say what God above all gods and years,
 With offering and blood-sacrifice of tears,
 With lamentation from strange lands, from graves
 Where the snake pastures, from scarred mouths of slaves
 From prison, and from plunging prows of ships
 Through flame-like foam of the sea's closing lips—
 With thwartings of strange signs, and wind-blown hair
 Of comets, desolating the dim air,
 When darkness is made fast with seals and bars,
 And fierce reluctance of disastrous stars,
 Eclipse, and sound of shaken hills, and wings
 Darkening, and blind inexpiable things—
 With sorrow of laboring moons, and altering light
 And travail of the planets of the night,
 And weeping of the weary Pleiads seven,
 Feeds the mute melancholy lust of heaven?
 Is not this incense bitterness, his meat
 Murder? his hidden face and iron feet
 Hath not man known, and felt them on their way
 Threaten and trample all things and every day?

Hath he not sent us hunger? who hath cursed
 Spirit and flesh with longing? filled with thirst
 Their lips who cried unto him? who bade exceed
 The fervid will, fall short the feeble deed,
 Bade sink the spirit and the flesh aspire,
 Pain animate the dust of dead desire,
 And life yield up her flower to violent fate?
 Him would I reach, him smite, him desecrate,
 Pierce the cold lips of God with human breath,
 And mix his immortality with death.
 Why hath he made us? what had all we done
 That we should live and loathe the sterile sun,
 And with the moon wax paler as she wanes,
 And pulse by pulse feel time grow through our veins?
 Thee too the years shall cover; thou shalt be
 As the rose born of one same blood with thee,
 As a song sung, as a word said, and fall
 Flower-wise, and be not any more at all,
 Nor any memory of thee anywhere;
 For never Muse has bound above thine hair
 The high Pierian flower whose graft outgrows
 All summer kinship of the mortal rose
 And color of deciduous days, nor shed
 Reflex and flush of heaven about thine head,
 Nor reddened brows made pale by floral grief
 With splendid shadow from that lordlier leaf.
 Yea, thou shalt be forgotten like spilt wine,
 Except these kisses of my lips on thine
 Brand them with immortality; but me—
 Men shall not see bright fire nor hear the sea,
 Nor mix their hearts with music, nor behold
 Cast forth of heaven with feet of awful gold
 And plumeless wings that make the bright air blind
 Lightning with thunder for a hound behind
 Hunting through fields unfurrowed and unsown—
 But in the light and laughter, in the moan

And music, and in grasp of lip and hand
 And shudder of water that makes felt on land
 The immeasurable tremor of all the sea,
 Memories shall mix and metaphors of me.
 Like me shall be the shuddering calm of night,
 When all the winds of the world for pure delight
 Close lips that quiver and fold up wings that ache;
 When nightingales are louder for love's sake,
 And leaves tremble like lute-strings or like fire;
 Like me the one star swooning with desire
 Even at the cold lips of the sleepless moon,
 As I at thine; like me the waste white noon,
 Burnt through with barren sunlight; and like me
 The land-stream and the tide-stream in the sea.
 I am sick with time as these with ebb and flow,
 And by the yearning in my veins I know
 The yearning sound of waters; and mine eyes
 Burn as that beamless fire which fills the skies
 With troubled stars and travailing things of flame;
 And in my heart the grief consuming them
 Labors, and in my veins the thirst of these,
 And all the summer travail of the trees
 And all the winter sickness; and the earth
 Filled full with deadly works of death and birth,
 Sore spent with hungry lusts of birth and death,
 Has pain like mine in her divided breath;
 Her spring of leaves is barren, and her fruit
 Ashes; her boughs are burdened, and her root
 Fibrous and gnarled with poison; underneath
 Serpents have gnawn it through with tortuous teeth
 Made sharp upon the bones of all the dead,
 And wild birds rend her branches overhead.
 These, woven as raiment for his word and thought,
 These hath God made, and me as these, and wrought
 Song, and hath lit it at my lips; and me
 Earth shall not gather though she feed on thee.

As a shed tear shalt thou be shed; but I—
 Lo, earth may labor, men live long and die,
 Years change and stars, and the high God devise
 New things, and old things wane before his eyes
 Who wields and wrecks them, being more strong than they—

But, having made me, me he shall not slay.
 Nor slay nor satiate, like those herds of his
 Who laugh and live a little, and their kiss
 Contents them, and their loves are swift and sweet,
 And sure death grasps and gains them with slow feet,
 Love they or hate they, strive or bow their knees—
 And all these end; he hath his will of these.
 Yea, but albeit he slay me, hating me—
 Albeit he hide me in the deep dear sea
 And cover me with cool wan foam, and ease
 This soul of mine as any soul of these,
 And give me water and great sweet waves, and make
 The very sea's name lordlier for my sake,
 The whole sea sweeter—albeit I die indeed
 And hide myself and sleep and no man heed,
 Of me the high God hath not all his will.
 Blossom of branches, and on each high hill
 Clear air and wind, and under in clamorous vales
 Fierce noises of the fiery nightingales,
 Buds burning in the sudden spring like fire,
 The wan washed sand and the waves' vain desire,
 Sails seen like blown white flowers at sea, and words
 That bring tears swiftest, and long notes of birds
 Violently singing till the whole world sings—
 I Sappho shall be one with all these things,
 With all high things for ever; and my face
 Seen once, my songs once heard in a strange place,
 Cleave to men's lives, and waste the days thereof
 With gladness and much sadness and long love.
 Yea, they shall say, earth's womb has borne in vain

New things, and never this best thing again;
 Borne days and men, borne fruits and wars and wine,
 Seasons and songs, but no song more like mine.
 And they shall know me as ye who have known me here,
 Last year when I loved Atthis, and this year
 When I love thee; and they shall praise me, and say
 "She hath all time as all we have our day,
 Shall she not live and have her will"—even I?
 Yea, though thou diest, I say I shall not die.
 For these shall give me of their souls, shall give Life, and the days and loves wherewith I live,
 Shall quicken me with loving, fill with breath,
 Save me and serve me, strive for me with death.
 Alas, that neither moon nor snow nor dew
 Nor all cold things can purge me wholly through,
 Assauge me nor allay me nor appease,
 Till supreme sleep shall bring me bloodless ease;
 Till time wax faint in all his periods;
 Till fate undo the bondage of the gods,
 And lay, to slake and satiate me all through,
 Lotus and Lethe on my lips like dew,
 And shed around and over and under me
 Thick darkness and the insuperable sea.

HYMN TO PROSERPINE

(AFTER THE PROCLAMATION IN ROME OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH)

Vicisti, Galilæe

I HAVE lived long enough, having seen one thing, that love hath an end;
 Goddess and maiden and queen, be near me now and befriend.
 Thou art more than the day or the morrow, the seasons
 that laugh or that weep;
 For these give joy and sorrow; but thou, Proserpina, sleep.
 Sweet is the treading of wine, and sweet the feet of the dove;
 But a goodlier gift is thine than foam of the grapes or love.
 Yea, is not even Apollo, with hair and harpstring of gold,
 A bitter God to follow, a beautiful God to behold?
 I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain
 To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.
 For the Gods we know not of, who give us our daily breath,
 We know they are cruel as love or life, and lovely as death.
 O Gods dethroned and deceased, cast forth, wiped out in a day!
 From your wrath is the world released, redeemed from your chains, men say.
 New Gods are crowned in the city, their flowers have broken your rods;
 They are merciful, clothed with pity, the young compassionate Gods.
 But for me their new device is barren, the days are bare;
 Things long past over suffice, and men forgotten that were

Time and the Gods are at strife: ye dwell in the midst thereof,
 Draining a little life from the barren breasts of love.
 I say to you, cease, take rest; yea, I say to you all, be at peace,
 Till the bitter milk of her breast and the barren bosom shall cease.
 Wilt thou yet take all, Galilean? but these thou shalt not take,
 The laurels, the palms and the pæan, the breast of the nymphs in the brake;
 Breasts more soft than a dove's, that tremble with tenderer breath;
 And all the wings of the Loves, and all the joy before death;
 All the feet of the hours that sound as a single lyre,
 Dropped and deep in the flowers, with strings that flicker like fire.
 More than these wilt thou give, things fairer than all these things?
 Nay, for a little we live, and life hath mutable wings.
 A little while and we die; shall life not thrive as it may?
 For no man under the sky lives twice, outliving his day.
 And grief is a grievous thing, and a man hath enough of his tears:
 Why should he labor, and bring fresh grief to blacken his years?
 Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath;
 We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fulness of death.
 Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;
 But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.
 Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;

For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.
 Fate is a sea without shore, and the soul is a rock that abides;
 But her ears are vexed with the roar and her face with the foam of the tides.
 O lips that the live blood faints in, the leavings of racks and rods!
 O ghastly glories of saints, dead limbs of gibbeted Gods!
 Though all men abase them before you in spirit, and all knees bend,
 I kneel not neither adore you, but standing, look to the end.
 All delicate days and pleasant, all spirits and sorrows are cast
 Far out with the foam of the present that sweeps to the surf of the past:
 Where beyond the extreme sea-wall, and between the remote sea-gates,
 Waste water washes, and tall ships founder, and deep death waits:
 Where, mighty with deepening sides, clad about with the seas as with wings,
 And impelled of invisible tides, and fulfilled of unspeakable things,
 White-eyed and poisonous finned, shark-toothed and serpentine-curved,
 Rolls, under the whitening wind of the future, the wave of the world.
 The depths stand naked in sunder behind it, the storms flee away;
 In the hollow before it the thunder is taken and snared as a prey;
 In its sides is the north-wind bound; and its salt is of all men's tears;
 With light of ruin, and sound of changes, and pulse of years:

With travail of day after day, and with trouble of hour
 upon hour;
 And bitter as blood is the spray; and the crests are as fangs that devour:
 And its vapor and storm of its steam as the sighing of spirits to be;
 And its noise as the noise in a dream; and its depth as the roots of the sea:
 And the height of its heads as the height of the utmost
 stars of the air:
 And the ends of the earth at the might thereof tremble,
 and time is made bare.
 Will ye bridle the deep sea with reins, will ye chasten the high sea with rods?
 Will ye take her to chain her with chains, who is older than all ye Gods?
 All ye as a wind shall go by, as a fire shall ye pass and be past;
 Ye are Gods, and behold ye shall die, and the waves be upon you at last.
 In the darkness of time, in the deeps of the years, in the changes of things,
 Ye shall sleep as a slain man sleeps, and the world shall forget you for kings.
 Though the feet of thine high priests tread where thy lords and our forefathers trod,
 Though these that were Gods are dead, and thou being dead
 art a God,
 Though before thee the throned Cytherian be fallen, and hidden her head,
 Yet thy kingdom shall pass, Galilean, thy dead shall go down to thee dead.
 Of the maiden thy mother, men sing as a goddess with grace clad around;
 Thou art throned where another was king; where another was queen she is crowned

Yea, once we had sight of another: but now she is queen, say these.
 Not as thine, not as thine was our mother, a blossom of flowering seas,
 Clothed round with the world's desire as with raiment, and fair as the foam,
 And fleeter than kindled fire, and a goddess, and mother of Rome.
 For thine came pale and a maiden, and sister to sorrow; but ours,
 Her deep hair heavily laden with odor and color of flowers,
 White rose of the rose-white water, a silver splendor, a flame,
 Bent down unto us that besought her, and earth grew sweet with her name.
 For time came weeping, a slave among slaves, and rejected;
 but she Came flushed from the full-flushed wave, and imperial, her foot on the sea,
 And the wonderful waters knew her, the winds and the viewless ways,
 And the roses grew rosier, and bluer the sea-blue stream of the bays.
 Ye are fallen, our lords by what token? we wist that ye should not fall.
 Ye were all so fair that are broken; and one more fair than ye all.
 But I turn to her still, having seen she shall surely abide in the end;
 Goddess and maiden and queen, be near me now and be-
 friend.
 O daughter of earth, of my mother, her crown and blossom of birth,
 I am also, I also, thy brother; I go as I came unto earth.
 In the night where thine eyes are as moons are in heaven,
 the night where thou art,

Where the silence is more than all tunes, where sleep overflows from the heart,
Where the poppies are sweet as the rose in our world, and the red rose is white,
And the wind falls faint as it blows with the fume of the flowers of the night,
And the murmur of spirits that sleep in the shadow of Gods from afar
Grows dim in thine ears and deep as the deep dim soul of a star,
In the sweet low light of thy face, under heavens untrod
by the sun,
Let my soul with their souls find place, and forget what is done and undone.
Thou art more than the Gods who number the days of our temporal breath;
For these give labor and slumber; but thou, Proserpina,
death.
Therefore now at thy feet I abide for a season in silence.
I know
I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep as they sleep; even so.
For the glass of the years is brittle wherein we gaze for a span;
A little soul for a little bears up this corpse which is man.*

So long I endure, no longer; and laugh not again, neither weep.
For there is no God found stronger than death; and death is a sleep.

ILICET

THERE is an end of joy and sorrow;
Peace all day long, all night, all morrow,
But never a time to laugh or weep.
The end is come of pleasant places,
The end of tender words and faces,
The end of all, the poppied sleep.

No place for sound within their hearing,
No room to hope, no time for fearing,
No lips to laugh, no lids for tears.
The old years have run out all their measure;
No chance of pain, no chance of pleasure,
No fragment of the broken years.

Outside of all the worlds and ages,
There where the fool is as the sage is,
There where the slayer is clean of blood,
No end, no passage, no beginning,
There where the sinner leaves off sinning,
There where the good man is not good.

There is not one thing with another,
But Evil saith to Good: My brother,
My brother, I am one with thee:
They shall not strive nor cry forever:
No man shall chose between them: never Shall this thing end and that thing be.

Wind wherein seas and stars are shaken
Shall shake them, and they shall not waken;
None that has lain down shall arise;
The stones are sealed across their places;
One shadow is shed on all their faces,
One blindness cast on all their eyes.

Sleep, is it sleep perchance that covers
 Each face, as each face were his lover's?
 Farewell: as men that sleep fare well.
 The grave's mouth laughs unto derision
 Desire and dread and dream and vision,
 Delight of heaven and sorrow of hell.

No soul shall tell nor lip shall number
 The names and tribes of you that slumber;
 No memory, no memorial.
 "Thou knowest"—who shall say thou knowest?
 There is none highest and none lowest;
 An end, an end, an end of all.

Good night, good sleep, good rest from sorrow,
 To these that shall not have good morrow;
 The gods be gentle to all these.
 Nay, if death be not, how shall they be?
 Nay, is there help in heaven? it may be
 All things and lords of things shall cease.

The stooped urn, filling, dips and flashes;
 The bronzed brims are deep in ashes;
 The pale old lips of death are fed.
 Shall this dust gather flesh hereafter?
 Shall one shed tears or fall to laughter,
 At sight of all these poor old dead?

Nay, as thou wilt; these know not of it;
 Thine eyes' strong weeping shall not profit,
 Thy laughter shall not give thee ease;
 Cry aloud, spare not, cease not crying,
 Sigh, till thou cleave thy sides with sighing,
 Thou shalt not raise up one of these.

Burnt spices flash, and burnt wine hisses,
 The breathing flame's mouth curls and kisses
 The small dried rows of frankincense;
 All round the sad red blossoms smoulder,
 Flowers colored like the fire, but colder,
 In sign of sweet things taken hence;

Yea, for their sake and in death's favor
 Things of sweet shape and of sweet savor
 We yield them, spice and flower and wine;
 Yea, costlier things than wine or spices,
 Whereof none knoweth how great the price is,
 And fruit that comes not of the vine.

From boy's pierced throat and girl's pierced bosom
 Drips, reddening round the blood-red blossoms,
 The slow delicious bright soft blood,
 Bathing the spices and the pyre,
 Bathing the flowers and fallen fire,
 Bathing the blossom by the bud.

Roses whose lips the flame had deadened
 Drink till the lapping leaves are reddened
 And warm wet inner petals weep;
 The flower whereof sick sleep gets leisure,
 Barren of balm and purple pleasure,
 Fumes with no native steam of sleep.

Why will ye weep? what do ye weeping?
 For waking folk and people sleeping,
 And sands that fill and sands that fall,
 The days rose-red, the popped hours,
 Blood, wine, and spice and fire and flowers,
 There is one end of one and all.

Shall such an one lend love or borrow?
 Shall these be sorry for thy sorrow?
 Shall these give thanks for words or breath?
 Their hate is as their loving-kindness;
 The frontlet of their brows is blindness,
 The armlet of their arms is death.

Lo, for no noise or light of thunder
 Shall these grave-clothes be rent in sunder,
 He that hath taken, shall he give?
 He hath rent them: shall he bind together?
 He hath bound them: shall he break the tether?
 He hath slain them: shall he bid them live?

A little sorrow, a little pleasure,
 Fate metes us from the dusty measure
 That holds the date of all of us;
 We are born with travail and strong crying,
 And from the birth-day to the dying
 The likeness of our life is thus.

One girds himself to serve another,
 Whose father was the dust, whose mother
 The little dead red worm therein;
 They find no fruit of things they cherish;
 The goodness of a man shall perish,
 It shall be one thing with his sin.

In deep wet ways by grey old gardens
 Fed with sharp spring the sweet fruit hardens
 They know not what fruits wane or grow;
 Red summer burns to the utmost ember;
 They know not, neither can remember,
 The old years and flowers they used to know.

Ah, for their sakes, so trapped and taken,
 For theirs, forgotten and forsaken,
 Watch, sleep not, gird thyself with prayer.
 Nay, where the heart of wrath is broken,
 Where long love ends as a thing spoken,
 How shall thy crying enter there?

Though the iron sides of the old world falter
 The likeness of them shall not alter
 For all the rumor of periods,
 The stars and seasons that come after
 The tears of latter men, the laughter
 Of the unalterable gods.

Far up above the years and nations,
 The high gods, clothed and crowned with patience.
 Endure through days of death-like date;
 They bear the witness of things hidden;
 Before their eyes all life stands chidden,
 As they before the eyes of Fate.

Not for their love shall Fate retire,
 Nor they relent for our desire,
 Nor the graves open for their call.
 The end is more than joy and anguish,
 Than lives that laugh and lives that languish,
 The popped sleep, the end of all.

HERMAPHRODITUS

I

LIFT up thy lips, turn round, look back for love,
 Blind love that comes by night and casts out rest;
 Of all things tired thy lips look weariest,
 Save the long smile that they are wearied of.
 Ah sweet, albeit no love be sweet enough,
 Choose of two loves and cleave unto the best;
 Two loves at either blossom of thy breast
 Strive until one be under and one above.
 Their breath is fire upon the amorous air,
 Fire in thine eyes and where thy lips suspire:
 And whosoever hath seen thee, being so fair,
 Two things turn all his life and blood to fire;
 A strong desire begot on great despair,
 A great despair cast out by strong desire.

II

Where between sleep and life some brief space is,
 With love like gold bound round about the head,
 Sex to sweet sex with lips and limbs is wed,
 Turning the fruitful feud of hers and his
 To the waste wedlock of a sterile kiss;
 Yet from them something like as fire is shed
 That shall not be assauged till death be dead,
 Though neither life nor sleep can find out this.
 Love made himself of flesh that perisheth
 A pleasure-house for all the loves his kin;
 But on the one side sat a man like death,
 And on the other a woman sat like sin.
 So with veiled eyes and sobs between his breath
 Love turned himself and would not enter in.

III

Love, is it love or sleep or shadow or light
 That lies between thine eyelids and thine eyes?
 Like a flower laid upon a flower it lies,
 Or like the night's dew laid upon the night.
 Love stands upon thy left hand and thy right,
 Yet by no sunset and by no moonrise
 Shall make thee man and ease a woman's sighs,
 Or make thee woman for a man's delight.
 To what strange end hath some strange god made fair
 The double blossom of two fruitless flowers?
 Hid love in all the folds of all thy hair,
 Fed thee on summers, watered thee with showers,
 Given all the gold that all the seasons wear
 To thee that art a thing of barren hours?

IV

Yea, love, I see; it is not love but fear.
 Nay, sweet, it is not fear but love, I know;
 Or wherefore should thy body's blossom blow
 So sweetly, or thine eyelids leave so clear
 Thy gracious eyes that never made a tear—
 Though for their love our tears like blood should flow,
 Though love and life and death should come and go,
 So dreadful, so desirable, so dear?
 Yea, sweet, I know; I saw in what swift wise
 Beneath the woman's and the water's kiss
 Thy moist limbs melted into Salmacis,
 And the large light turned tender in thine eyes,
 And all thy boy's breath softened into sighs;
 But Love being blind, how should he know of this?

FRAGOLETTA

O LOVE! what shall be said of thee?
 The son of grief begot by joy?
 Being sightless, wilt thou see?
 Being sexless, wilt thou be Maiden or boy?

I dreamed of strange lips yesterday
 And cheeks wherein the ambiguous blood
 Was like a rose's—yea
 A rose's when it lay
 Within the bud.

What fields have bred thee, or what groves
 Concealed thee, O mysterious flower,
 O double rose of Love's,
 With leaves that lure the doves
 From bud to bower?

I dare not kiss it, lest my lip
 Press harder than an indrawn breath,
 And all the sweet life slip
 Forth, and the sweet leaves drip,
 Bloodlike, in death.

O sole desire of my delight!
 O sole delight of my desire!
 Mine eyelids and eyesight
 Feed on thee day and night
 Like lips of fire.

Lean back thy throat of carven pearl,
 Let thy mouth murmur like the dove's;
 Say, Venus hath no girl,
 No front of female curl,
 Among her Loves.

Thy sweet low bosom, thy close hair,
 Thy strait soft flanks and slenderer feet,
 Thy virginal strange air,
 Are these not over fair
 For Love to greet?

How should he greet thee? what new name,
 Fit to move all men's hearts, could move
 Thee, deaf to love or shame,
 Love's sister, by the same
 Mother as Love?

Ah, sweet, the maiden's mouth is cold,
 Her breast-blossoms are simply red,
 Her hair mere brown or gold,
 Fold over simple fold
 Binding her head.

Thy mouth is made of fire and wine,
 Thy barren bosom takes my kiss
 And turns my soul to thine
 And turns thy lip to mine,
 And mine it is.

Thou hast a serpent in thine hair,
 In all the curls that close and cling;
 And ah, thy breast-flower!
 Ah love, thy mouth too fair
 To kiss and sting.

Cleave to me, love me, kiss mine eyes
 Sate thy lips with loving me;
 Nay, for thou shalt not rise;
 Lie still as Love that dies
 For love of thee.

Mine arms are close about thine head,
 My lips are fervent on thy face,
 And where my kiss hath fed
 Thy flower-like blood leaps red
 To the kissed place.

O bitterness of things too sweet
 O broken singing of the dove!
 Love's wings are over fleet,
 And like the panther's feet
 The feet of Love.

RONDEL

THESE many years since we began to be,
 What have the gods done with us? what with me,
 What with my love? they have shown me fates and fears,
 Harsh springs, and fountains bitterer than the sea,
 Grief a fixed star, and a joy a vane that veers,
 These many years.

With her, my love, with her have they done well?
 But who shall answer for her? who shall tell
 Sweet things or sad, such things as no man hears?
 May no tears fall, if no tears ever fell,
 From eyes more dear to me than starriest spheres
 These many years!

But if tears ever touched, for any grief,
 Those eyelids folded like a white-rose leaf,
 Deep double shells where through the eye-flower peers,
 Let them weep once more only, sweet and brief,
 Brief tears and bright, for one who gave her tears
 These many years.

SATIA TE SANGUINE

IF you loved me ever so little,
 I could bear the bonds that gall,
 Could dream the bonds were brittle;
 You do not love me at all.

O beautiful lips, O bosom
 More white than the moon's and warm,
 A sterile, a ruinous blossom
 Is blown your way in a storm.

As the lost white feverish limbs
 Of the Lesbian Sappho, adrift
 In foam where the sea-weed swims,
 Swam loose for the streams to lift.

My heart swims blind in a sea
 That stuns me; swims to and fro,
 And gathers to windward and lee
 Lamentation, and mourning, and woe.

A broken, an emptied boat,
 Sea saps it, winds blow apart,
 Sick and adrift and afloat,
 The barren waif of a heart.

Where, when the gods would be cruel,
Do they go for a torture? where
Plant thorns, set pain like a jewel?
Ah, not in the flesh, not there:

The racks of earth and the rods
Are weak as foam on the sands;
In the heart is the prey for gods,
Who crucify hearts, not hands.

Mere pangs corrode and consume,
Dead when life dies in the brain;
In the infinite spirit is room
For the pulse of an infinite pain.

I wish you were dead, my dear;
I would give you, had I to give,
Some death too bitter to fear;
It is better to die than live.

I wish you were stricken of thunder
And burnt with a bright flame through,
Consumed and cloven in sunder,
I dead at your feet like you.

If I could but know after all,
I might cease to hunger and ache,
Though your heart were ever so small
If it were not a stone or a snake.

You are crueller, you that we love,
Than hatred, hunger, or death;
You have eyes and breasts like a dove
And you kill men's hearts with a breath.

As plague in a poisonous city
Insults and exults on her dead,
To you, when pallid for pity
Comes love, and fawns to be fed.

As a tame beast writhes and wheedles,
He fawns to be fed with wiles;
You carve him a cross of needles,
And whet them sharp as your smiles.

He is patient of thorn and whip,
He is dumb under axe or dart;
You suck with a sleepy red lip
The wet red wounds in his heart.

You thrill as his pulses dwindle,
You brighten and warm as he bleeds,
With insatiable eyes that kindle
And insatiable mouth that feeds.

Your hands nailed love to the tree,
You stript him, scourged him with rods,
And drowned him deep in the sea
That hides the dead and their gods.

And for all this, die will he not;
There is no man sees him but I;
You came and went and forgot;
I hope he will some day die.

A LAMENTATION

I

Who hath known the ways of time
 Or trodden behind his feet?
 There is no such man among men.
 For chance overcomes him, or crime
 Changes; for all things sweet
 In time wax bitter again.
 Who shall give sorrow enough,
 Or who the abundance of tears?
 Mine eyes are heavy with love
 And a sword gone through mine ears,
 A sound like a sword and fire,
 For pity, for great desire;
 Who shall ensure me thereof,
 Lest I die, being full of my fears?

Who hath known the ways and the wrath
 The sleepless spirit, the root
 And blossom of evil will,
 The divine device of a god?
 Who shall behold it or hath?
 The twice-tongued prophets are mute,
 The many speakers are still;
 No foot has travelled or trod,
 No hand has meted, his path.
 Man's fate is a blood-red fruit,
 And the mighty gods have their fill
 And relax not the rein, or the rod.

Ye were mighty in heart from of old,
 Ye slew with the spear, and are slain.
 Keen after heat is the cold,

Sore after summer is rain,
 And melteth man to the bone.
 As water he weareth away,
 As a flower, as an hour in a day
 Fallen from laughter to moan.
 But my spirit is shaken with fear
 Lest an evil thing begin.

New-born, a spear for a spear,
 And one for another sin,
 Or ever our tears began,
 It was known from of old and said:
 One law for a living man,
 And another law for the dead.
 For these are fearful and sad,
 Vain, and things without breath;
 While he lives let a man be glad,
 For none hath joy of his death.

II

Who hath known the pain, the old pain of earth,
 Or all the travail of the sea,
 The many ways and waves, the birth
 Fruitless, the labor nothing worth?
 Who hath known, who knowest, O gods? not we.

There is none shall say he hath seen,
 There is none he hath known.
 Though he saith, Lo, a lord have I been,
 I have reaped and sown;
 I have seen the desire of mine eyes,
 The beginning of love,
 The season of kisses and sighs
 And the end thereof
 I have known the ways of the sea,

All the perilous ways;
 Strange winds have spoken with me,
 And the tongues of strange days.
 I have hewn the pine for ships;
 Where steeds run arow,
 I have seen from their bridled lips
 Foam blown as the snow,
 With snapping of chariot-poles
 And with straining of oars
 I have grazed in the race the goals,
 In the storm the shores;
 As a greave is cleft with an arrow
 At the joint of the knee,
 I have cleft through the sea-straits narrow
 To the heart of the sea.
 When air was smitten in sunder
 I have watched on high
 The ways of the stars and the thunder
 In the night of the sky;
 Where the dark brings forth light as a flower,
 As from lips that dissever;
 One abideth the space of an hour,
 One endureth for ever.
 Lo, what hath he seen or known
 Of the way and the wave
 Unbeholden, unsailed-on, unsown,
 From the breast to the grave?

 Or ever the stars were made, or skies,
 Grief was born, and the kinless night,
 Mother of gods without form or name.
 And light is born out of heaven and dies,
 And one day knows not another's light,
 But night is one, and her shape the same.
 But dumb the goddesses underground
 Wait, and we hear not on earth if their feet

Rise, and the night wax loud with their wings;
 Dumb, without word or shadow of sound;
 And sift in scales and winnow as wheat
 Men's souls, and sorrow of manifold things.

III

Nor less of grief than ours
 The gods wrought long ago
 To bruise men one by one;
 But with the incessant hours
 Fresh grief and greener woe
 Spring, as the sudden sun
 Year after year makes flowers;
 And these die down and grow,
 And the next year lacks none.

As these men sleep, have slept
 The old heroes in time fled,
 No dream-divided sleep;
 And holier eyes have wept
 Than ours when on her dead
 Gods have seen Thetis weep,
 With heavenly hair far-swept
 Back, heavenly hands outspread
 Round what she could not keep.

Could not one day withhold,
 One night; and like as these
 White ashes of no weight,
 Held not his urn the cold
 Ashes of Heracles!
 For all things born one gate
 Opens, no gate of gold;
 Opens; and no man sees
 Beyond the gods and fate.

BEFORE PARTING

A MONTH or twain to live on honeycomb
Is pleasant; but one tires of scented time,
Cold sweet recurrence of accepted rhyme,
And that strong purple under juice and foam
Where the wine's heart has burst;
Nor feel the latter kisses like the first.

Once yet, this poor one time; I will not pray
Even to change the bitterness of it,
The bitter taste ensuing on the sweet,
To make your tears fall where your soft hair lay
All blurred and heavy in some perfumed wise
Over my face and eyes.

And yet who knows what end the scythed wheat
Makes of its foolish poppies' mouths of red?
These were not sown, these are not harvested,
They grow a month and are cast under feet
And none has care thereof,
As none has care of a divided love.

I know each shadow of your lips by rote,
Each change of love in eyelids and eyebrows;
The fashion of fair temples tremulous
With tender blood, and color of your throat;
I know not how love is gone out of this,
Seeing that all was his.

Love's likeness there endures upon all these:
But out of these one shall not gather love.
Day hath not strength nor the night shade enough
To make love whole and fill his lips with ease,
As some bee-built cell
Feels at filled lips the heavy honey swell.

I know not how this last month leaves your hair
Less full of purple color and hid spice,
And that luxurious trouble of closed eyes
Is mixed with meaner shadow and waste care;
And love, kissed out by pleasure, seems not yet
Worth patience to regret.

IN THE ORCHARD

(PROVENÇAL BURDEN)

LEAVE go my hands, let me catch breath and see;
Let the dew-fall drench either side of me;
Clear apple-leaves are soft upon that moon
Seen sidelong like a blossom in the tree;
Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

The grass is thick and cool, it lets us lie.
Kissed upon either cheek and either eye,
I turn to thee as some green afternoon
Turns toward sunset, and is loth to die;
Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Lie closer, lean your face upon my side,
Feel where the dew fell that has hardly dried,
Hear how the blood beats that went nigh to swoon;
The pleasure lives there when the sense has died;
Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

O my fair lord, I charge you leave me this:
Is it not sweeter than a foolish kiss?
Nay take it then, my flower, my first in June,
My rose, so like a tender mouth it is:
Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Love, till dawn sunder night from day with fire,
 Dividing my delight and my desire,
 The crescent life and love the plenilune,
 Love me though dusk begin and dark retire;
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Ah, my heart fails my blood draws back; I know,
 When life runs over, life is near to go;
 And with the slain of love, love's ways are strewn,
 And with their blood, if love will have it so;
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Ah, do thy will now; slay me if thou wilt;
 There is no building now the walls are built,
 No quarrying now the corner-stone is hewn,
 No drinking now the vine's whole blood is spilt;
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Nay, slay me now; nay, for I will be slain;
 Pluck thy red pleasure from the teeth of pain,
 Break down thy vine ere yet grape-gatherers prune,
 Slay me ere day can slay desire again;
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Yea, with thy sweet lips, with thy sweet sword; yea,
 Take life and all, for I will die, I say;
 Love, I gave love, is life a better boon?
 For sweet night's sake I will not live till day;
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

Nay, I will sleep then only; nay, but go.
 Ah sweet, too sweet to me, my sweet, I know
 Love, sleep, and death go to the sweet same tune;
 Hold my hair fast, and kiss me through it so.
 Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon.

A MATCH

If love were what the rose is,
 And I were like the leaf,
 Our lives would grow together
 In sad or singing weather,
 Blown fields or flowerful closes,
 Green pleasure or grey grief;
 If love were what the rose is,
 And I were like the leaf.

If I were what the words are,
 And love were like the tune,
 With double sound and single
 Delight our lips would mingle,
 With kisses glad as birds are
 That get sweet rain at noon;
 If I were what the words are
 And love were like the tune.

If you were life, my darling,
 And I your love were death,
 We'd shine and snow together
 Ere March made sweet the weather
 With daffodil and starling
 And hours of fruitful breath;
 If you were life, my darling,
 And I your love were death.

If you were thrall to sorrow,
 And I were page to joy,
 We'd play for lives and seasons
 With loving looks and treasons
 And tears of night and morrow

And laughs of maid and boy;
If you were thrall to sorrow,
And I were page to joy.

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May,
We'd throw with leaves for hours
And draw for days with flowers,
Till day like night were shady
And night were bright like day;
If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May.

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying-feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein;
If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain.

FAUSTINE

Ave Faustina Imperatrix; morituri-te salutant

LEAN back, and get some minutes' peace;
Let your head lean
Back to the shoulder with its fleece
Of locks, Faustine.

The shapely silver shoulder stoops,
Weighed over clean
With state of splendid hair that droops
Each side, Faustine.

Let me go over your good gifts
That crown you queen;
A queen whose kingdom ebbs and shifts
Each week, Faustine.

Bright heavy brow well gathered up:
White gloss and sheen;
Carved lips that make my lips a cup
To drink, Faustine.

Wine and rank poison, milk and blood,
Being mixed therein
Since first the devil threw dice with God
For you, Faustine.

Your naked new-born soul, their stake,
Stood blind between;
God said "let him that wins her take
And keep Faustine."

But this time Satan throve, no doubt;
Long since, I ween,
God's part in you was battered out;
Long since, Faustine.

The die rang sideways as it fell,
Rang cracked and thin,
Like a man's laughter heard in hell
Far down, Faustine.

A shadow of laughter like a sigh,
Dead sorrow's kin;
So rang, thrown down, the devil's die
That won Faustine.

A suckling of his breed you were,
 One hard to wean;
 But God, who lost you, left you fair,
 We see, Faustine.

You have the face that suits a woman
 For her soul's screen—
 The sort of beauty that's called human
 In hell, Faustine.

You could do all things but be good
 Or chaste of mien;
 And that you would not if you could,
 We know, Faustine.

Even he who cast seven devils out
 Of Magdalene
 Could hardly do as much, I doubt,
 For you, Faustine.

Did Satan make you to spite God?
 Or did God mean
 To scourge with scorpions for a rod
 Our sins, Faustine?

I know what queen at first you were,
 As though I had seen
 Red gold and black imperious hair
 Twice crown Faustine.

As if your fed sarcophagus
 Spared flesh and skin,
 You come back face to face with us,
 The same Faustine.

She loved the games men played with death,
 Where death must win;
 As though the slain man's blood and breath
 Revived Faustine.

Nets caught the pike, pikes tore the net;
 Lithe limbs and lean
 From drained-out pores dripped thick red sweat
 To soothe Faustine.

She drank the steaming drift and dust
 Blown off the scene;
 Blood could not ease the bitter lust
 That galled Faustine.

All round the foul fat furrows reeked,
 Where blood sank in;
 The circus splashed and seethed and shrieked
 All round Faustine.

But these are gone now: years entomb
 The dust and din;
 Yea, even the bath's fierce reek and fume
 That slew Faustine.

Was life worth living then? and now
 Is life worth sin?
 Where are the imperial years? and how
 Are you, Faustine?

Your soul forgot her joys, forgot
 Her times of teen;
 Yea, this life likewise will you not Forget, Faustine?

For in the time we know not of
 Did fate begin
 Weaving the web of days that wove
 Your doom, Faustine.

The threads were wet with wine, and all
 Were smooth to spin;
 They wove you like a Bacchanal,
 The first Faustine.

And Bacchus cast your mates and you
 Wild grapes to glean;
 Your flower-like lips dashed with dew
 From his, Faustine.

Your drenched loose hands were stretched to hold
 The vine's wet green,
 Long ere they coined in Roman gold
 Your face, Faustine.

Then after change of soaring feather
 And winnowing fin,
 You woke in weeks of feverish weather,
 A new Faustine.

A star upon your birthday burned,
 Whose fierce serene
 Red pulseless planet never yearned
 In heaven, Faustine.

Stray breaths of Sapphic song that blew
 Through Mitylene
 Shook the fierce quivering blood in you
 By night, Faustine.

The shameless nameless loves that makes
 Hell's iron gin
 Shut on you like a trap that breaks
 The soul, Faustine.

And when your veins were void and dead,
 What ghosts unclean
 Swarmed round the straitened barren bed
 That hid Faustine?

What sterile growths of sexless root
 Or epicene?
 What flower of kisses without fruit
 Of love, Faustine?

What adders came to shed their coats?
 What coiled obscene
 Small serpents with soft stretching throats
 Caressed Faustine?

But the time came of famished hours,
 Maimed loves and mean,
 This ghastly thin-faced time of ours,
 To spoil Faustine.

You seem a thing that hinges hold,
 A love-machine
 With clockwork joints of supple gold—
 No more, Faustine.

Not Godless, for you serve one God,
 The Lampsacene,
 Who metes the gardens with his rod;
 Your lord, Faustine.

If one should love you with real love (Such things have been,
 Things your fair face knows nothing of
 It seems, Faustine);

That clear hair heavily bound back,
 The lights wherein
 Shift from dead blue to burnt-up black
 Your throat, Faustine,

Strong, heavy, throwing out the face
 And hard bright chin
 And shameful scornful lips that grace
 Their shame, Faustine,

Curled lips, long since half kissed away,
 Still sweet and keen;
 You'd give him—poison shall we say?
 Or what, Faustine?

ROCOCO

TAKE hand and part with laughter;
 Touch lips and part with tears;
 Once more and no more after,
 Whatever comes with years.
 We twain shall not remeasure
 The ways that left us twain;
 Nor crush the lees of pleasure
 From sanguine grapes of pain.

We twain once well in sunder,
 What will the mad gods do
 For hate with me, I wonder,

Or what for love with you?
 Forget them till November,
 And dream there's April yet,
 Forget that I remember,
 And dream that I forget.

Time found our tired love sleeping,
 And kissed away his breath;
 But what should we do weeping,
 Though light love sleep to death?
 We have drained his lips at leisure,
 Till there's not left to drain
 A single sob of pleasure,
 A single pulse of pain.

Dream that the lips once breathless
 Might quicken if they would;
 Say that the soul is deathless;
 Dream that the gods are good;
 Say March may wed September,
 And time divorce regret;
 But not that you remember,
 And not that I forget.

We have heard from hidden places
 What love scarce lives and hears:
 We have seen on fervent faces
 The pallor of strange tears:
 We have trod the wine-vats treasure,
 Whence ripe to steam and stain,
 Foams round the feet of pleasure
 The blood-red must of pain.

Remembrance may recover
 And time bring back to time
 The name of your first lover,

The ring of my first rhyme;
 But rose-leaves of December
 The frosts of June shall fret,
 The day that you remember,
 The day that I forgot.

The snake that hides and hisses
 In heaven we twain have known;
 The grief of cruel kisses,
 The joy whose mouth makes moan;
 The pulses pause and measure,
 Where in one furtive vein
 Throbs through the heart of pleasure
 The purpler blood of pain.

We have done with tears and treasons
 And love for treason's sake;
 Room for the swift new seasons,
 The years that burn and break,
 Dismantle and dismember
 Men's days and dreams, Juliette;
 For love may not remember,
 But time will not forget.

Life treads down love in flying,
 Time withers him at root;
 Bring all dead things and dying,
 Reaped sheaf and ruined fruit,
 Where, crushed by three days' pressure
 Our three days' love lies slain;
 And earlier leaf of pleasure,
 And latter flower of pain.

Breathe close upon the ashes,
 It may be flame will leap;
 Unclose the soft close lashes,

Lift up the lids and weep.
 Light love's extinguished ember,
 Let one tear leave it wet
 For one that you remember
 And ten that you forget.

 STAGE LOVE

WHEN the game began between them for a jest,
 He played king and she played queen to match the best;
 Laughter soft as tears, and tears that turned to laughter,
 These were things she sought for years and sorrowed after.

Pleasure with dry lips, and pain that walks by night;
 All the sting and all the stain of long delight;
 These were things she knew not of, that knew not of her,
 When she played at half a love with half a lover.

Time was chorus, gave them cues to laugh or cry;
 They would kill, befool, amuse him, let him die;
 Set him webs to weave to-day and break to-morrow,
 Till he died for good in play, and rose in sorrow.

What the years mean; how time dies and is not slain;
 How love grows and laughs and cries and wanes again;
 These were things she came to know, and take their measure,
 When the play was played out so for one man's pleasure.

A BALLAD OF BURDENS

THE burden of fair women. Vain delight,
 And love self-slain in some sweet shameful way,
 And sorrowful old age that comes by night
 As a thief comes that has no heart by day,
 And change that finds fair cheeks and leaves them grey
 And weariness that keeps awake for hire,
 And grief that says what pleasure used to say;
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of bought kisses. This is sore,
 A burden without fruit in childbearing;
 Between the nightfall and the dawn threescore,
 Threescore between the dawn and evening.
 The shuddering in thy lips, the shuddering
 In thy sad eyelids tremulous like fire,
 Makes love seem shameful and a wretched thing.
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of sweet speeches. Nay, kneel down,
 Cover thy head, and weep; for verily
 These market-men that buy thy white and brown
 In the last days shall take no thought for thee.
 In the last days like earth thy face shall be,
 Yea, like sea-marsh made thick with brine and mire,
 Sad with sick leavings of the sterile sea.
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear
 Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy bed;
 And say at night "Would God the day were here,"
 And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead."
 With weary days thou shalt be clothed and fed,
 And wear remorse of heart for thine attire,

Pain for thy girdle and sorrow upon thine head;
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of bright colors. Thou shalt see
 Gold tarnished, and the grey above the green;
 And as the thing thou seest thy face shall be,
 And no more as the thing before time seen.
 And thou shalt say of mercy "It hath been,"
 And living, watch the old lips and loves expire,
 And talking, tears shall take thy breath between.
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of sad sayings. In that day
 Thou shalt tell all thy days and hours, and tell
 Thy times and ways and words of love, and say
 How one was dear and one desirable,
 And sweet was life to hear and sweet to smell,
 But now with lights reverse the old hours retire
 And the last hour is shod with fire from hell.
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of four seasons. Rain in spring,
 White rain and wind among the tender trees;
 A summer of green sorrows gathering,
 Rank autumn in a mist of miseries,
 With sad face set towards the year, that sees
 The charred ash drop out of the dropping pyre,
 And winter wan with many maladies;
 This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of dead faces. Out of sight
 And out of love, beyond the reach of hands,
 Changed in the changing of the dark and light,
 They walk and weep about the barren lands
 Where no seed is nor any garner stands,
 Where in short breaths the doubtful days respire,

And time's turned glass lets through the sighing sands;
This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of much gladness. Life and lust
Forsake thee, and the face of thy delight;
And underfoot the heavy hour strews dust;
And overhead strange weathers burn and bite;
And where the red was, lo the bloodless white,
And where truth was, the likeness of a liar,
And where day was, the likeness of the night;
This is the end of every man's desire.

L'ENVOY

Princes, and ye whom pleasure quickeneth,
Heed this rhyme before your pleasure tire;
For life is sweet, but after life is death.
This is the end of every man's desire.

BEFORE THE MIRROR

(VERSES WRITTEN UNDER A PICTURE)

INSCRIBED TO J. A. M. WHISTLER

I

WHITE rose in red rose-garden
Is not so white,
Snowdrops that plead for pardon
And pine for fright
Because the hard East blows
Over their maiden rows
Grow not as this face grows from pale to bright.

Behind the veil, forbidden
Shut up from sight,
Love, is there sorrow hidden,
Is there delight?
Is joy thy dower of grief,
White rose of weary leaf,
Late rose whose life is brief, whose loves are light?

Soft snows that hard winds harden
Till each flake bite
Fill all the flowerless garden
Whose flowers took flight
Long since when summer ceased,
And men rose up from feast.
And warm west wind grew east, and warm day night,

II

"Come snow, come wind or thunder
High up in air,
I watch my face, and wonder
At my bright hair;
Nought else exalts or grieves
The rose at heart, that heaves
With love of her own leaves and lips that pair.

"She knows not loves that kissed her
She knows not where,
Art thou the ghost, my sister,
White sister there,
Am I the ghost, who knows?
My hand, a fallen rose,
Lies snow-white on white snows, and takes no care.

"I cannot see what pleasures
Or what pains were;

What pale new loves and treasures
 New years will bear;
 What beam will fall, what shower,
 What grief or joy for dower;
 But one thing knows the flower; the flower is fair."

III

Glad, but not flushed with gladness,
 Since joys go by;
 Sad, but not bent with sadness,
 Since sorrows die;
 Deep in the gleaming glass
 She sees all past things pass,
 And all sweet life that was lie down and die.

There glowing ghosts of flowers
 Draw down, draw nigh;
 And wings of swift spent hours
 Take flight and fly;
 She sees by formless gleams,
 She hears across cold streams,
 Dead mouths of many dreams that sing and sigh.

Face fallen and white throat lifted,
 With sleepless eye
 She sees old loves that drifted,
 She knew not why,
 Old loves and faded fears
 Float down a stream that hears
 The flowing of all men's tears beneath the sky.

EROTION.

SWEET for a little even to fear, and sweet,
 O love, to lay down fear at love's fair feet;
 Shall not some fiery memory of his breath
 Lie sweet on lips that touch the lips of death?
 Yet leave me not; yet, if thou wilt, be free;
 Love me no more, but love my love of thee.
 Love where thou wilt, and live thy life; and I,
 One thing I can, and one love cannot—die.
 Pass from me; yet thine arms, thine eyes, thine hair,
 Feed my desire and deaden my despair.
 Yet once more ere time change us, ere my cheek
 Whiten, ere hope be dumb or sorrow speak,
 Yet once more ere thou hate me, one full kiss;
 Keep other hours for others, save me this.
 Yea, and I will not (if it please thee) weep,
 Lest thou be sad; I will but sigh, and sleep.
 Sweet, does death hurt? thou canst not do me wrong:
 I shall not lack thee, as I loved thee, long.
 Hast thou not given me above all that live
 Joy, and a little sorrow shalt not give?
 What even though fairer fingers of strange girls
 Pass nestling through thy beautiful boy's curls
 As mine did, or those curled lithe lips of thine
 Meet theirs as these, all theirs come after mine;
 And though I were not, though I be not, best,
 I have loved and love thee more than all the rest.
 O love, O lover, loose or hold me fast,
 I had thee first, whoever have thee last;
 Fairer or not, what need I know, what care?
 To thy fair bud my blossom once seemed fair.
 Why am I fair at all before thee, why
 At all desired? seeing thou art fair, not I.
 I shall be glad of thee, O fairest head,

Alive, alone, without thee, with thee, dead;
 I shall remember while the light lives yet.
 And in the night-time I shall not forget.
 Though (as thou wilt) thou leave me ere life leave,
 I will not, for thy love I will not, grieve;
 Not as they use who love not more than I,
 Who love not as I love thee though I die;
 And though thy lips, once mine, be oftener prest
 To many another brow and balmier breast,
 And sweeter arms, or sweeter to thy mind,
 Lull thee or lure, more fond thou wilt not find.

IN MEMORY OF WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

BACK to the flower-town, side by side,
 The bright months bring,
 New-born, the bridegroom and the bride,
 Freedom and spring.

The sweet land laughs from sea to sea,
 Filled full of sun;
 All things come back to her, being free;
 All things but one.

In many a tender wheaten plot
 Flowers that were dead
 Live, and old suns revive; but not
 That holier head.

By this white wandering waste of sea,
 Far north; I hear
 One face shall never turn to me
 As once this year:

Shall never smile and turn and rest
 On mine as there,
 Nor one most sacred hand be prest
 Upon my hair.

I came as one whose thoughts half linger,
 Half run before;
 The youngest to the oldest singer
 That England bore.

I found him whom I shall not find
 Till all grief end,
 In holiest age our mightiest mind,
 Father and friend.

But thou, if anything endure,
 If hope there be,
 O spirit that man's life left pure,
 Man's death set free.

Not with disdain of days that were
 Look earthward now;
 Let dreams revive the reverend hair,
 The imperial brow;

Come back in sleep, for in the life
 Where thou art not
 We find none like thee. Time and strife
 And the world's lot.

Move thee no more; but love at least
 And reverent heart
 May move thee, royal and released,
 Soul, as thou art.

And thou, his Florence, to thy trust
 Receive and keep,
 Keep safe his dedicated dust,
 His sacred sleep.

So shall thy lovers, come from far,
 Mix with thy name
 As morning-star with evening-star
 His faultless fame.

BEFORE DAWN

SWEET life, if life were stronger,
 Earth clear of years that wrong her
 Then two things might live longer
 Two sweeter things than they;
 Delight, the rootless flower,
 And love, the bloomless bower;
 Delight that lives an hour,
 And love that lives a day.

From evensong to daytime,
 When April melts in Maytime,
 Love lengthens out his playtime,
 Love lessens breath by breath,
 And kiss by kiss grows older
 On listless throat or shoulder
 Turned sidewise now, turned colder
 Than life that dreams of death.

This one thing once worth giving
 Life gave, and seemed worth living;
 Sin sweet beyond forgiving
 And brief beyond regret:

To laugh and love together
 And weave with foam and feather
 And wind and words the tether
 Our memories play with yet.

Ah, one thing worth beginning,
 One thread in life worth spinning,
 Ah sweet, one sin worth sinning
 With all the whole soul's will;
 To lull you till one stilled you,
 To kiss you till one killed you,
 To feed you till one filled you,
 Sweet lips, if love could fill;

To hunt sweet Love and lose him
 Between white arms and bosom,
 Between the bud and blossom,
 Between your throat and chin;
 To say of shame—what is it?
 Of virtue—we can miss it,
 Of sin—we can but kiss it,
 And it's no longer sin:

To feel the strong soul, stricken
 Through fleshly pulses, quicken
 Beneath swift sighs that thicken,
 Soft hands and lips that smite;
 Lips that no love can tire,
 With hands that sting like fire,
 Weaving the web Desire
 To snare the bird Delight.

But love so lightly plighted,
 Our love with torch unlighted,
 Paused near us unaffrighted,
 Who found and left him free;

None, seeing us cloven in sunder,
 Will weep or laugh or wonder;
 Light love stands clear of thunder,
 And safe from winds at sea.

As, when late larks give warning,
 Of dying lights and dawning,
 Night murmurs to the morning,
 "Lie still, O love, lie still;"
 And half her dark limbs cover,
 The white limbs of her lover,
 With amorous plumes that hover
 And fervent lips that chill;

As scornful day represses
 Night's void and vain caresses,
 And from her cloudier tresses
 Unwinds the gold of his,
 With limbs from limbs dividing
 And breath by breath subsiding;
 For love has no abiding,
 But dies before the kiss.

So hath it been, so be it;
 For who shall live and flee it?
 But look that no man see it
 Or hear it unaware;
 Lest all who love and choose him
 See Love, and so refuse him;
 For all who find him lose him,
 But all have found him fair.

DOLOROS.

(NOTRE-DAME DES SEPT DOULEURS.)

COLD eyelids that hide like a jewel
 Hard eyes that grow soft for an hour:
 The heavy white limbs, and the cruel
 Red mouth like a venomous flower;
 When these are gone by with their glories,
 What shall rest of thee then, what remain,
 O mystic and sombre Dolores
 Our Lady of Pain?

Seven sorrows the priests give their Virgin;
 But thy sins, which are seventy times seven,
 Seven ages would fail thee to purge in,
 And then they would haunt thee in heaven:
 Fierce midnights and famishing morrows,
 And the loves that complete and control
 All the joys of the flesh, all the sorrows
 That wear out the soul.

O garment not golden but gilded,
 O garden where all men may dwell,
 O tower not of ivory, but builded
 By hands that reach heaven from hell;
 O mystical rose of the fire,
 O house not of gold but of gain,
 O house of unquenchable fire,
 Our Lady of Pain.

O lips full of lust and of laughter,
 Curled snakes that are fed from my breast
 Bite hard, lest remembrance come after
 And press with new lips where you pressed.

For my heart too springs up at the pressure
 Mine eyelids too moisten and burn;
 Ah, feed me and fill me with pleasure,
 Ere pain come in turn.

In yesterday's reach and to-morrow's,
 Out of sight though they lie of to-day,
 There have been and there yet shall be sorrows,
 That smite not and bite not in play.
 The life and the love thou despisest,
 These hurt us indeed, and in vain,
 O wise among women, and wisest,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Who gave thee thy wisdom? what stories
 That stung thee, what visions that smote?
 Wert thou pure and a maiden, Dolores,
 When desire took thee first by the throat?
 What bud was the shell of a blossom
 That all men may smell to and pluck?
 What milk fed thee first at what bosom?
 What sins gave thee suck?

We shift and bedeck and bedrape us,
 Thou art noble and nude and antique;
 Libitina thy mother, Priapus
 Thy father, a Tuscan and Greek,
 We play with light loves in the portal,
 And wince and relent and refrain;
 Loves die, and we know thee immortal,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Fruits fail and love dies and time ranges;
 Thou art fed with perpetual breath,
 And alive after infinite changes,
 And fresh from the kisses of death;

Of languors rekindled and rallied,
 Of barren delights and unclean,
 Things monstrous and fruitless, a pallid
 And poisonous queen.

Could you hurt me, sweet lips, though I hurt you?
 Men touch them, and change in a trice
 The lilies and languors of virtue
 For the raptures and roses of vice;
 Those lie where thy foot on the floor is,
 These crown and caress thee and chain,
 O splendid and sterile Dolores,
 Our Lady of Pain.

There are sins it may be to discover,
 There are deeds it may be to delight.
 What new work wilt thou find for thy lover?
 What new passions for daytime or night?
 What spells that they know not a word of Whose lives are as leaves overblown?
 What tortures undreamt of, unheard of,
 Unwritten, unknown?

Ah beautiful passionate body
 That never has ached with a heart!
 On thy mouth though the kisses are bloody,
 Though they sting till it shudder and smart,
 More kind than the love we adore is,
 They hurt not the heart or the brain,
 O bitter and tender Dolores,
 Our Lady of Pain.

As our kisses relax and redouble,
 From the lips and the foam and the fangs
 Shall no new sin be born for men's trouble,
 No dream of impossible pangs?

With the sweet of the sins of old ages
 Wilt thou satiate thy soul as of yore?
 Too sweet is the rind, say the sages,
 Too bitter the core.

Hast thou told all thy secrets the last time,
 And bared all thy beauties to one?
 Ah, where shall we go then for pastime,
 If the worst that can be has been done?
 But sweet as the rind was the core is;
 We are fain of thee still, we are fain,
 O sanguine and subtle Dolores,
 Our Lady of Pain.

By the hunger of change and emotion,
 By the thirst of unbearable things,
 By despair, the twin-born of devotion,
 By the pleasure that winces and stings,
 The delight that consumes the desire,
 The desire that outruns the delight,
 By the cruelty deaf as a fire
 And blind as the night,

By the ravenous teeth that have smitten
 Through the kisses that blossom and bud,
 By the lips intertwined and bitten
 Till the foam has a savor of blood,
 By the pulse as it rises and falters,
 By the hands as they slacken and strain,
 I adjure thee, respond from thine altars,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Wilt thou smile as a woman disdain
 The light fire in the veins of a boy?
 But he comes to thee sad, without feigning,
 Who has wearied of sorrow and joy;

Less careful of labor and glory
 Than the elders whose hair has uncurled;
 And young, but with fancies as hoary
 And grey as the world.

I have passed from the outermost portal
 To the shrine where a sin is a prayer;
 What care though the service be mortal?
 O our lady of Torture, what care?
 All thine the last wine that I pour is,
 The last in the chalice we drain,
 O fierce and luxurious Dolores,
 Our Lady of Pain.

All thine the new wine of desire,
 The fruit of four lips as they clung
 Till the hair and the eyelids took fire,
 The foam of a serpentine tongue,
 The froth of the serpents of pleasure,
 More salt than the foam of the sea,
 Now felt as a flame, now at leisure
 As wine shed for me.

Ah thy people, thy children, thy chosen,
 Marked cross from the womb and perverse!
 They have found out the secret to cozen
 The gods that constrain us and curse;
 They alone, they are wise, and none other;
 Give me place, even me, in their train,
 O my sister, my spouse, and my mother,
 Our Lady of Pain.

For the crown of our life as it closes
 Is darkness, the fruit thereof dust;
 No thorns go as deep as a rose's,
 And love is more cruel than lust.

Time turns the old days to derision,
 Our loves into corpses or wives;
 And marriage and death and division
 Make barren our lives.

And pale from the past we draw nigh thee
 And satiate with comfortless hours;
 And we know thee, how all men belie thee,
 And we gather the fruit of thy flowers;
 The passion that slays and recovers,
 The pangs and the kisses that rain
 On the lips and the limbs of thy lovers,
 Our Lady of Pain.

The desire of thy furious embraces
 Is more than the wisdom of years,
 On the blossom though blood lie in traces,
 Though the foliage be sodden with tears.
 For the lords in whose keeping the door is
 That opens on all who draw breath
 Gave the cypress to love, my Dolores,
 The myrtle to death.

And they laughed, changing hands in the measure,
 And they mixed and made peace after strife;
 Pain melted in tears, and was pleasure;
 Death tingled with blood, and was life.
 Like lovers they melted and tingled,
 In the dusk of thine innermost fame;
 In the darkness they murmured and mingled,
 Our Lady of Pain.

In a twilight where virtues are vices,
 In thy chapels, unknown of the sun,
 To a tune that enthralls and entices,
 They were wed, and the train were as one.

For the tune from thine altar hath sounded
 Since God bade the world's work begin,
 And the fume of thine incense abounded,
 To sweeten the sin.

Love listens, and paler than ashes,
 Through his curls as the crown on them slips,
 Lifts languid wet eyelids and lashes,
 And laughs with insatiable lips.
 Thou shalt hush him with heavy caresses,
 With music that scares the profane;
 Thou shalt darken his eyes with thy tresses,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Thou shalt blind his bright eyes though he wrestle,
 Thou shalt chain his light limbs though he strive;
 In his lips all thy serpents shall nestle,
 In his hands all thy cruelties thrive.
 In the daytime thy voice shall go through him,
 In his dreams he shall feel thee and ache;
 Thou shalt kindle by night and subdue him
 Asleep and awake.

Thou shalt touch and make redder his roses
 With juice not of fruit nor of bud;
 When the sense in the spirit reposes,
 Thou shalt quicken the soul through the blood.
 Thine, thine the one grace we implore is,
 Who would live and not languish or feign,
 O sleepless and deadly Dolores,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Dost thou dream, in a respite of slumber,
 In a lull of the fires of thy life,
 Of the days without name, without number,
 When thy will stung the world into strife,

When, a goddess, the pulse of thy passion
 Smote kings as they revelled in Rome;
 And they hailed thee re-risen, O Thalassian,
 Foam-white, from the foam?

When thy lips had such lovers to flatter,
 When the city lay red from thy rods,
 And thine hands were as arrows to scatter
 The children of change and their gods;
 When the blood of thy foemen made fervent
 A sand never moist from the main,
 As one smote them, their lord and thy servant,
 Our Lady of Pain.

On sands by the storm never shaken,
 Nor wet from the washing of tides;
 Nor by foam of the waves overtaken,
 Nor winds that the thunder bestrides;
 But red from the print of thy paces,
 Made smooth for the world and its lords,
 Ringed round with a flame of fair faces,
 And splendid with swords.

There the gladiator, pale for thy pleasure,
 Drew bitter and perilous breath;
 There torments laid hold on the treasure
 Of limbs too delicious for death;
 When thy gardens were lit with live torches;
 When the world was a steed for thy rein;
 When the nations lay prone in thy porches,
 Our Lady of Pain.

When, with flame all around him aspirant,
 Stood flushed, as a harp-player stands,
 The implacable beautiful tyrant,
 Rose-crowned, having death in his hands;

And a sound as the sound of loud water
 Smote far through the flight of the fires,
 And mixed with the lightning of slaughter
 A thunder of lyres.

Dost thou dream of what was and no more is,
 The old kingdoms of earth and the kings?
 Dost thou hunger for these things, Dolores,
 For these, in a world of new things?
 But thy bosom no fasts could emaciate,
 No hunger compel to complain
 Those lips that no bloodshed could satiate,
 Our Lady of Pain.

As of old when the world's heart was lighter,
 Through thy garments the grace of thee glows,
 The white wealth of thy body made whiter
 By the blushes of amorous blows,
 And seamed with sharp lips and fierce fingers,
 And branded by kisses that bruise;
 When all shall be gone that now lingers,
 Ah, what shall we lose?

Thou wert fair in the fearless old fashion,
 And thy limbs are as melodies yet,
 And move to the music of passion
 With lithe and lascivious regret,
 What ailed us, O gods, to desert you
 For greeds that refuse and restrain?
 Come down and redeem us from virtue,
 Our Lady of Pain.

All shrines that were Vestal are flameless;
 But the flame has not fallen from this,
 Though obscure be the god, and though nameless
 The eyes and the hair that we kiss;

Low fires that love sits by and forges
 Fresh heads for his arrows and thine;
 Hair loosened and soiled amid orgies
 With kisses and wine.

Thy skin changes country and color,
 And shrivels or swells to a snake's.
 Let it brighten and bloat and grow duller,
 We know it, the flames and the flakes,
 Red brands on it smitten and bitten,
 Round skies where a star is a stain,
 And the leaves with thy litanies written,
 Our Lady of Pain.

On thy bosom though many a kiss be,
 There are none such as knew it of old.
 Was it Alciphron once or Arisbe,
 Male ringlets or feminine gold
 That thy lips met with under the statue,
 Whence a look shot out sharp after thieves
 From the eyes of the garden god at you
 Across the fig-leaves?

Then still, through dry seasons, and moister,
 One god had a wreath to his shrine;
 The love was the pearl of his oyster,*
 And Venus rose red out of wine.
 We have all done amiss, choosing rather
 Such loves as the wise gods disdain;
 Intercede for us thou with thy father,
 Our Lady of Pain.

In spring he had crowns of his garden,
 Red corn in the heat of the year,

*"Nam te præcipuè in suis urbibus colit ora Hellespontia, cæteris ostreosior oris."—CATULL. Carm xviii.

Then hoary green olives that harden
 When the grape-blossom freezes with fear;
 And milk-budded myrtles with Venus
 And vine-leaves with Bacchus he trod;
 And ye said, "We have seen, he hath seen us,
 A visible God."

What broke off the garlands that girt you?
 What sundered you spirit and clay?
 Weak sins yet alive are as virtue
 To the strength of the sins of that day.
 For dried is the blood of thy lover,
 Ipsithilla, contracted the vein;
 Cry aloud, "Will he rise and recover,
 Our Lady of Pain?"

Cry aloud; for the old world is broken:
 Cry out; for the Phrygian is priest,
 And rears not the bountiful token
 And spreads not the fatherly feast.
 From the midmost of Ida, from shady
 Recesses that murmur at morn,
 They have brought and baptized her, Our Lady,
 A goddess new-born.

And the chaplets of old are above us,
 And the oyster-bed teems out of reach;
 Old poets outing and outlove us,
 And Catullus makes mouths at our speech.
 Who shall kiss, in thy father's own city,
 With such lips as he sang with, again?
 Intercede for us all of thy pity,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Out of Dindymus heavily laden
 Her lions draw bound and unfed

A mother, a mortal, a maiden,
 A queen over death and the dead.
 She is cold, and her habit is lowly,
 Her temple of branches and sods;
 Most fruitful and virginal, holy,
 A mother of gods.

She hath wasted with fire thine high places,
 She hath hidden and marred and made sad
 The fair limbs of the Loves, the fair faces
 Of gods that were goodly and glad.
 She slays, and her hands are not bloody;
 She moves as a moon in the wane,
 White-robed, and thy raiment is ruddy,
 Our Lady of Pain.

They shall pass and their places be taken,
 The gods and the priests that are pure.
 They shall pass, and shalt thou not be shaken.
 They shall perish, and shalt thou endure?
 Death laughs, breathing close and relentless
 In the nostrils and eyelids of lust,
 With a pinch in his fingers of scentless
 And delicate dust.

But the worm shall revive thee with kisses,
 Thou shalt change and transmute as a god
 As the rod to a serpent that hisses,
 As the serpent again to a rod.
 Thy life shall not cease though thou doff it;
 Thou shalt live until evil be slain,
 And good shall die first, said thy prophet,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Did he lie? did he laugh? does he know it,
 Now he lies out of reach, out of breath,

Thy prophet, thy preacher, thy poet,
 Sin's child by incestuous Death?
 Did he find out in fire at his waking,
 Or discern as his eyelids lost light,
 When the bands of the body were breaking
 And all came in sight?

Who has known all the evil before us,
 Or the tyrannous secrets of time?
 Though we match not the dead men that bore us
 At a song, at a kiss, at a crime—
 Though the heathen outface and outlive us,
 And our lives and our longings are twain—
 Ah, forgive us our virtues, forgive us,
 Our Lady of Pain.

Who are we that embalm and embrace thee
 With spices and savors of song?
 What is time, that his children should face thee;
 What am I, that my lips do thee wrong?
 I could hurt thee—but pain would delight thee;
 Or caress thee—but love would repel;
 And the lovers whose lips would excite thee
 Are serpents in hell.

Who now shall content thee as they did,
 Thy lovers, when temples were built
 And the hair of the sacrifice braided
 And the blood of the sacrifice spilt,
 In Lampsacus fervent with faces,
 In Aphaca red from thy reign,
 Who embraced thee with awful embraces,
 Our Lady of Pain?

Where are they, Cotytto or Venus.
 Astarte or Ashtaroth, where?

Do their hands as we touch come between us?
 Is the breath of them hot in thy hair?
 From their lips have thy lips taken fever,
 With the blood of their bodies grown red?
 Hast thou left upon earth a believer
 If these men are dead?

They were purple of raiment and golden,
 Filled full of thee, fiery with wine,
 Thy lovers, in haunts un beholden,
 In marvellous chambers of thine.
 They are fled, and their footprints escape us,
 Who appraise thee, adore, and abstain,
 O daughter of Death and Priapus,
 Our Lady of Pain.

What ails us to fear overmeasure,
 To praise thee with timorous breath,
 O mistress and mother of pleasure,
 The one thing as certain as death?
 We shall change as the things that we cherish,
 Shall fade as they faded before,
 As foam upon water shall perish,
 As sand upon shore,

We shall know what the darkness discovers,
 If the grave-pit be shallow or deep;
 And our fathers of old, and our lovers,
 We shall know if they sleep not or sleep.
 We shall see whether hell be not heaven,
 Find out whether tares be not grain,
 And the joys of thee seventy times seven,
 Our Lady of Pain.

THE GARDEN OF PROSERPINE.

HERE, where the world is quiet,
 Here, where all trouble seems
 Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
 In doubtful dreams of dreams;
 I watch the green field growing
 For reaping folk and sowing,
 For harvest time and mowing,
 A sleepy world of streams.

I am tired of tears and laughter,
 And men that laugh and weep,
 Of what may come hereafter
 For men that sow to reap:
 I am weary of days and hours,
 Blown buds of barren flowers,
 Desires and dreams and powers
 And everything but sleep.

Here life has death for neighbor,
 And far from eye or ear
 Wan waves and wet winds labor,
 Weak ships and spirits steer;
 They drive adrift, and whither
 They wot not who make thither;
 But no such winds blow hither,
 And no such things grow here.

No growth of moor or coppice,
 No heather-flower or vine,
 But bloomless buds of poppies,
 Green grapes of Proserpine,

Pale beds of blowing rushes
 Where no leaf blooms or blushes,
 Save this whereout she crushes
 For dead men deadly wine.

Pale, without name or number,
 In fruitless fields of corn,
 They bow themselves and slumber
 All night till light is born;
 And like a soul belated,
 In hell and heaven unmated,
 By cloud and mist abated
 Comes out of darkness morn.

Though one were strong as seven,
 He too with death shall dwell,
 Nor wake with wings in heaven,
 Nor weep for pains in hell;
 Though one were fair as roses,
 His beauty clouds and closes;
 And well though love reposes,
 In the end it is not well.

Pale, beyond porch and portal,
 Crowned with calm leaves, she stands
 Who gathers all things mortal
 With cold immortal hands;
 Her languid lips are sweeter
 Than love's who fears to greet her
 To men that mix and meet her
 From many times and lands.

She waits for each and other,
 She waits for all men born;
 Forgets the earth her mother,
 The life of fruits and corn;

And spring and seed and swallow
 Take wing for her and follow
 Where summer song rings hollow
 And flowers are put to scorn.

There go the loves that wither,
 The old loves with wearier wings;
 And all dead years draw thither,
 And all disastrous things;
 Dead dreams of days forsaken
 Blind buds that snows have shaken,
 Wild leaves that winds have taken,
 Red strays of ruined springs.

We are not sure of sorrow,
 And joy was never sure;
 To-day will die to-morrow;
 Time stoops to no man's lure;
 And love, grown faint and fretful
 With lips but half regretful
 Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
 Weeps that no loves endure.

From too much love of living,
 From hope and fear set free,
 We thank with brief thanksgiving
 Whatever gods may be
 That no life lives for ever;
 That dead men rise up never;
 That even the weariest river
 Winds somewhere safe to sea.

Then star nor sun shall waken,
 Nor any change of light:
 Nor sound of waters shaken
 Nor any sound or sight:

Nor wintry leaves nor vernal,
 Nor days nor things diurnal;
 Only the sleep eternal
 In an eternal night.

HESPERIA.

Out of the golden remote wild west where the sea without shore is,
 Full of the sunset, and sad, if at all, with the fulness of joy,
 As a wind sets in with the autumn that blows from the region of stories,
 Blows with a perfume of songs and of memories beloved from a boy,
 Blows from the capes of the past cversea to the bays of the present,
 Filled as with shadow of sound with the pulse of invisible feet,
 Far out to the shallows and straits of the future, by rough ways or pleasant,
 Is it thither the wind's wings beat? is it hither to me, O
 my sweet?
 For thee, in the stream of the deep tide-wind blowing in with the water,
 Thee I behold as a bird borne in with the wind from the west,
 Straight from the sunset, across white waves whence rose as a daughter
 Venus thy mother, in years when the world was a water at rest.
 Out of the distance of dreams, as a dream that abides after slumber,

Strayed from the fugitive flock of the night, when the moon overhead
 Wanes in the wan waste heights of the heaven, and stars without number
 Die without sound, and are spent like lamps that are burnt by the dead,
 Comes back to me, stays by me, lulls me with touch of forgotten caresses,
 One warm dream clad about with a fire as of life that endures;
 The delight of thy face, and the sound of thy feet, and the wind of thy tresses,
 And all of a man that regrets, and all of a maid that allures.
 But thy bosom is warm for my face and profound as a manifold flower,
 Thy silence as music, thy voice as an odor that fades in a flame;
 Not a dream, not a dream is the kiss of thy mouth, and the bountiful hour
 That makes me forget what was sin, and would make me forget were it shame.
 Thine eyes that are quiet, thine hands that are tender, thy lips that are loving,
 Comfort and cool me as dew in the dawn of a moon like a dream;
 And my heart yearns baffled and blind, moved vainly toward thee, and moving
 As the reflux seaweed moves in the languid exuberant
 stream,
 Fair as a rose is on earth, as a rose under water in prison,
 That stretches and swings to the slow passionate pulse of the sea,
 Closed up from the air and the sun, but alive, as a ghost
 re-arisen,
 Pale as the love that revives as a ghost re-arisen in me.

From the bountiful infinite west, from the happy memorial places
 Full of the stately repose and the lordly delight of the dead,
 Where the fortunate islands are lit with the light of ineffable faces,
 And the sound of a sea without wind is about them, and sunset is red,
 Come back to redeem and release me from love that recalls and represses,
 That cleaves to my flesh as a flame, till the serpent has eaten his fill;
 From the bitter delights of the dark, and the feverish, the furtive caresses
 That murder the youth in a man or ever his heart have its will.
 Thy lips cannot laugh and thine eyes cannot weep; thou are pale as a rose is,
 Paler and sweeter than leaves that cover the blush of the bud;
 And the heart of the flower is compassion, and pity the core it encloses,
 Pity, not love, that is born of the breath and decays with the blood.
 As the cross that a wild nun clasps till the edge of it bruises her bosom,
 So love wounds as we grasp it, and blackens and burns as a flame;
 I have loved overmuch in my life: when the live bud bursts with the blossom,
 Bitter as ashes or tears is the fruit, and the wine thereof shame.
 As a heart that its anguish divides is the green bud cloven asunder;
 As the blood of a man self-slain is the flush of the leaves that allure;

And the perfume as poison and wine to the brain, a delight and a wonder;
 And the thorns are too sharp for a boy; too slight for a man, to endure.
 Too soon did I love it, and lost love's rose; and I cared not for glory's:
 Only the blossoms of sleep and of pleasure were mixed in my hair.
 Was it myrtle or poppy thy garland was woven with, O my Dolores?
 Was it pallor or slumber, or blush as of blood, that I found in thee fair?
 For desire is a respite from love, and the flesh not the heart is her fuel;
 She was sweet to me once, who am fled and escaped from the rage of her reign;
 Who benold as of old time at hand as I turn, with her mouth growing cruel,
 And flushed as with wine with the blood of her lovers,
 Our Lady of Pain.
 Low down where the thicket is thicker with thorns than with leaves in the summer,
 In the brake is a gleaming of eyes and a hissing of tongues that I knew;
 And the lithe long throats of her snakes reach round her, their mouths overcome her,
 And her lips grow cool with their foam, made moist as a desert with dew.
 With the thirst and the hunger of lust though her beautiful lips be so bitter
 With the cold foul foam of the snakes they soften and redden and smile;
 And her fierce mouth sweetens, her eyes wax wide and her eyelashes glitter,
 And she laughs with a savor of blood in her face, and a savor of guile.

She laughs, and her hands reach hither, her hair blows
 hither and hisses,
 As a low-lit flame in a wind, back-blown till it shudder and leap;
 Let her lips not again lay hold on my soul, nor her poisonous kisses,
 To consume it alive and divide from thy bosom, Our Lady of Sleep.
 Ah daughter of sunset and slumber, if now it return into prison,
 Who shall redeem it anew? but we, if thou wilt, let us fly;
 Let us take to us, now that the white skies thrill with a moon unarisen,
 Swift horses of fear or of love, take flight and depart and not die.
 They are swifter than dreams, they are stronger than death;
 there is none that hath ridden,
 None that shall ride in the dim strange ways of his life
 as we ride:
 By the meadows of memory, the highlands of hope, and the shore that is hidden,
 Where life breaks loud and unseen, a sonorous invisible
 tide;
 By the sands where sorrow has trodden, the salt pools
 bitter and sterile,
 By the thundering reef and the low sea-wall and the channel of years,
 Our wild steeds press on the night, strain hard through pleasure and peril,
 Labor and listen and pant not or pause for the peril
 that nears;
 And the sound of them trampling the way cleaves night as an arrow asunder,
 And slow by the sand-hill and swift by the down with its glimpses of grass

Sudden and steady the music, as eight hoofs trample and thunder,
 Rings in the ear of the low blind wind of the night as we pass;
 Shrill shrieks in our faces the blind bland air that was mute
 as a maiden,
 Stung into storm by the speed of our passage, and deaf
 where we past;
 And our spirits too burn as we bound, thine holy but mine
 heavy-laden,
 As we burn with the fire of our flight; ah, love, shall we win at the last?

 FÉLISE.

Mais où sont les neiges d'antan.

WHAT shall be said between us here,
 Among the downs, between the trees,
 In fields that knew our feet last year,
 In sight of quiet sands and seas,
 This year, Félisé?

Who knows what word were best to say?
 For last year's leaves lie dead and red
 On this sweet day, in this green May,
 And barren corn makes bitter bread.
 What shall be said?

Here as last year the fields begin,
 A fire of flowers and glowing grass;
 The old fields we laughed and lingered in,
 Seeing each our souls in last year's glass,
 Félisé, alas!

Shall we not laugh, shall we not weep,
 Not we, though this be as it is?
 For love awake or love asleep
 Ends in a laugh, a dream, a kiss,
 A song like this.

I that have slept awake, and you
 Sleep, who last year were well awake.
 Though love do all that love can do,
 My heart will never ache or break
 For your heart's sake.

The great sea, faultless as a flower,
 Throbs, trembling under beam and breeze,
 And laughs with love of the amorous hour.
 I found you fairer once, Félice,
 Than flowers or seas.

We played at bondsman and at queen;
 But as the days change men change too;
 I find the grey sea's notes of green,
 The green sea's fervent flakes of blue,
 More fair than you.

Your beauty is not over fair
 Now in mine eyes, who am grown up wise.
 The smell of flowers in all your hair
 Allures not now; no sigh replies
 If your heart sighs.

But you sigh seldom, you sleep sound,
 You find love's new name good enough.
 Less sweet I find it than I found
 The sweetest name that ever love
 Grew weary of.

My snake with bright bland eyes, my snake
 Grown tame and glad to be caressed.
 With lips athirst for mine to slake
 Their tender fever! who had guessed
 You loved me best?

I had died for this last year, to know
 You loved me. Who shall turn on fate?
 I care not if love come or go
 Now, though your love seek mine for mate.
 It is too late.

The dust of many strange desires
 Lies deep between us; in our eyes
 Dead smoke of perishable fires
 Flickers, a fume in air and skies,
 A steam of sighs.

You loved me and you loved me not;
 A little, much, and overmuch.
 Will you forget as I forgot?
 Let all dead things lie dead; none such
 Are soft to touch.

I love you and I do not love,
 Too much, a little, not at all;
 Too much, and never yet enough.
 Birds quick to fledge and fly at call
 Are quick to fall.

And these love longer now than men,
 And larger loves than ours are these.
 No diver brings up love again
 Dropped once, my beautiful Félice,
 In such cold seas.

Gone deeper than all plummet's sound,
 Where in the dim green dayless day
 The life of such dead thing lies bound
 As the sea feeds on, wreck and stray
 And castaway.

Can I forget? yea, that can I,
 And that can all men; so will you,
 Alive, or later, when you die,
 Ah, but the love you plead was true?
 Was mine not too?

I loved you for that name of yours
 Long ere we met, and long enough.
 Now that one thing of all endures—
 The sweetest name that ever love
 Waxed weary of.

Like colors in the sea, like flowers,
 Like a cat's splendid circled eyes
 That wax and wane with love for hours,
 Green as green flame, blue-grey like skies,
 And soft like sighs—

And all these only like your name,
 And your name full of all of these.
 I say it, and it sounds the same—
 Save that I say it now at ease,
 Your name, Félice.

I said "she must be swift and white
 And subtly warm, and half perverse
 And sweet like sharp soft fruit to bite,
 And like a snake's love lithe and fierce."
 Men have guessed worse.

What was the song I made of you
 Here where the grass forgets our feet
 As afternoon forgets the dew?
 Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,
 Such fleet things sweet!

As afternoon forgets the dew,
 As time in time forgets all men,
 As our old place forgets us two,
 Who might have turned to one thing then,
 But not again.

O lips that mine have grown into
 Like April's kissing May,
 O fervent eyelids letting through
 Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
 The bluest of things grey,

If you were I and I were you,
 How could I love you, say?
 How could the roseleaf love the rue,
 The day love nightfall and her dew,
 Though night may love the day?

You loved it may be more than I;
 We know not; love is hard to seize,
 And all things are not good to try;
 And lifelong loves the worst of these
 For us, Félice.

Ah, take the season and have done,
 Love well the hour and let it go:
 Two souls may sleep and wake up one,
 Or dream they wake and find it so,
 And then—you know.

Kiss me once hard as though a flame
 Lay on my lips and made them fire;
 The same lips now, and not the same;
 What breath shall fill and re-inspire
 A dead desire?

The old song sounds hollower in mine ear
 Than thin keen sounds of dead men's speech—
 A noise one hears and would not hear;
 Too strong to die, too weak to reach
 From wave to beach.

We stand on either side the sea,
 Stretch hands, blow kisses, laugh and lean
 I toward you, you toward me;
 But what hears either save the keen
 Grey sea between?

A year divides us, love from love,
 Though you loved now, though I loved then.
 The gulf is strait, but deep enough;
 Who shall recross, who among men
 Shall cross again?

Love was a jest last year, you said,
 And what lives surely, surely dies.
 Even so; but now that love is dead,
 Shall love rekindle from wet eyes,
 From subtle sighs?

For many loves are good to see;
 Mutable loves, and loves perverse;
 But there is nothing, nor shall be,
 So sweet, so wicked, but my verse
 Can dream of worse.

For we that sing and you that love
 Know that which man may, only we.
 The rest live under us; above,
 Live the great gods in heaven, and see
 What things shall be.

So this thing is and must be so;
 For man dies, and love also dies.
 Though yet love's ghost moves to and fro
 The sea-green mirrors of your eyes,
 And laughs, and lies.

Eyes colored like a water-flower,
 And deeper than the green sea's glass;
 Eyes that remember one sweet hour—
 In vain we swore it should not pass;
 In vain, alas!

Ah my Félise, if love or sin,
 If shame or fear could hold it fast,
 Should we not hold it? Love wears thin,
 And they laugh well who laugh the last.
 Is it not past?

The gods, the gods are stronger; time
 Falls down before them, all men's knees
 Bow, all men's prayers and sorrows climb
 Like incense towards them; yea, for these Are gods, Félise.

Immortal are they, clothed with powers,
 Not to be comforted at all;
 Lords over all the fruitless hours;
 Too great to appease, too high to appal,
 Too far to call.

For none shall move the most high gods,
 Who are most sad, being cruel; none
 Shall break or take away the rods
 Wherewith they scourge us, not as one
 That smites a son.

By many a name of many a creed
 We have called upon them, since the sands
 Fell through time's hour-glass first, a seed
 Of life; and out of many lands
 Have we stretched hands.

When have they heard us? who hath known
 Their faces, climbed unto their feet,
 Felt them and found them? Laugh or groan,
 Doth heaven remurmur and repeat
 Sad sounds or sweet?

Do the stars answer? in the night
 Have ye found comfort? or by day
 Have ye seen gods? What hope, what light,
 Falls from the farthest starriest way
 On you that pray?

Are the skies wet because we weep,
 Or fair because of any mirth?
 Cry out; they are gods; perchance they sleep;
 Cry; thou shalt know what prayers are worth,
 Thou dust and earth.

O earth, thou art fair; O dust, thou art great
 O laughing lips and lips that mourn,
 Pray, till ye feel the exceeding weight
 Of God's intolerable scorn,
 Not to be borne.

Behold, there is no grief like this;
 The barren blossom of thy prayer,
 Thou shalt find out how sweet it is.
 O fools and blind, what seek ye there,
 High up in the air?

Ye must have gods, the friends of men,
 Merciful gods, compassionate,
 And these shall answer you again.
 Will ye beat always at the gate,
 Ye fools of fate?

Ye fools and blind; for this is sure,
 That all ye shall not live, but die.
 Lo, what thing have ye found endure?
 Or what thing have ye found on high
 Past the blind sky?

The ghosts of words and dusty dreams,
 Old memories, faiths infirm and dead.
 Ye fools; for which among you deems
 His prayer can alter green to red
 Or stones to bread?

Why should ye bear with hopes and fears
 Till all these things be drawn in one,
 The sound of iron-footed years,
 And all the oppression that is done
 Under the sun?

Ye might end surely, surely pass
 Out of the multitude of things,
 Under the dust, beneath the grass,
 Deep in dim death, where no thought stings,
 No record clings.

No memory more of love or hate,
 No trouble, nothing that aspires,
 No sleepless labor thwarting fate,
 And thwarted; where no travail tires,
 Where no faith fires.

All passes, nought that has been is,
 Things good and evil have one end.
 Can anything be otherwise
 Though all men swear all things would mend
 With God to friend?

Can ye beat off one wave with prayer,
 Can ye move mountains? bid the flower
 Take flight and turn to a bird in the air?
 Can ye hold fast for shine or shower
 One wingless hour?

Ah sweet, and we too, can we bring
 One sigh back, bid one smile revive?
 Can God restore one ruined thing,
 Or he who slays our souls alive
 Make dead things thrive?

Two gifts perforce he has given us yet,
 Though sad things stay and glad things fly;
 Two gifts he has given us, to forget
 All glad and sad things that go by,
 And then to die.

We know not whether death be good,
 But life at least it will not be:
 Men will stand saddening as we stood,
 Watch the same fields and skies as we
 And the same sea.

Let this be said between us here,
 One love grows green when one turns grey;
 This year knows nothing of last year:
 To-morrow has no more to say
 To yesterday.

Live and let live, as I will do,
 Love and let love, and so will I.
 But, sweet, for me no more with you:
 Not while I live, not though I die.
 Good-night, good-bye.

AN INTERLUDE.

In the greenest growth of the Maytime,
 I rode where the woods were wet,
 Between the dawn and the daytime;
 The spring was glad that we met.

There was something the season wanted,
 Though the ways and the woods smelt sweet;
 The breath at your lips that panted,
 The pulse of the grass at your feet.

You came, and the sun came after,
 And the green grew golden above;
 And the flag-flowers lightened with laughter,
 And the meadow sweet shook with love.

Your feet in the full-grown grasses
 Moved soft as a weak wind blows;
 You passed me as April passes,
 With face made out of a rose.

By the stream where the stems were slender,
 Your bright foot paused at the sedge;
 It might be to watch the tender
 Light leaves in the springtime hedge.

On boughs that the sweet month blanches,
 With flowery frost of May:
 It might be a bird in the branches,
 It might be a thorn in the way.

I waited to watch you linger
 With foot drawn back from the dew,
 Till a sunbeam straight like a finger
 Struck sharp through the leaves at you.

And a bird overhead sang Follow,
 And a bird to the right sang Here;
 And the arch of the leaves was hollow,
 And the meaning of May was clear.

I saw where the sun's hand pointed,
 I knew what the bird's note said;
 By the dawn and the dewfall anointed,
 You were queen by the gold on your head.

As the glimpse of a burnt-out ember
 Recalls a regret of the sun,
 I remember, forget, and remember
 What Love saw done and undone.

I remember the way we parted,
 The day and the way we met;
 You hoped we were both broken-hearted,
 And knew we should both forget.

And May with her world in flower
 Seemed still to murmur and smile
 As you murmured and smiled for an hour;
 I saw you turn at the stile.

A hand like a white wood-blossom
 You lifted, and waved, and passed,
 With head hung down to the bosom,
 And pale, as it seemed, at last.

And the best and the worst of this is
 That neither is most to blame
 If you've forgotten my kisses
 And I've forgotten your name.

SAPPHICS.

ALL the night sleep came not upon my eyelids,
 Shed not dew, nor shook nor unclosed a feather,
 Yet with lips shut close and with eyes of iron
 Stood and beheld me.

Then to me so lying awake a vision
 Came without sleep over the seas and touched me,
 Softly touched mine eyelids and lips; and I too,
 Full of the vision,

Saw the white implacable Aphrodite,
 Saw the hair unbound, and the feet unsandalled
 Shine as fire of sunset on western waters;
 Saw the reluctant

Feet, the straining plumes of the doves that drew her,
 Looking always, looking with necks reverted,
 Back to Lesbos, back to the hills where under Shone Mitylene;

Heard the flying feet of the Loves behind her
 Make a sudden thunder upon the waters,
 As the thunder flung from the strong unclosing
 Wings of a great wind.

So the goddess fled from her place, with awful
 Sound of feet and thunder of wings around her;
 While behind a clamour of singing women
 Severed the twilight.

Ah the singing, ah the delight, the passion!
 All the Loves wept, listening; sick with anguish,
 Stood the crowned nine Muses about Apollo;
 Fear was upon them,

While the tenth sang wonderful things they knew not.
 Ah the tenth, the Lesbian! the nine were silent,
 None endured the sound of her song for weeping;
 Laurel by laurel,

Faded all their crowns; but about her forehead,
 Round her woven tresses and ashen temples
 White as dead snow, paler than grass in summer,
 Ravaged with kisses,

Shone a light of fire as a crown for ever.
 Yea, almost the implacable Aphrodite
 Paused, and almost wept; such a song was that song,
 Yea, by her name too

Called her, saying, "Turn to me, O my Sappho;"
 Yet she turned her face from the Loves, she saw not Tears or laughter darken immortal eyelids,
 Heard not about her

Fearful fitful wings of the doves departing,
 Saw not how the bosom of Aphrodite
 Shook with weeping, saw not her shaken raiment,
 Saw not her hands wrung;

Saw the Lesbians kissing across their smitten
 Lutes with lips more sweet than the sound of lute-string,
 Mouth to mouth and hand upon hand, her chosen,
 Fairer than all men;

Only saw the beautiful lips and fingers,
 Full of songs and kisses and little whispers,
 Full of music; only beheld among them
 Soar, as a bird soars

Newly fledged, her visible song, a marvel,
 Made of perfect sound and exceeding passion,
 Sweetly shapen, terrible, full of thunders,
 Clothed with the wind's wings.

Then rejoiced she, laughing with love, and scattered
 Roses, awful roses of holy blossom;
 Then the Loves thronged sadly with hidden faces
 Round Aphrodite,

Then the Muses, stricken at heart, were silent;
 Yea, the gods waxed pale; such a song was that song.
 All reluctant, all with a fresh repulsion,
 Fled from before her.

All withdrew long since, and the land was barren,
 Full of fruitless women and music only.
 Now perchance, when winds are assuaged at sunset,
 Lulled at the dewfall,

By the grey sea-side, unassuaged, unheard of,
 Unbeloved, unseen in the ebb of twilight,
 Ghosts of outcast women return lamenting,
 Purged not in Lethe,

Clothed about with flame and with tears, and singing
 Songs that move the heart of the shaken heaven,
 Songs that break the heart of the earth with pity,
 Hearing, to hear them.

MADONNA MIA.

UNDER green apple boughs
 That never a storm will rouse,
 My lady hath her house
 Between two bowers;
 In either of the twain
 Red roses full of rain;
 She hath for bondwomen
 All kind of flowers.

She hath no handmaid fair
 To draw her curled gold hair
 Through rings of gold that bear
 Her whole hair's weight;
 She hath no maids to stand
 Gold-clothed on either hand;
 In all the great green land
 None is so great.

She hath no more to wear
 But one white hood of vair
 Drawn over eyes and hair,
 Wrought with strange gold,
 Made for some great queen's head,
 Some fair great queen since dead;
 And one strait gown of red
 Against the cold.

Beneath her eyelids deep
 Love lying seems asleep,
 Love, swift to wake, to weep,
 To laugh to gaze;
 Her breasts are like white birds,
 And all her gracious words
 As water-grass to herds
 In the June-days.

To her all dews that fall
 And rains are musical;
 Her flowers are fed from all,
 Her joys from these;
 In the deep-feather firs
 Their gift of joy is hers,
 In the least breath that stirs
 Across the trees.

She grows with greenest leaves,
 Ripens with reddest sheaves,
 Forgets, remembers, grieves,
 And is not sad;
 The quiet lands and skies
 Leave light upon her eyes;
 None knows her, weak or wise,
 Or tired or glad.

None knows, none understands,
 What flowers are like her hands;
 Though you should search all lands
 Wherein time grows,
 What snows are like her feet,
 Though his eyes burn with heat
 Through gazing on my sweet,
 Yet no man knows

Only this thing is said;
 That white and gold and red,
 God's three chief words, man's bread
 And oil and wine,
 Were given her for dowers,
 And kingdom of all hours,
 And grace of goodly flowers
 And various wine.

This is my lady's praise:
 God after many days
 Wrought her in unknown ways,
 In sunset lands;
 This was my lady's birth;
 God gave her might and mirth
 And laid his whole sweet earth
 Between her hands.

Under deep apple-boughs
 My lady hath her house;
 She wears upon her brows
 The flower thereof;
 All saying but what God saith
 To her is as vain breath;
 She is more strong than death,
 Being strong as love.

TO WALT WHITMAN IN AMERICA

SEND but a song oversea for us.
 Heart of their hearts who are free,
 Heart of their singer, to be for us
 More than our singing can be;
 Ours, in the tempest at error,
 With no light but the twilight of terror;
 Send us a song oversea!

Sweet-smelling of pine-leaves and grasses,
 And blown as a tree through and through
 With the winds of the keen mountain-passes,
 And tender as sun-smitten dew;
 Sharp-tongued as the winter that shakes
 The wastes of your limitless lakes,
 Wide-eyed as the sea-line's blue.

O strong-winged soul with prophetic
 Lips hot with the bloodbeats of song
 With tremor of heartstrings magnetic,
 With thoughts as thunders in throng,
 With consonant ardors of chords
 That pierce men's souls as with swords
 And hale them hearing along,

Make us too music, to be with us
 As a word from a world's heart warm,
 To sail the dark as a sea with us,
 Full-sailed, outsinging the storm,
 A song to put fire in our ears
 Whose burning shall burn up tears,
 Whose sign bid battle reform;

A note in the ranks of a clarion,
 A word in the wind of cheer,
 To consume as with lightning the carrion
 That makes time foul for us here;
 In the air that our dead things infest
 A blast of the breath of the west,
 Till east way as west way is clear.

Out of the sun beyond sunset,
 From the evening whence morning shall be,
 With the rollers in measureless onset,
 With the van of the storming sea,
 With the world-wide wind, with the breath
 That breaks ships driven upon death,
 With the passion of all things free,

With the sea-steeds footless and frantic,
 White myriads for death to bestride
 In the charge of the ruining Atlantic
 Where deaths by regiments ride,
 With clouds and clamors of waters,
 With a long note shriller than slaughter's
 On the furrowless fields world-wide,

With terror, with ardor and wonder,
 With the soul of the season that wakes
 When the weight of a whole year's thunder
 In the tidestream of autumn breaks,
 Let the flight of the wide-winged word
 Come over, come in and be heard,
 Take form and fire for our sakes.

For a continent bloodless with travail
 Here toils and brawls as it can,
 And the web of it who shall unravel
 Of all that peer on the plan;

Would fain grow men, but they grow not,
 And fain be free, but they know not
 One name for freedom and man?

One name, not twain for division;
 One thing, not twain, from the birth;
 Spirit and substance and vision,
 Worth more than worship is worth;
 Unbeheld, unadored, undivined,
 The cause, the centre, the mind,
 The secret and sense of the earth.

Here as a weakling in irons,
 Here as a weanling in bands
 As a prey that the stake-net environs,
 Our life that we looked for stands;
 And the man-child naked and dear,
 Democracy, turns on us here
 Eyes trembling with tremulous hands.

It sees not what season shall bring to it
 Sweet fruit of its bitter desire;
 Few voices it hears yet sings to it,
 Few pulses of hearts reaspire;
 Foresees not time, nor forehears
 The noises of imminent years,
 Earthquake, and thunder, and fire;

When crowned and weaponed and curbless
 It shall walk without helm or shield
 The bare burnt furrows and herbless
 Of wars last flame-stricken field,
 Till godlike, equal with time,
 It stand in the sun sublime,
 In the godhead of man revealed.

Round your people and over them
 Light like raiment is drawn,
 Close as a garment to cover them
 Wrought not of mail nor of lawn:
 Here, with hope hardly to wear,
 Naked nations and bare
 Swim, sink, strike out for the dawn.

Chains are here, and a prison,
 Kings, and subjects and shame:
 If the God upon you be arisen.
 How should our songs be the same?
 How in confusion of change,
 How shall we sing, in a strange
 Land songs praising his name?

God is buried and dead to us
 Even the spirit of earth.
 Freedom: so have they said to us,
 Some with mocking and mirth,
 Some with heartbreak and tears:
 And a God without eyes, without ears
 Who shall sing of him dead in the birth?

The earth god Freedom, the lonely
 Face lightening, the footprint unshod.
 Not as one man crucified only
 Nor scoured with but one life's rod:
 The soul that is substance or nations,
 Reincarnate with fresh generations;
 The great god Man, which is God.

But in weariest of years and obscurest
 Doth it live not at heart of all things
 The one God and one spirit, a purest
 Life, fed from unstanachable springs:

Within love; within hatred it is,
 And its seed in the stripe as the kiss,
 And in slaves is the germ, and in kings.

Freedom we call it, for holier
 Name of the soul's there is none;
 Surelier it labors, if slower,
 Than the metres of star or of sun
 Slower than life unto breath
 Surelier than time unto death,
 It moves till its labor be done.

Till the motion be done and the measure
 Circling through season and clime.
 Slumber and sorrow and pleasure,
 Vision of virtue and crime;
 Till consummate with conquering eyes,
 A soul disembodied, it rise
 From the body transfigured of time.

Till it rise and remain and take station
 With the stars of the world that rejoice;
 Till the voice of its heart's exultation
 Be as theirs an invariable voice
 By no discord of evil estranged,
 By no pause by no breach in it changed
 By no clash in the chord of its choice.

It is one with the world's generations,
 With the spirit the star and the sod:
 With the kingless and king-stricken nation,
 With the cross, and the chain, and the rod
 The most high, the most secret, most lonely,
 The earth-soul Freedom, that only
 Lives, and that only is God.

CHIEF HUNTSMAN'S SONG

FROM "ATALANTA IN CALYDON"

MAIDEN, and mistress of the months and stars
 Now folded in the flowerless fields of heaven,
 Goddess whom all gods love with threefold heart,
 Being treble in thy divided deity,
 A light for dead men and dark hours, a foot
 Swift on the hills as morning, and a hand
 To all things fierce and fleet that roar and range
 Mortal, with gentler shafts than snow or sleep;
 Hear now and help and lift no violent hand,
 But favorable and fair as thine eye's beam
 Hidden and shown in heaven; for I all night
 Amid the king's hounds and the hunting men
 Have wrought and worshipped toward thee: nor shall man
 See goodlier hounds or deadlier edge of spears;
 But for the end, that lies unreached at yet
 Between the hands and on the knees of gods.
 O fair-faced sun killing the stars and dews
 And dreams and desolation of the night!
 Rise up, shine, stretch thine hand out, with thy bow
 Touch the most dimmest height of trembling heaven,
 And burn and break the dark about thy ways,
 Shot through and through with arrows; let thine hair
 Lighten as flame above that flameless shell
 Which was the moon, and thine eyes fill the world,
 And thy lips kindle with swift beams; let earth
 Laugh, and the long sea fiery from thy feet
 Through all the roar and ripple of streaming springs
 And foam in reddening flakes and flying flowers
 Shaken from hands and blown from lips of nymphs
 Whose hair or breast divides the wandering wave
 With salt close tresses cleaving lock to lock,

All gold, or shuddering and unfurrowed snow;
 And all the winds about thee with their wings,
 And fountain-heads of all the watered world;
 Each horn of Achelous, and the green
 Euenus, wedded with the straitening sea.
 For in fair time thou comest; come also thou,
 Twin-born with him, and virgin, Artemis,
 And give our spears their spoil, the wild boar's hide.
 Sent in thine anger against us for sin done
 And bloodless altars without wine or fire.
 Him now consume thou; for thy sacrifice
 With sanguine-shining steam divides the dawn,
 And one, the maiden rose of all thy maids,
 Arcadian Atalanta, snowy-souled,
 Fair as the snow and footed as the wind
 From Ladon and well-wooded Mænalus
 Over the firm hills and the fleeting sea
 Hast thou drawn hither, and many an armèd king,
 Heroes, the crown of men, like gods in fight.
 Moreover out of all the Ætolian land,
 From the full-flowered, Lelantian pasturage
 To what of fruitful field the son of Zeus
 Won from the roaring river and laboring sea
 When the wild god shrank in his horn and fled
 And foamed and lessened through his wrathful fords,
 Leaving clear lands that steamed with sudden sun,
 These virgins with the lightening of the day
 Bring thee fresh wreaths and their own sweeter hair,
 Luxurious locks and flower-like mixed with flowers,
 Clean offering, and chaste hymns; but me the time
 Divides from these things; whom do thou not less
 Help and give honor, and to mine hounds good speed.
 And edge to spears, and luck to each man's hand.

CHORUS

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,
 The mother of months in meadow or plain
 Fills the shadows and windy places
 With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;
 And the brown bright nightingale amorous
 Is half assuaged for Itylus,
 For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,
 The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,
 Maiden most perfect, lady of light,
 With a noise of winds and many rivers,
 With a clamor of waters, and with might;
 Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,
 Over the splendor and speed of thy feet;
 For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,
 Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,
 Fold our hands round her knees, and cling?
 O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,
 Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!
 For the stars and the winds are unto her
 As raiment, as songs of the harp-player;
 For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,
 And the southwest-wind and the west-wind sing.

For winter's rains and ruins are over,
 And all the season of snows and sins;
 The days dividing lover and lover,
 The light that loses, the night that wins;
 And time remembered is grief forgotten,

And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
 And in green underwood and cover
 Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes,
 Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot,
 The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes
 From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
 And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
 And the oat is heard above the lyre,
 And the hoofèd heel of a satyr crushes
 The chestnut-husk at the chestnut-root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night,
 Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
 Follows with dancing and fills with delight
 The Mænad and the Bassarid;
 And soft as lips that laugh and hide
 The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
 And screen from seeing and leave in sight
 The god pursuing, the maiden hid

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair
 Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes;
 The wild vine slipping down leaves bare
 Her bright breast shortening into sighs;
 The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,
 But the berried ivy catches and cleaves
 To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare
 The wolf that follows, the fawn that flies.

CHORUS

(From "Atalanta in Calydon")

Before the beginning of years,
 There came to the making of man
 Time, with a gift of tears;
 Grief, with a glass that ran;
 Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
 Summer, with flowers that fell;
 Remembrance fallen from heaven,
 And madness risen from hell;
 Strength without hands to smite;
 Love that endures for a breath;
 Night, the shadow of light,
 And life, the shadow of death.
 And the high gods took in hand
 Fire, and the falling of tears,
 And a measure of sliding sand
 From under the feet of the years;
 And froth and drift of the sea;
 And dust of the laboring earth;
 And bodies of things to be
 In the houses of death and of birth;
 And wrought with weeping and laughter,
 And fashioned with loathing and love,
 With life before and after
 And death beneath and above,
 For a day and a night and a morrow,
 That his strength might endure for a span
 With travail and heavy sorrow,
 The holy spirit of man.

From the winds of the north and the south
 They gathered as unto strife;

They breathed upon his mouth,
 They filled his body with life;
 Eyesight and speech they wrought
 For the veils of the soul therein,
 A time for labor and thought,
 A time to serve and to sin;
 They gave him light in his ways,
 And love, and a space for delight,
 And beauty and length of days,
 And night, and sleep in the night.
 His speech is a burning fire;
 With his lips he travaileth;
 In his heart is a blind desire,
 In his eyes foreknowledge of death;
 He weaves, and is clothed with derision;
 Sows, and he shall not reap;
 His life is a watch or a vision
 Between a sleep and a sleep.

CHORUS

(From "Atalanta in Calydon")

We have seen thee, O Love, thou art fair; thou art goodly,
 O Love;
 Thy wings make light in the air as the wings of a dove.
 Thy feet are as winds that divide the stream of the sea;
 Earth is thy covering to hide thee, the garment of thee.
 Thou art swift and subtle and blind as a flame of fire;
 Before thee the laughter, behind thee the tears of desire;
 And twain go forth beside thee, a man with a maid;
 Her eyes are the eyes of a bride whom delight makes afraid;
 As the breath in the buds that stir is her bridal wreath:
 But Fate is the name of her; and his name is Death.

For an evil blossom was born
 Of sea-foam and the frothing of blood,
 Blood-red and bitter of fruit,
 And the seed of it laughter and tears,
And the leaves of it madness and scorn.
 A bitter flower from the bud,
 Sprung of the sea without root,
 Sprung without graft from the years.

The weft of the world was untorn
 That is woven of the day on the night,
 The hair of the hours was not white
 Nor the raiment of time over-worn,
 When a wonder, a world's delight,
 A perilous goddess was born;
 And the waves of the sea as she came
 Clove, and the foam at her feet,
 Fawning, rejoiced to bring forth
 A freshly blossom, a flame
 Filling the heavens with heat
 To the cold white ends of the north.
 And in the air the clamorous birds,
 And men upon earth that hear
 Sweet articulate words
 Sweetly divided apart,
 And in shallow channel and mere
 The rapid and footless herds,
 Rejoiced, being foolish of heart.
 For all they said upon earth,
 She is fair, she is white like a dove,
 And the life of the world in her breath
 Breathes, and is born at her birth;
 For they knew thee for mother of love,
 And knew thee not mother of death.

What hadst thou to do being born,
 Mother, when winds were at ease,
 As a flower of the springtime of corn,
 A flower of the foam of the seas?
 For bitter thou wast from thy birth.
 Aphrodite, a mother of strife;
 For before thee some rest was on earth,
 A little respite from tears,
 A little pleasure of life;
 For life was not then as thou art,
 But as one that waxeth in years
 Sweet-spoken, a fruitful wife;
 Earth had no thorn, and desire
 No sting, neither death any dart;
 What hadst thou to do among these,
 Thou, clothed with a burning fire,
 Thou, girt with sorrow of heart,
 Thou, sprung of the seed of the seas
 As an ear from a seed of corn,
 As a brand plucked forth of a pyre,
 As a ray shed forth of the morn,
 For division of soul and disease,
 For a dart and a sting and a thorn?
 What ailed thee then to be born?
 Was there not evil enough,
 Mother, and anguish on earth
 Born with a man at his birth,
 Wastes underfoot, and above
 Storm out of heaven, and dearth
 Shaken down from the shining thereof
 Wrecks from afar overseas
 And perils of shallow and firth,
 And tears that spring and increase
 In the barren places of mirth,
 That thou, having wings as a dove,
 Being girt with desire for a girth,

That thou must come after these.
That thou must lay on him love?

Thou shouldst not so have been born:
But death should have risen with thee,
Mother, and visible fear,
Grief, and the wringing of hands,
And noise of many that mourn;
The smitten bosom, the knee
Bowed, and in each man's ear
A cry as of perishing lands,
A moan as of people in prison,
A tumult of infinite griefs;
And thunder of storm on the sands,
And wailing of wives on the shore;
And under thee newly arisen,
Loud shoals and shipwrecking reefs,
Fierce air and violent light:
Sail rent and sundering oar,
Darkness and noises of night;
Clashing of streams in the sea,
Wave against wave as a sword,
Clamor of currents, and foam;
Rains making ruin on earth,
Winds that wax ravenous and roam
As wolves in a wolfish horde;
Fruit, growing faint in the tree,
And blind things dead in their birth;
Famine, and blighting of corn,
When thy time was come to be born.

All these we know of; but thee
Who shall discern or declare?
In the uttermost ends of the sea
The light of thine eyelids and hair,
The light of thy bosom as fire

Between the wheel of the sun
And the flying flames of the air?
Wilt thou turn thee not yet nor have pity,
But abide with despair and desire
And the crying of armies undone,
Lamentation of one with another,
And breaking of city by city;
The dividing of friend against friend,
The severing of brother and brother;
Wilt thou utterly bring to an end?
Have mercy, mother!

For against all men from of old
Thou hast set thine hand as a curse,
And cast out gods from their places.
These things are spoken of thee.
Strong kings and goodly with gold
Thou hast found out arrows to pierce,
And made their kingdoms and races
As dust and surf of the sea.
All these, overburdened with woes
And with length of their days waxen weak,
Thou slewest; and sentest moreover
Upon Tyro an evil thing.
Rent hair and a fetter and blows
Making bloody the flower of the cheek,
Though she lay by a god as a lover,
Though fair, and the seed of a king.
For of old, being full of thy fire,
She endured not longer to wear
On her bosom a saffron vest,
On her shoulder an ashwood quiver;
Being mixed and made one through desire.
With Enipeus and all her hair
Made moist with his mouth, and her breast
Filled full of the foam of the river.

CHORUS

(From "Erechtheus")

Out of the north wind grief came forth,
 And the shining of a sword out of the sea.
 Yea, of old the first-blown blast blew the prelude of this last,
 The blast of his trumpet upon Rhodope.
 Out of the north skies full of his cloud,
 With the clamor of his storms as of a crowd
 At the wheels of a great king crying aloud,
 At the axle of a strong king's car
 That has girded on the girdle of war—
 With hands that lightened the skies in sunder
 And feet whose fall was followed of thunder,
 A God, a great God strange of name,
 With horse-yoke fleeter-hoofed than flame,
 To the mountain bed of a maiden came,
 Oreithyia, the bride mismated,
 Wofully wed in a snow-strewn bed
 With a bridegroom that kisses the bride's mouth dead;
 Without garland, without glory, without song,
 As a fawn by night on the hills belated,
 Given over for a spoil unto the strong.
 From lips how pale so keen a wail
 At the grasp of a God's hand on her she gave,
 When his breath that darkens air made a havoc of her hair
 It rang from the mountain even to the wave;
 Rang with a cry, Woe's me, woe is me!
 From the darkness upon Hæmus to the sea:
 And with hands that clung to her new lord's knee,
 As a virgin overborne with shame,
 She besought him by her spouseless fame,
 By the blameless breasts of a maid unmarried,
 And locks unmaidenly rent and harried,

And all her flower of body, born
 To match the maidenhood of morn,
 With the might of the wind's wrath wrenched and torn.
 Vain, all vain as a dead man's vision,
 Falling by night in his old friends' sight,
 To be scattered with slumber and slain ere light;
 Such a breath of such a bridegroom in that hour
 Of her prayers made mock, of her fears derision,
 And a ravage of her youth as of a flower.
 With a leap of his limbs as a lion's, a cry from his lips as of thunder,
 In a storm of amorous godhead filled with fire,
 From the height of the heaven that was rent with the roar of his coming in sunder,
 Sprang the strong God on the spoil of his desire.
 And the pines of the hills were as green reeds shattered,
 And their branches as buds of the soft spring scattered,
 And the west wind and east, and the sound of the south,
 Fell dumb at the blast of the north wind's mouth,
 At the cry of his coming out of heaven.
 And the wild beasts quailed in the rifts and hollows
 Where hound nor clarion of huntsman follows,
 And the depths of the sea were aghast, and whitened,
 And the crowns of their waves were as flame that lightened,
 And the heart of the floods thereof was riven.
 But she knew not him coming for terror, she felt not her wrong that he wrought her,
 When her locks as leaves were shed before his breath,
 And she heard not for terror his prayer, though the cry was a God's that besought her,
 Blown from lips that strew the world-wide seas with death.
 For the heart was molten within her to hear,
 And her knees beneath her were loosened for fear,
 And her blood fast bound as a frost-bound water,
 And the soft new bloom of the green earth's daughter,
 Wind-wasted as blossom of a tree;

As the wild God rapt her from earth's breast lifted,
 On the strength of the stream of his dark breath drifted,
 From the bosom of earth as a bride from the mother,
 With storm for bridesman and wreck for brother,
 As a cloud that he sheds upon the sea.

Of this hoary-headed woe
 Song made memory long ago;
 Now a younger grief to mourn
 Needs a new song younger born.
 Who shall teach our tongues to reach
 What strange height of saddest speech,
 For the new bride's sake that is given to be
 A stay to fetter the foot of the sea,
 Lest it quite spurn down and trample the town,
 Ere the violets be dead that were plucked for its crown.
 Or its olive-leaf whiten and wither?
 Who shall say of the wind's way
 That he journeyed yesterday,
 Or the track of the storm that shall sound to-morrow,
 If the new be more than the grey-grown sorrow?
 For the wind of the green first season was keen,
 And the blast shall be sharper that blew between
 That the breath of the sea blows hither.

THE INTERPRETERS

I

DAYS dawn on us that make amends for many Sometimes,
 When heaven and earth seem sweeter even than any Man's rhymes.

Light had not all been quenched in France, or quelled
 In Greece,
 Had Homer sung not, or had Hugo held
 His peace.

Had Sappho's self not left her word thus long
 For token,
 The sea round Lesbos yet in waves of song
 Had spoken.

II

And yet these days of subtler air and finer Delight,
 When lovelier looks the darkness, and diviner
 The light—

The gift they give of all these golden hours,
 Whose urn
 Pours forth reverberate rays or shadowing showers
 In turn—

Clouds, beams, and winds that make the live day's track
 Seem living—
 What were they did no spirit give them back
 Thanksgiving?

III

Dead air, dead fire, dead shapes and shadows, telling
 Time nought;
 Man gives them sense and soul by song, and dwelling
 In thought.

In human thought their being endures, their power
Abides:
Else were their life a thing that each light hour
Derides.

The years live, work, sigh, smile, and die, with all
They cherish;
The soul endures, though dreams that fed it fall
And perish.

IV

In human thought have all things habitation;
Our days
Laugh, lower, and lighten past, and find no station
That stays.

But thought and faith are mightier things than time
Can wrong,
Made splendid once with speech, or made sublime
By song.

Remembrance, though the tide of change that rolls
Wax hoary,
Gives earth and heaven, for song's sake and the soul's,
Their glory.

 THE WINDS

O WEARY fa' the east wind,
And weary fa' the west:
And gin I were under the wan waves wide
I wot weel wad I rest.

O weary fa' the north wind,
And weary fa' the south:
The sea went ower my good lord's head
Or ever he kissed my mouth.

Weary fa' the windward rocks,
And weary fa' the lee:
They might hae sunken sevenscore ships,
And let my love's gang free.

And weary fa' ye, mariners a',
And weary fa' the sea:
It might hae taken an hundred men,
And let my ae love be.

 A LYKE-WAKE SONG

FAIR face, full of pride,
Sit ye down by a dead man's side.

Ye sang songs a' the day:
Sit down at night in the red worm's way.

Proud ye were a' day long:
Ye'll be but lean at evensong.

Ye had gowd kells on your hair:
Nae man kens what ye were.

Ye set scorn by the silken stuff:
Now the grave is clean enough.

Ye set scorn by the rubis ring:
Now the worm is a saft sweet thing.

Fine gold and blithe fair face,
Ye are come to a grimly place.

Gold hair and glad grey een,
Nae man kens if ye have been.

A WATCH IN THE NIGHT

WATCHMAN, what of the night?—
Storm and thunder and rain,
Lights that waver and wane,
Leaving the watchfires unlit.
Only the balefires are bright,
And the flash of the lamps now and then
From a palace where spoilers sit,
Trampling the children of men.

Prophet, what of the night?—
I stand by the verge of the sea,
Banished, uncomforted, free,
Hearing the noise of the waves
And sudden flashes that smite
Some man's tyrannous head,
Thundering, heard among graves
That hide the hosts of his dead.

Mourners, what of the night?—
All night through without sleep

We weep, and we weep, and we weep.
Who shall give us our sons?
Beaks of raven and kite,
Mouths of wolf and of hound,
Give us them back whom the guns
Shot for your dead on the ground.

Dead men, what of the night?—
Cannon and scaffold and sword,
Horror of gibbet and cord,
Mowed us as sheaves for the grave,
Mowed us down for the right.
We do not grudge or repent.
Freely to freedom we gave
Pledges, till life should be spent.

Statesman, what of the night?—
The night will last me my time.
The gold on a crown or a crime
Looks well enough yet by the lamps.
Have we not fingers to write,
Lips to swear at a need?
Then, when danger decamps,
Bury the word with the deed.

Warrior, what of the night?—
Whether it be not or be
Night, is as one thing to me.
I for one, at the least,
Ask not of dews if they blight,

Ask not of flames if they slay,
Ask not of prince or of priest
How long ere we put them away

Master, what of the night?—
Child, night is not at all
Anywhere, fallen or to fall,
Save in our star-stricken eyes.
Forth of our eyes it takes flight,
Look we but once nor before
Nor behind us, but straight on the skies
Night is not then any more.

8

Exile, what of the night?—
The tides and the hours run out,
The seasons of death and of doubt,
The night-watches bitter and sore.
In the quicksands leftward and right
My feet sink down under me;
But I know the scents of the shore
And the broad blown breaths of the sea.

Captives, what of the night?—
It rains outside overhead
Always, a rain that is red,
And our faces are soiled with the rain.
Here in the seasons' despite
Day-time and night-time are one,
Till the curse of the kings and the chain
Break, and their toils be undone.

10

Christian, what of the night?—
I cannot tell; I am blind.
I halt and hearken behind
If haply the hours will go back
And return to the dear dead light,
To the watchfires and stars that of old
Shone where the sky now is black,
Glowed where the earth now is cold.

11

High priest, what of the night?—
The night is horrible here
With haggard faces and fear,
Blood, and the burning of fire.
Mine eyes are emptied of sight,
Mine hands are full of the dust,
If the God of my faith be a liar,
Who is it that I shall trust?

12

Princes, what of the night?—
Night with pestilent breath
Feeds us, children of death
Clothes us close with her gloom.
Rapine and famine and fright
Crouch at our feet and are fed.
Earth where we pass is a tomb,
Life where we triumph is dead.

13

Martyrs, what of the night?—
 Nay, is it night with you yet?
 We, for our part, we forget
 What night was, if it were.
 The loud red mouth of the fight
 Are silent and shut where we are.
 In our eyes the tempestuous air
 Shines as the face of a star.

14

England, what of the night?—
 Night is for slumber and sleep,
 Warm, no season to weep.
 Let me alone till the day.
 Sleep would I still if I might,
 Who have slept for two hundred years.
 Once I had honor, they say;
 But slumber is sweeter than tears.

15

France, what of the night?—
 Night is the prostitute's noon,
 Kissed and drugged till she swoon,
 Spat upon, trod upon, whored.
 With bloodred rose-garlands dight,
 Round me reels in the dance
 Death, my saviour, my lord,
 Crowned; there is no more France.

16

Italy, what of the night?—
 Ah, child, child, it is long!
 Moonbeam and starbeam and song
 Leave it dumb now and dark.
 Yet I perceive on the height
 Eastward, not now very far,
 A song too loud for the lark,
 A light too strong for a star.

17

Germany, what of the night?—
 Long has it lulled me with dreams;
 Now at midwatch, as it seems,
 Light is brought back to mine eyes,
 And the mastery of old and the might
 Lives in the joints of mine hands,
 Steadies my limbs as they rise,
 Strengthens my foot as it stands.

18

Europe, what of the night?—
 Ask of heaven, and the sea
 And my babes on the bosom of me,
 Nations of mine, but ungrown.
 There is one who shall surely requite
 All that endure or that err:
 She can answer alone:
 Ask not of me, but of her.

19

Liberty, what of the night?—
 I feel not the red rains fall,
 Hear not the tempest at all,
 Nor thunder in heaven any more.
 All the distance is white
 With the soundless feet of the sun.
 Night, with the woes that it wore,
 Night is over and done.

 HERTHA

I AM that which began;
 Out of me the years roll;
 Out of me God and man;
 I am equal and Whole;
 God changes, and man, and the form of them bodily; I am the soul.

Before ever land was,
 Before ever the sea,
 Or soft hair of the grass,
 Or fair limbs of the tree,
 Or the flesh-colored fruit of my branches, I was, and thy soul was in me.

First life on my sources
 First drifted and swam;
 Out of me are the forces
 That save it or damn;
 Out of me man and woman, and wild-beast and bird; before
 God was, I am.
 Beside or above me

Nought is there to go;
 Love or unlove me,
 Unknow me or know,
 I am that which unloves me and loves; I am stricken, and I am the blow.

I the mark that is missed
 And the arrows that miss,
 I the mouth that is kissed
 And the breath in the kiss,
 The search, and the sought, and the seeker, the soul and the body that is.

I am the thing which blesses
 My spirit elate;
 That which caresses
 With hands uncreate
 My limbs unbegotten that measure the length of the measure of fate.

But what thing dost thou now,
 Looking Godward, to cry
 "I am I, thou art thou,
 I am low, thou art high?"
 I am thou, whom thou seekest to find him; find thou but myself, thou art I.

I the grain and the furrow,
 The plough-cloven clod
 And the ploughshare drawn thorough,
 The germ and the sod,
 The deed and the doer, the seed and the sower, the dust which is God.

Hast thou known how I fashioned thee,
 Child, underground?

Fire that impassioned thee,
 Iron that bound,
 Dim changes of water, what thing of all these hast thou known of or found?

Canst thou say in thine heart
 Thou has seen with thine eyes
 With what cunning of art
 Thou wast wrought in what wise,
 By what force of what stuff thou wast shapen, and shown on my breast to the skies?

Who hath given, who hath sold it thee,
 Knowledge of me?
 Hath the wilderness told it thee?
 Hast thou learnt of the sea?
 Hast thou communed in spirit with night? have the winds taken counsel with thee?

Have I set such a star
 To show light on thy brow
 That thou sawest from afar
 What I show to thee now?
 Have ye spoken as brethren together, the sun and the mountains and thou?

What is here, dost thou know it?
 What was, hast thou known?
 Prophet nor poet
 Nor tripod nor throne
 Nor spirit nor flesh can make answer, but only thy mother alone.

Mother, not maker,
 Born, and not made;
 Though her children forsake her,

Allured or afraid,
 Praying prayers to the God of their fashion, she stirs not for all that have prayed.

A creed is a rod,
 And a crown is of night;
 But this thing is God,
 To be man with thy might,
 To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and live out thy life as the light.

I am in thee to save thee,
 As my soul in thee saith,
 Give thou as I gave thee,
 Thy life-blood and breath,
 Green leaves of thy labor, white flowers of thy thought, and red fruit of thy death.

Be the ways of thy giving
 As mine were to thee;
 The free life of thy living,
 Be the gift of it free;
 Not as servant to lord, nor as master to slave, shalt thou give thee to me.

O children of banishment,
 Souls overcast,
 Were the lights ye see vanish meant
 Always to last,
 Ye would know not the sun overshadowing the shadows and stars overpast.

I that saw where ye trod
 The dim paths of the night
 Set the shadow called God
 In your skies to give light;
 But the morning of manhood is risen, and the shadowless soul is in sight.

The tree many-rooted
 That swells to the sky
 With frondage red-fruited,
 The life-tree am I;
 In the buds of your lives is the sap of my leaves: ye shall live and not die.

But the Gods of your fashion
 That take and that give,
 In their pity and passion
 That scourge and forgive,
 They are worms that are bred in the bark that falls off: they shall die and not live.

My own blood is what stanches
 The wounds in my bark:
 Stars caught in my branches
 Make day of the dark,
 And are worshipped as suns till the sunrise shall tread out their fires as a spark.

Where dead ages hide under
 The live roots of the tree,
 In my darkness the thunder
 Make utterance of me;
 In the clash of my boughs with each other ye hear the waves sound of the sea.

That noise is of Time,
 As his feathers are spread
 And his feet set to climb
 Through the boughs overhead,
 And my foliage rings round him and rustles, and branches are bent with his tread.

The storm-winds of ages
 Blow through me and cease,
 The war-wind that rages,
 The spring-wind of peace,
 Ere the breath of them roughen my tresses, ere one of my blossoms increase.

All sounds of all changes,
 All shadows and lights
 On the world's mountain-ranges
 And stream-riven heights,
 Whose tongue is the wind's tongue and language of storm-clouds on earth-shaking nights;

All forms of all faces,
 All works of all hands
 In unsearchable places
 Of time-stricken lands,
 All death and all life, and all reigns and all ruins, drop through me as sands.

Though sore be my burden
 And more than ye know,
 And my growth have no guerdon
 But only to grow,
 Yet I fail not of growing for lightnings above me or death-worms below.

These too have their part in me,
 As I too in these;
 Such fire is at heart in me,
 Such sap is this tree's,
 Which hath in it all sounds and all secrets of infinite lands and of seas.

In the spring-colored hours
 When my mind was as May's,
 There brake forth of me flowers
 By centuries of days,
 Strong blossoms with perfume of manhood, shot out from my spirit as rays.

And the sound of them springing
 And smell of their shoots
 Were as warmth and sweet singing
 And strength to my roots;
 And the lives of my children made perfect with freedom of soul were my fruits.

I bid you but be;
 I have need not of prayer;
 I have need of you free
 As your mouths of mine air;
 That my heart may be greater within me, beholding the fruits of me fair.

More fair than strange fruit is
 Of faiths ye espouse;
 In me only the root is
 That blooms in your boughs;
 Behold now your God that ye made you, to feed him with faith of your vows.

In the darkening and whitening
 Abysses adored,
 With dayspring and lightning
 For lamp and for sword,
 God thunders in heaven, and his angels are red with the wrath of the Lord.

O my sons, O too dutiful
 Toward Gods not of me,

Was not I enough beautiful?
 Was it hard to be free?
 For behold, I am with you, am in you and of you; look forth
 now and see.

Lo, winged with world's wonders,
 With miracles shod,
 With the fires of his thunders
 For raiment and rod,
 God trembles in heaven, and his angels are white with the terror of God.

For his twilight is come on him,
 His anguish is here;
 And his spirits gaze dumb on him,
 Grown grey from his fear;
 And his hour taketh hold on him stricken, the last of his infinite year.

Thought made him and breaks him,
 Truth slays and forgives;
 But to you, as time takes him,
 This new thing it gives,
 Even love, the beloved Republic, that feeds upon freedom and lives.

For truth only is living,
 Truth only is whole,
 And the love of his giving
 Man's polestar and pole;
 Man, pulse of my centre, and fruit of my body, and seed of my soul.

One birth of my bosom;
 One beam of mine eye:

One topmost blossom
 That scales the sky;
 Man, equal and one with me, man that is made of me, man that is I.

MATER DOLOROSA

Citoyen, lui dit Enjolras, ma mère, c'est la République.
 —Les Misérables.

WHO is this that sits by the way, by the wild wayside,
 In a rent stained raiment, the robe of a cast-off bride,
 In the dust, in the rainfall sitting, with soiled feet bare,
 With the night for a garment upon her, with torn wet hair?
 She is fairer of face than the daughters of men, and her eyes,
 Worn through with her tears, are deep as the depth of skies.

This is she for whose sake being fallen, for whose abject sake,
 Earth groans in the blackness of darkness, and men's hearts break

This is she for whose love, having seen her, the men that were

Poured life out as water, and shed their souls upon air,
 This is she for whose glory their years were counted as foam;
 Whose face was a light upon Greece, was a fire upon Rome.

Is it now not surely a vain thing, a foolish and vain,
 To sit down by her, mourn to her, serve her, partake in the pain?

She is grey with the dust of time on his manifold ways,
 Where her faint feet stumble and falter through year-long days

Shall she help us at all, O fools, give fruit or give fame,
 Who herself is a name despised, a rejected name?

We have not served her for guerdon. If any do so,
 That his mouth may be sweet with such honey, we care not to know

We have drunk from a wine-unsweetened, a perilous cup,
 A draught very bitter. The kings of the earth stood up,
 And the rulers took counsel together to smite her and slay;
 And the blood of her wounds is given us to drink to-day.

Can these bones live? or the leaves that are dead leaves bud?

Or the dead blood drawn from her veins be in your veins blood?

Will ye gather up water again that was drawn and shed?
 In the blood is the life of the veins, and her veins are dead
 For the lives that are over are over, and past things past;
 She had her day, and is not; was first, and is last.

Is it nothing unto you then, all ye that pass by
 If her breath be left in her lips if she live now or die?
 Behold now, O people, and say if she be not fair Whom your fathers followed to find her with praise and prayer,

And rejoiced having found her, though roof they had none
 nor bread;
 But ye care not; what is it to you if her own day be dead?

It was well with our fathers; their sound was in all men's heads;

There was fire in their hearts, and the hunger of fight in their hands.

Naked and strong they went forth on her strength like flame,

For her loves and her name's sake of old, her republican name.

But their children by kings made quiet, by priests made wise,
Love better the heat of their hearths than the light of her eyes.

Are they children of these thy children indeed who have sold

O golden goddess the light of thy face for gold?
Are they sons indeed the sons of thy dayspring of hope,
Whose lives are in fief of an emperor, whose souls of a Pope?
Hide then thine head, O beloved; thy time is done;
Thy kingdom is broken in heaven, and blind thy sun.

What sleep is upon you, to dream she indeed shall rise,
When the hopes are dead in her heart as the tears in her eyes?

If ye sing of her dead will she stir? if ye weep for her,
weep?

Come away now, leave her; what hath she to do but sleep?
But ye that mourn are alive, and have years to be;
And life is good, and the world is wiser than we.

Yea, wise is the world and mighty, with years to give,
And years to promise; but how long now shall it live?
And foolish and poor is faith, and her ways are bare,
Till she find the way of the sun, and the morning air,
In that hour shall this dead face shine as the face of the sun,

And the soul of man and her soul and the world's be one.

A FORSAKEN GARDEN

IN a coign of the cliff between lowland and highland,
At the sea-down's edge between windward and lee,
Walled round with rocks as an inland island,
The ghost of a garden fronts the sea.
A girdle of brushwood and thorn encloses
The steep square slope of the blossomless bed
Where the weeds that grew green from the graves of its roses
Now lie dead.

The fields fall southward, abrupt and broken,
To the low last edge of the long lone land.
If a step should sound or a word be spoken,
Would a ghost not rise at the strange guest's hand?
So long have the gray bare walks lain guestless,
Through branches and briers if a man make way,
He shall find no life but the sea-wind's, restless
Night and day.

The dense hard passage is blind and stifled
That crawls by a track none turn to climb
To the strait waste place that the years have rifled
Of all but the thorns that are touched not of time.
The thorns he spares when the rose is taken;
The rocks are left when he wastes the plain.
The wind that wanders, the weeds wind-shaken,
These remain.

Not a flower to be prest of the foot that falls not;
As the heart of a dead man the seed-plots are dry;
From the thicket of thorns whence the nightingale calls not,
Could she call, there were never a rose to reply.

Over the meadows that blossom and wither
 Rings but the note of a sea-bird's song;
 Only the sun and the rain come hither
 All year long.

The sun burns sere and the rain dishevels
 One gaunt bleak blossom of scentless breath.
 Only the wind here hovers and revels
 In a round where life seems barren as death.
 Here there was laughing of old, there was weeping,
 Haply, of lovers none ever will know,
 Whose eyes went seaward a hundred sleeping
 Years ago.

Heart handfast in heart as they stood, "Look thither," Did he whisper! "Look forth from the flowers to the sea;
 For the foam-flowers endure when the rose-blossoms wither,
 And men that love lightly may die—but we?"
 And the same wind sang and the same waves whitened,
 And or ever the garden's last petals were shed,
 In the lips that had whispered, the eyes that had lightened,
 Love was dead.

Or they loved their life through, and then went whither?
 And were one to the end—but what end who knows?
 Love deep as the sea as a rose must wither,
 As the rose-red seaweed that mocks the rose.
 Shall the dead take thought for the dead to love them?
 What love was ever as deep as a grave?
 They are loveless now as the grass above them
 Or the wave.

All are at one now, roses and lovers,
 Not known of the cliffs and the fields and the sea.
 Not a breath of the time that has been hovers

In the air now soft with a summer to be.
 Not a breath shall there sweeten the seasons hereafter
 Of the flowers or the lovers that laugh now or weep,
 When as they that are free now of weeping and laughter,
 We shall sleep.

Here death may deal not again forever;
 Here change may come not till all change end.
 From the graves they have made they shall rise up never,
 Who have left nought living to ravage and rend.
 Earth, stones, and thorns of the wild ground growing,
 While the sun and the rain live, these shall be;
 Till a last wind's breath upon all these blowing
 Roll the sea.

Till the slow sea rise and the sheer cliff crumble,
 Till terrace and meadow the deep gulfs drink,
 Till the strength of the waves of the high tides humble
 The fields that lessen, the rocks that shrink,
 Here now in his triumph where all things falter,
 Stretched out on the spoils that his own hand spread,
 As a god self-slain on his own strange altar,
 Death lies dead.

RELICS

THIS flower that smells of honey and the sea,
 White laurustine, seems in my hand to be
 A white star made of memory long ago
 Lit in the heaven of dear times dead to me.

A star out of the skies love used to know,
 Here held in hand, a stray left yet to show
 What flowers my heart was full of in the days
 That are long since gone down dead memory's flow.

Dead memory that revives on doubtful ways,
 Half hearkening what the buried season says
 Out of the world of the unapparent dead
 Where the lost Aprils are, and the lost Mays.

Flower, once I knew thy star-white brethren bred
 Nigh where the last of all the land made head
 Against the sea, a keen-faced promontory,
 Flowers on salt wind and sprinkled sea-dews fed.

Their hearts were glad of the free place's glory;
 The wind that sang them all his stormy story
 Had talked all winter to the sleepless spray,
 And as the sea's their hues were hard and hoary.

Like things born of the sea and the bright day,
 They laughed out at the years that could not slay,
 Live sons and joyous of unquiet hours,
 And stronger than all storms that range for prey.

And in the close indomitable flowers
 A keen-edged odor of the sun and showers
 Was as the smell of the fresh honeycomb
 Made sweet for mouths of none but paramours.

Out of the hard green wall of leaves that clomb
 They showed like windfalls of the snow-soft foam,
 Or feathers from the weary south-wind's wing,
 Fair as the spray that it came shoreward from.

And thou, as white, what word hast thou to bring?
 If my heart hearken, whereof wilt thou sing?
 For some sign surely thou too hast to bear,
 Some word far south was taught thee of the spring.

White like a white rose, not like these that were Taught of the wind's mouth and the winter air,
 Poor tender thing of soft Italian bloom,
 Where once thou grewest, what else for me grew there?

Born in what spring and on what city's tomb,
 By whose hand wast thou reached, and plucked for whom?
 There hangs about thee, could the soul's sense tell,
 An odor as of love and of love's doom.

Of days more sweet than thou wast sweet to smell,
 Of flower-soft thoughts that came to flower and fell,
 Of loves that lived a lily's life and died,
 Of dreams now dwelling where dead roses dwell.

O white birth of the golden mountain-side
 That for the sun's love makes its bosom wide
 At sunrise, and with all its woods and flowers
 Takes in the morning to its heart of pride!

Thou hast a word of that one land of ours,
 And of the fair town called of the fair towers.
 A word for me of my San Gimignano,
 A word of April's greenest-girdled hours.

Of the breached walls whereon the wall-flowers ran
 Called of Saint Fina, breachless now of man,
 Though time with soft feet break them stone by stone,
 Who breaks down hour by hour his own reign's span.

Of the cliff overcome and overgrown
 That all that flowerage clothed as flesh clothes bone,
 That garment of acacias made for May,
 Whereof here lies one witness overblown.

The fair brave trees with all their flowers at play,
How king-like they stood up into the day!

How sweet the day was with them, and the night!
Such words of message have dead flowers to say.

This that the winter and the wind made bright,
And this that lived upon Italian light,

Before I throw them and these words away,
Who knows but I what memories too take flight?

EPICEDE

(James Lorimer Graham died at Florence. April 30, 1876.)

LIFE may give for love to death
Little; what are life's gifts worth
To the dead wrapt round with earth?
Yet from lips of living breath
Sighs or words we are fain to give,
All that yet, while yet we live,
Life may give for love to death.

Dead so long before his day,
Passed out of the Italian sun
To the dark where all is done
Fallen upon the verge of May;
Here at life's and April's end
How should song salute my friend
Dead so long before his day?

Not a kindlier life or sweeter
Time, that lights and quenches men,
Now may quench or light again,

Mingling with the mystic metre
Woven of all men's lives with his
Not a clearer note than this,
Not a kindlier life or sweeter.

In this heavenliest part of earth
He that living loved the light,
Light and song, may rest aright,
One in death, if strange in birth,
With the deathless dead that make
Life the lovelier for their sake
In this heavenliest part of earth.

Light, and song, and sleep at last—
Struggling hands and suppliant knees
Get no goodlier gift than these.
Song that holds remembrance fast,
Light that lightens death, attend
Round their graves who have to friend
Light, and song, and sleep at last.

A VISION OF SPRING IN WINTER

I

O TENDER time that love thinks long to see,
Sweet foot of spring that with her footfall sows
Late snowlike flowery leavings of the snows,
Be not too long irresolute to be;
O mother-month, where have they hidden thee?
Out of the pale time of the flowerless rose
I reach my heart out toward the springtime lands.
I stretch my spirit forth to the fair hours,
The purplest of the prime;

I lean my soul down over them, with hands
 Made wide to take the ghostly growths of flowers;
 I send my love back to the lonely time.

II

Where has the greenwood hid thy gracious head?
 Veiled with what visions while the gray world grieves
 Or muffled with what shadows of green leaves,
 What warm intangible green shadows spread
 To sweeten the sweet twilight for thy bed?
 What sleep enchants thee? what delight deceives?
 Where the deep dreamlike dew before the dawn
 Feels not the fingers of the sunlight yet
 Its silver web unweave,
 Thy footless ghost on some unfooted lawn
 Whose air the unrisen sunbeams fear to fret
 Lives a ghost's life of daylong dawn and eve.

III

Sunrise it sees not, neither set of star,
 Large nightfall, nor imperial plenilune,
 Nor strong sweet shape of the full-breasted noon;
 But where the silver-sandalled shadows are,
 Too soft for arrows of the sun to mar,
 Moves with the mild gait of an ungrown moon:
 Hard overhead the half-lit crescent swims,
 The tender-colored night draws hardly breath.
 The light is listening;
 They watch the dawn of slender-shapen limbs,
 Virginal, born again of doubtful death,
 Chill foster-father of the weanling spring.

IV

As sweet desire of day before the day,
 As dreams of love before the true love born
 From the outer edge of winter overworn
 The ghost arisen of May before the May
 Takes through dim air her unawakened way,
 The gracious ghost of morning risen ere morn:
 With little unblown breasts and child-eyed looks
 Following, the very maid, the girl-child spring,
 Lifts windward her bright brows,
 Dips her light feet in warm and moving brooks,
 And kindles with her own mouth's coloring
 The fearful firstlings of the plumeless boughs.

V

I seek thee sleeping, and awhile I see,
 Fair face that art not, how thy maiden breath
 Shall put at last the deadly days to death
 And fill the fields and fire the woods with thee
 And seaward hollows where my feet would be
 When heaven shall hear the word that April saith
 To change the cold heart of the weary time,
 To stir and soften all the time to tears,
 Tears joyfuller than mirth;
 As even to May's clear height the young days climb
 With feet not swifter than those fair first years
 Whose flowers revive not with thy flowers on earth.

VI

I would not bid thee, though I might, give back
 One good thing youth has given and borne away;

I crave not any comfort of the day
 That is not, nor on time's retrodden track
 Would turn to meet the white-robed hours or black
 That long since left me on their mortal way;
 Nor light nor love that has been, nor the breath
 That comes with the morning from the sun to be
 And sets light hope on fire;
 No fruit, no flower thought once too fair for death,
 No flower nor hour once fallen from life's green tree,
 No leaf once plucked or once fulfilled desire.

VII

The morning song beneath the stars that fled
 With twilight through the moonless mountain air,
 While youth with burning lips and wreathless hair
 Sang toward the sun that was to crown his head,
 Rising; the hopes that triumphed and fell dead,
 The sweet swift eyes and songs of hours that were;
 These may'st thou not give back forever; these,
 As at the sea's heart all her wrecks lie waste,
 Lie deeper than the sea;
 But flowers thou may'st, and winds, and hours of ease,
 And all its April to the world thou may'st
 Give back, and half my April back to me.

BEFORE SUNSET

In the lower lands of day
 On the hither side of night,
 There is nothing that will stay,
 There are all things soft to sight;
 Lighted shade and shadowy light
 In the wayside and the way,

Hours the sun has spared to smite,
 Flowers the rain has left to play.

Shall these hours run down and say
 No good thing of thee and me?
 Time that made us and will slay
 Laughs at love in me and thee;
 But if here the flowers may see
 One whole hour of amorous breath,
 Time shall die, and love shall be
 Lord as time was over death.

SONG

Love laid his sleepless head
 On a thorny rosy bed;
 And his eyes with tears were red,
 And pale his lips as the dead.

And fear and sorrow and scorn
 Kept watch by his head forlorn.
 Till the night was overworn
 And the world was merry with morn.

And Joy came up with the day
 And kissed Love's lips as he lay,
 And the watchers ghostly and gray
 Sped from his pillow away.

And his eyes as the dawn grew bright,
 And his lips waxed ruddy as light:
 Sorrow may reign for a night,
 But day shall bring back delight.

A BALLAD OF FRANCOIS VILLON,

PRINCE OF ALL BALLAD-MAKERS.

BIRD of the bitter bright gray golden morn
 Scarce risen upon the dusk of dolorous years,
 First of us all and sweetest singer born
 Whose far shrill note the world of new men hears
 Cleave the cold shuddering shade as twilight clears;
 When song new-born put off the old world's attire
 And felt its tune on her changed lips expire,
 Writ foremost on the roll of them that came
 Fresh girt for service of the latter lyre,
 Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name!

Alas the joy, the sorrow and the scorn,
 That clothed thy life with hopes and sins and fears,
 And gave thee stones for bread and tares for corn
 And plume-plucked jail-birds for thy starveling peers
 Till death clipt close their flight with shameful shears;
 Till shifts came short and loves were hard to hire,
 When lilt of song nor twitch of twangling wire
 Could buy thee bread or kisses; when light fame
 Spurned like a ball and haled through brake and briar,
 Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name.

Poor splendid wings so frayed and soiled and torn!
 Poor kind wild eyes so dashed with light quick tears!
 Poor perfect voice, most blithe when most forlorn,
 That rings athwart the sea whence no man steers
 Like joy-bells crossed with death-bells in our ears!
 What far delight has cooled the fierce desire
 That like some ravenous bird was strong to tire
 On that frail flesh and soul consumed with flame,

But left more sweet than roses to respire,
 Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name.

ENVOI

Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire,
 A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire;
 Shame soiled thy song, and song assoiled thy shame.
 But from thy feet now death has washed the mire,
 Love reads our first at head of all our quire,
 Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name

BY THE NORTH SEA.

I

A LAND that is lonelier than ruin;
 A sea that is stranger than death:
 Far fields that a rose never blew in,
 Wan waste where the winds lack breath;
 Waste endless and boundless and flowerless
 But of marsh-blossoms fruitless as free:
 Where earth lies exhausted, as powerless
 To strive with the sea.

Far flickers the flight of the swallows,
 Far flutters the weft of the grass
 Spun dense over desolate hollows
 More pale than the clouds as they pass:
 Thick woven as the weft of a witch is
 Round the heart of a thrall that hath sinned,
 Whose youth and the wrecks of its riches
 Are waifs on the wind.

The pastures are herdless and sheepless
 No pasture or shelter for herds:
 The wind is relentless and sleepless
 And restless and songless the birds;
 Their cries from afar fall breathless,
 Their wings are as lightnings that flee;
 For the land has two lords that are deathless:
 Death's self, and the sea.

These twain, as a king with his fellow,
 Hold converse of desolate speech:
 And her waters are haggard and yellow
 And crass with the scurf of the beach:
 And his garments are grey as the hoary
 Wan sky where the day lies dim:
 And his power is to her, and his glory,
 As hers unto him.

In the pride of his power she rejoices,
 In her glory he glows and is glad:
 In her darkness the sound of his voice is,
 With his breath she dilates and is mad:
 "If thou slay me, O death, and outlive me,
 Yet thy love hath fulfilled me of thee."
 "Shall I give thee not back if thou give me, O sister, O sea?"

And year upon year dawns living,
 And age upon age drops dead:
 And his hand is not weary of giving,
 And the thirst of her heart is not fed:
 And the hunger that moans in her passion,
 And the rage in her hunger that roars,
 As a wolf's that the winter lays lash on,
 Still calls and implores.

Her walls have no granite for girder,
 No fortalice fronting her stands:
 But reefs the bloodguiltiest of murder
 Are less than the banks of her sands:
 These number their slain by the thousand;
 For the ship hath no surety to be,
 When the bank is abreast of her bows and
 Aflush with the sea.

8

No surety to stand, and no shelter
 To dawn out of darkness but one,
 Out of waters that hurtle and welter
 No succor to dawn with the sun
 But a rest from the wind as it passes,
 Where, hardly redeemed from the waves,
 Lie thick as the blades of the grasses
 The dead in their graves.

A multitude noteless of numbers,
 As wild weeds cast on an heap:
 And sounder than sleep are their slumbers,
 And softer than song is their sleep;
 And sweeter than all things and stranger
 The sense, if perchance it may be,
 That the wind is divested of danger
 And scatheless the sea.

10

That the roar of the banks they breasted
 Is hurtless as bellowing of herds,
 And the strength of his wings that invested
 The wind, as the strength of a bird's;
 As the sea-mew's might or the swallow's
 That cry to him back if he cries,
 As over the graves and their hollows
 Days darken and rise.

11

As the souls of the dead men disburdened
 And clean of the sins that they sinned,
 With a lovelier than man's life guerdoned
 And delight as a wave's in the wind,
 And delight as the wind's in the billow,
 Birds pass, and deride with their glee
 The flesh that has dust for its pillow
 As wrecks have the sea.

12

When the days of the sun wax dimmer,
 Wings flash through the dusk like beams;
 As the clouds in the lit sky glimmer,
 The bird in the graveyard gleams;
 As the cloud at its wing's edge whitens
 When the clarions of sunrise are heard,
 The graves that the bird's note brightens
 Grow bright for the bird.

13

As the waves of the numberless waters
 That the wind cannot number who guides
 Are the sons of the shore and the daughters
 Here lulled by the chime of the tides:
 And here in the press of them standing
 We know not if these or if we Live truliest, or anchored to landing
 Or drifted to sea.

14

In the valley he named of decision
 No denser were multitudes met
 When the soul of the seer in her vision
 Saw nations for doom of them set;
 Saw darkness in dawn, and the splendor
 Of judgment, the sword and the rod;
 But the doom here of death is more tender
 And gentler the god.

15

And gentler the wind from the dreary
 Sea-banks by the waves overlapped,
 Being weary, speaks peace to the weary
 From slopes that the tide-stream hath sapped;
 And sweeter than all that we call so
 The seal of their slumber shall be,
 Till the graves that embosom them also,
 Be sapped of the sea.

AFTER LOOKING INTO CARLYLE'S
 REMINISCENCES.

I

THREE men lived yet when this dead man was young
 Whose names and words endure forever: one
 Whose eyes grew dim with straining toward the sun,
 And his wings weakened, and his angel's tongue
 Lost half the sweetest song was ever sung,
 But like the strain half uttered earth hears none,
 Nor shall man hear till all men's songs are done:
 One whose clear spirit like an eagle hung
 Between the mountains hallowed by his love
 And the sky stainless as his soul above:
 And one the sweetest heart that ever spake
 The brightest words wherein sweet wisdom smiled.
 These deathless names by this dead snake defiled
 Bid memory spit upon him for their sake.

II

Sweet heart, forgive me for thine own sweet sake,
 Whose kind blithe soul such seas of sorrow swam,
 And for my love's sake, powerless as I am
 For love to praise thee, or like thee to make
 Music of mirth where hearts less pure would break,
 Less pure than thine, our life-unspotted Lamb.
 Things hatefullest thou hadst not heart to damn,
 Nor wouldst have set thine heel on this dead snake.
 Let worms consume its memory with its tongue,
 The fang that stabbed fair Truth, the lip that stung
 Men's memories uncorroded with its breath.
 Forgive me, that with bitter words like his
 I mix the gentlest English name that is,
 The tenderest held of all that know not death.

EUTHANATOS.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. THELLUSSON

FORTH of our ways and woes,
 Forth of the winds and snows
 A white soul soaring goes,
 Winged like a dove:
 So sweet, so pure, so clear,
 So heavenly tempered here,
 Love need not hope or fear her changed above:

Ere dawned her day to die,
 So heavenly, that on high
 Change could not glorify
 Nor death refine her:

Pure gold of perfect love,
On earth like heaven's own dove,
She cannot wear, above, a smile diviner.

Her voice in heaven's own quire
Can sound no heavenlier lyre
Than here: no purer fire
Her soul can soar:
No sweeter stars her eyes
In unimagined skies
Beyond our sight can rise than here before.

Hardly long years had shed
Their shadows on her head:
Hardly we think her dead,
Who hardly thought her
Old: hardly can believe
The grief our hearts receive
And wonder while they grieve, as wrong were wrought her.

But though strong grief be strong
No word or thought of wrong
May stain the trembling song,
Wring the bruised heart,
That sounds or sighs its faint
Low note of love, nor taint
Grief for so sweet a saint, when such depart.

A saint whose perfect soul,
With perfect love for goal,
Faith hardly might control,
Creeds might not harden:
A flower more splendid far
Than the most radiant star
Seen here of all that are in God's own garden.

Surely the stars we see
Rise and relapse as we,
And change and set, may be
But shadows too.
But spirits that man's lot
Could neither mar nor spot
Like these false lights are not, being heavenly true.

Not like these dying lights
Of worlds whose glory smites
The passage of the night
Through heaven's blind prison:
Not like their souls who see,
If thought fly far and free,
No heavenlier heaven to be for souls risen.

A soul wherein love shone
Even like the sun, alone,
With fervor of its own
And splendor fed,
Made by no creeds less kind
Toward souls by none confined,
Could Death's self quench or blind, Love's self were dead.

A CHILD'S LAUGHTER.

ALL the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells on earth may spring,
All the winds on earth may bring
All sweet sounds together;
Sweeter far than all things heard,

Hand of harper, tone of bird,
 Sound of woods at sundawn stirred,
 Welling water's winsome word,
 Wind in warm wan weather,

One thing yet there is, that none
 Hearing ere its chime be done
 Knows not well the sweetest one
 Heard of man beneath the sun,
 Hoped in heaven hereafter;
 Soft and strong and loud and light,
 Very sound of very light
 Heard from morning's rosiest height,
 When the soul of all delight
 Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome rolled
 Never forth such notes, nor told
 Hours so blithe in tones so bold,
 As the radiant mouth of gold
 Here that rings forth heaven.
 If the golden-crested wren
 Were a nightingale—why, then,
 Something seen and heard of men
 Might be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven.

A CHILD'S THANKS.

How low soe'er men rank us,
 How high soe'er we win,
 The children far above us
 Dwell, and they deign to love us,

With lovelier love than ours,
 And smiles more sweet than flowers;
 As though the sun should thank us
 For letting light come in.

With too divine complaisance,
 Whose grace misleads them thus,
 Being gods, in heavenly blindness
 They call our worship kindness,
 Our pebble-gift a gem:
 They think us good to them,
 Whose glance, whose breath, whose presence,
 Are gifts too good for us.

The poet high and hoary
 Of meres that mountains bind
 Felt his great heart more often
 Yearn, and its proud strength soften
 From stern to tenderer mood,
 At thought of gratitude
 Shown than of song or story
 He heard of hearts unkind.

But with what words for token
 And what adoring tears
 Of reverence risen to passion,
 In what glad prostrate fashion
 Of spirit and soul subdued,
 May man show gratitude
 For thanks of children spoken
 That hover in his ears?

The angels laugh, your brothers,
 Child, hearing you thank me,
 With eyes whence night grows sunny,
 And touch of lips like honey,

And words like honey-dew:
 But how shall I thank you?
 For gifts above all others
 What guerdon-gift may be?

What wealth of words caressing,
 What choice of songs found best,
 Would seem not as derision,
 Found vain beside the vision
 And glory from above
 Shown in a child's heart's love?
 His part in life is blessing;
 Ours, only to be blest.

THRENODY.

OCTOBER 6, 1892.

I

LIFE, sublime and serene when time had power upon it and ruled its breath,
 Changed it, bade it be glad or sad, and hear what change in the world's ear saith,
 Shines more fair in the starrier air whose glory lightens
 the dusk of death.

Suns that sink on the wan sea's brink, and moons that kindle
 and flame and fade,
 Leave more clear for the darkness here the stars that set not and see not shade
 Rise and rise on the lowlier skies by rule of sunlight and moonlight swayed.

So, when night for his eyes grew bright, his proud head pillowed on Shakespeare's breast,
 Hand in hand with him, soon to stand where shine the glories that death loves best,
 Passed the light of his face from sight, and sank sublimely to radiant rest.

II

Far above us and all our love, beyond all reach of its voiceless praise,
 Shines for ever the name that never shall feel the shade of the changeful days
 Fall and chill the delight that still sees winter's light on it shine like May's.

Strong as death is the dark day's breath whose blast has withered the life we see Here where light is the child of night, and less than visions or dreams are we:
 Strong as death; but a word, a breath, a dream is stronger than death can be.

Strong as truth and superb in youth eternal, fair as the sundawn's flame
 Seen when May on her first-born day bids earth exult in her radiant name,
 Lives, clothed round with its praise and crowned with love that dies not, his love-lit fame.

III

Fairer far than the morning star, and sweet for us as the songs that rang
 Loud through heaven from the choral Seven when all the stars of the morning sang,
 Shines the song that we loved so long—since first such love in us flamed and sprang.

England glows as a sunlit rose from mead to mountain, from sea to sea,
 Bright with love and with pride above all taint of sorrow that needs must be,
 Needs must live for an hour, and give its rainbow's glory to lawn and lea.

Not through tears shall the new-born years behold him,
 crowned with applause of men,
 Pass at last from a lustrous past to life that lightens beyond their ken,
 Glad and dead, and from earthward led to sunward, guided of Imogen.

MUSIC: AN ODE.

I

Was it light that spake from the darkness, or music that shone from the word,
 When the night was enkindled with sound of the sun or the first-born bird?
 Souls enthralled and entrammelled in bondage of seasons
 that fall and rise,
 Bound fast round with the fetters of flesh, and blinded with light that dies,
 Lived not surely till music spake, and the spirit of life was heard.

II

Music, sister of sunrise, and herald of life to be,
 Smiled as dawn on the spirit of man, and the thrall was free.

Slave of nature and serf of time, the bondman of life and death,
 Dumb with passionless patience that breathed but forlorn and reluctant breath,
 Heard, beheld, and his soul made answer, and communed
 aloud with the sea.

III

Morning spake, and he heard: and the passionate silent noon
 Kept for him not silence: and soft from the mounting moon
 Fell the sound of her splendor, heard as dawn's in the breathless night,
 Not of men but of birds whose note bade man's soul quicken and leap to light:
 And the song of it spake, and the light and the darkness of earth were as chords in tune.

THE MONUMENT OF GIORDANO BRUNO.

I

Not from without us, only from within,
 Comes or can ever come upon us light
 Whereby the soul keeps ever truth in sight.
 No truth, no strength, no comfort man may win,
 No grace for guidance, no release from sin,
 Save of his own soul's giving. Deep and bright
 As fire enkindled in the core of night
 Burns in the soul where once its fire has been
 The light that leads and quickens thought, inspired

To doubt and trust and conquer. So he said
Whom Sidney, flower of England, lordliest head
Of all we love, loved: but the fates required
A sacrifice to hate and hell, ere fame
Should set with his in heaven Giordano's name.

II

Cover thine eyes and weep, O child of hell,
Grey spouse of Satan, Church of name abhorred.
Weep, withered harlot, with thy weeping lord,
Now none will buy the heaven thou hast to sell
At price of prostituted souls, and swell
Thy loveless list of lovers. Fire and sword
No more are thine: the steel, the wheel, the cord,
The flames that rose round living limbs, and fell
In lifeless ash and ember, now no more
Approve thee godlike. Rome, redeemed at last
From all the red pollution of thy past,
Acclaims the grave bright face that smiled of yore
Even on the fire that caught it round and clomb
To cast its ashes on the face of Rome.

JUNE 9, 1889.

 DEDICATION.

1893.

THE sea of the years that endure not
Whose tide shall endure till we die
And know what the seasons assure not,
If death be or life be a lie,

Sways hither the spirit and thither,
A waif in the swing of the sea
Whose wrecks are of memories that wither
As leaves of a tree.

We hear not and hail not with greeting
The sound of the wings of the years,
The storm of the sound of them beating,
That none till it pass from him hears:
But tempest not calm can imperil
The treasures that fade not or fly;
Change bids them not change and be sterile,
Death bids them not die.

Hearts plighted in youth to the royal
High service of hope and of song,
Sealed fast for endurance as loyal,
And proved of the years as they throng,
Conceive not, believe not, and fear not
That age may be other than youth;
That faith and that friendship may hear not
And utter not truth.

Not yesterday's light nor to-morrow's
Gleams nearer or clearer than gleams,
Though joys be forgotten and sorrows
Forgotten as changes of dreams,
The dawn of the days unforgotten
That noon could eclipse not or slay,
Whose fruits were as children begotten
Of dawn upon day.

The years that were flowerful and fruitless,
The years that were fruitful and dark,
The hopes that were radiant and rootless,
The hopes that were winged for their mark,

Lie soft in the sepulchres fashioned
 Of hours that arise and subside,
 Absorbed and subdued and impassioned,
 In pain or in pride.

But far in the night that entombs them
 The starshine as sunshine is strong,
 And clear through the cloud that resumes them
 Remembrance, a light and a song,
 Rings lustrous as music and hovers
 As birds that impend on the sea,
 And thoughts that their prison-house covers
 Arise and are free.

Forgetfulness deep as a prison
 Holds days that are dead for us fast
 Till the sepulchre sees rearisen
 The spirit whose reign is the past,
 Disentranced of darkness, and kindled
 With life that is mightier than death,
 When the life that obscured it has dwindled
 And passed as a breath.

But time nor oblivion may darken
 Remembrance whose name will be joy
 While memory forgets not to hearken,
 While manhood forgets not the boy
 Who heard and exulted in hearing
 The songs of the sunrise of youth
 Ring radiant above him, unfearing
 And joyous as truth.

Truth, winged and enkindled with rapture
 And sense of the radiance of yore,
 Fulfilled you with power to recapture
 What never might singer before—

The life, the delight, and the sorrow
 Of troublous and chivalrous years
 That knew not of night or of morrow,
 Of hopes or of fears.

But wider the wing and the vision
 That quicken the spirit have spread,
 Since memory beheld with derision
 Man's hope to be more than his dead.
 From the mists and the snows and the thunders,
 Your spirit has brought for us forth
 Light, music, and joy in the wonders
 And charms of the north.

The wars and the woes and the glories
 That quicken and lighten and rain
 From the clouds of its chronicled stories,
 The passion, the pride, and the pain,
 Whose echoes were mute and the token
 Was lost of the spells that they spake,
 Rise bright at your bidding, unbroken
 Of ages that break.

For you, and for none of us other,
 Time is not: the dead that must live
 Hold commune with you as a brother
 By grace of the life that you give.
 The heart that was in them is in you,
 Their soul in your spirit endures:
 The strength of their song is the sinew
 Of this that is yours.

Hence is it that life, everlasting
 As light and as music, abides
 In the sound of the surge of it, casting
 Sound back to the surge of the tides,

Till sons of the sons of the Norsemen
 Watch, hurtling to windward and lee,
 Round England, unbacked of her horsemen,
 The steeds of the sea.

A SWIMMER'S DREAM.

NOVEMBER 4, 1889.
Somno mollior unda.

I

DAWN is dim on the dark soft water,
 Soft and passionate, dark and sweet.
 Love's own self was the deep sea's daughter,
 Fair and flawless from face to feet,
 Hailed of all when the world was golden,
 Loved of lovers whose names beholden
 Thrill men's eyes as with light of olden
 Days more glad than their flight was fleet.

So they sang: but for men that love her,
 Souls that hear not her word in vain,
 Earth beside her and heaven above her
 Seem but shadows that wax and wane.
 Softer than sleep's are the sea's caresses,
 Kinder than love's that betrays and blesses,
 Blither than spring's when her flowerful tresses
 Shake forth sunlight and shine with rain.

All the strength of the waves that perish
 Swells beneath me and laughs and sighs,
 Sighs for love of the life they cherish,
 Laughs to know that it lives and dies,
 Dies for joy of its life, and lives

Thrilled with joy that its brief death gives—
 Death whose laugh or whose breath forgives
 Change that bids it subside and rise.

II

Hard and heavy, remote but nearing,
 Sunless hangs the severe sky's weight,
 Cloud on cloud, though the wind be veering
 Heaped on high to the sundawn's gate.
 Dawn and even and noon are one,
 Veiled with vapor and void of sun;
 Nought in sight or in fancied hearing
 Now less mighty than time or fate.

The grey sky gleams and the grey seas glimmer,
 Pale and sweet as a dream's delight,
 As a dream's where darkness and light seem dimmer,
 Touched by dawn or subdued by night.
 The dark wind, stern and sublime and sad,
 Swings the rollers to westward, clad
 With lustrous shadow that lures the swimmer,
 Lures and lulls him with dreams of light.

Light, and sleep, and delight, and wonder,
 Change, and rest, and a charm of cloud,
 Fill the world of the skies whereunder
 Heaves and quivers and pants aloud
 All the world of the waters, hoary
 Now, but clothed with its own live glory,
 That mates the lightning and mocks the thunder
 With light more living and word more proud.

III

Far off westward, whither sets the sounding strife,
 Strife more sweet than peace, of shoreless waves whose glee
 Scorns the shore and loves the wind that leaves them free,

Strange as sleep and pale as death and fair as life,
Shifts the moonlight-colored sunshine on the sea.

Toward the sunset's goal the sunless waters crowd,
Fast as autumn days toward winter: yet it seems
Here that autumn wanes not, here that woods and streams
Lose not heart and change not likeness, chilled and bowed Warped and wrinkled: here the days are fair as dreams.

IV

O russet-robed November,
What ails thee so to smile?
Chill August, pale September,
Endured a woful while,
And fell as falls an ember
From forth a flameless pile:
But golden-girt November
Bids all she looks on smile.

The lustrous foliage, waning
As wanes the morning moon,
Here falling, here refraining,
Outbraves the pride of June
With statelier semblance, feigning
No fear lest death be soon:
As though the woods thus waning
Should wax to meet the moon.

As though, when fields lie stricken
By grey December's breath,
These lordlier growths that sicken
And die for fear of death,
Should feel the sense requicken
That hears what springtide saith
And thrills for love, spring-stricken
And pierced with April's breath.

The keen white-winged north-easter
That stings and spurs thy sea
Doth yet but feed and feast her
With glowing sense of glee:
Calm chained her, storm released her,
And storm's glad voice was he:
South-wester or north-easter,
Thy winds rejoice the sea.

A dream, a dream is it all—the season,
The sky, the water, the wind, the shore?
A day-born dream of divine unreason,
A marvel moulded of sleep—no more?
For the cloudlike wave that my limbs while cleaving
Feel as in slumber beneath them heaving
Soothes the sense as to slumber, leaving
Sense of nought that was known of yore.

A purer passion, a lordlier leisure,
A peace more happy than lives on land,
Fulfils with pulse of diviner pleasure
The dreaming head and the steering hand.
I lean my cheek to the cold grey pillow,
The deep soft swell of the full broad billow,
And close mine eyes for delight past measure,
And wish the wheel of the world would stand.

The wild-winged hour that we fain would capture
Falls as from heaven that its light feet clomb,
So brief, so soft, and so full the rapture
Was felt that soothed me with sense of home.
To sleep, to swim, and to dream, for ever—
Such joy the vision of man saw never;
For here too soon will a dark day sever
The sea-bird's wing from the sea-wave's foam.

A dream, and more than a dream, and dimmer
 At once and brighter than dreams that flee,
 The moment's joy of the seaward swimmer
 Abides, remembered as truth may be.
 Not all the joy and not all the glory
 Must fade as leaves when the woods wax hoary;
 For there the downs and the sea-banks glimmer,
 And here to south of them swells the sea.

A NYMPHOLEPT.

SUMMER, and noon, and a splendor of silence, felt,
 Seen, and heard of the spirit within the sense.
 Soft through the frondage the shades of the sunbeams melt, Sharp through the foliage the shafts of them, keen and dense,
 Cleave, as discharged from the string of the God's bow, tense
 As a war-steed's girth, and bright as a warrior's belt.
 Ah, why should an hour that is heaven for an hour pass hence?

I dare not sleep for delight of the perfect hour,
 Lest God be wroth that his gift should be scorned of man.
 The face of the warm bright world is the face of a flower,
 The word of the wind and the leaves that the light winds fan
 As the word that quickened at first into flame, and ran,
 Creative and subtle and fierce with invasive power,
 Through darkness and cloud, from the breath of the one
 God, Pan.

The perfume of earth possessed by the sun pervades
 The chaster air that he soothes but with sense of sleep.

Soft, imminent, strong as desire that prevails and fades,
 The passing noon that beholds not a cloudlet weep
 Imbues and impregnates life with delight more deep
 Than dawn or sunset or moonrise on lawns or glades
 Can shed from the skies that receive it and may not keep.

The skies may hold not the splendor of sundown fast;
 It wanes into twilight as dawn dies down into day.
 And the moon, triumphant when twilight is overpast,
 Takes pride but awhile in the hours of her stately sway.
 But the might of the noon, though the light of it pass away,
 Leaves earth fulfilled of desires and of dreams that last;
 But if any there be that hath sense of them none can say.

For if any there be that hath sight of them, sense, or trust
 Made strong by the might of a vision, the strength of a dream,
 His lips shall straiten and close as a dead man's must,
 His heart shall be sealed as the voice of a frost-bound stream.
 For the deep mid mystery of light and of heat that seem
 To clasp and pierce dark earth, and enkindle dust,
 Shall a man's faith say what it is? or a man's guess deem?

Sleep lies not heavier on eyes that have watched all night
 Than hangs the heat of the noon on the hills and trees.
 Why now should the haze not open, and yield to sight
 A fairer secret than hope or than slumber sees?
 I seek not heaven with submission of lips and knees,
 With worship and prayer for a sign till it leap to light:
 I gaze on the gods about me, and call on these.

I call on the gods hard by, the divine dim powers
 Whose likeness is here at hand, in the breathless air,
 In the pulseless peace of the fervid and silent flowers,
 In the faint sweet speech of the waters that whisper there.

Ah, what should darkeness do in a world so fair?
The bent-grass heaves not, the couch-grass quails not or cowers;

The wind's kiss frets not the rowan's or aspen's hair.

But the silence trembles with passion of sound suppressed,
And the twilight quivers and yearns to the sunward, wrung
With love as with pain; and the wide wood's motionless breast

Is thrilled with a dumb desire that would fain find tongue
And palpitates, tongueless as she whom a man-snake stung,
Whose heart now heaves in the nightingale, never at rest
Nor satiated ever with song till her last be sung.

Is it rapture or terror that circles me round, and invades
Each vein of my life with hope—if it be not fear?
Each pulse that awakens my blood into rapture fades,
Each pulse that subsides into dread of a strange thing near

Requickens with sense of a terror less dread than dear.
Is peace not one with light in the deep green glades
Where summer at noonday slumbers? Is peace not here?

The tall thin stems of the firs, and the roof sublime
That screens from the sun the floor of the steep still wood,
Deep, silent, splendid, and perfect and calm as time,
Stand fast as ever in sight of the night they stood,
When night gave all that moonlight and dewfall could.
The dense ferns deepen, the moss glows warm as the thyme:
The wild heath quivers about me: the world is good.

Is it Pan's breath, fierce in the tremulous maidenhair,
That bids fear creep as a snake through the woodlands, felt
In the leaves that it stirs not yet, in the mute bright air,
In the stress of the sun? For here has the great God dwelt:

For hence were the shafts of his love or his anger dealt.
For here has his wrath been fierce as his love was fair,
When each was as fire to the darkness its breath bade melt.

Is it love, is it dread, that enkindles the trembling noon,
That yearns, reluctant in rapture that fear has fed,
As man for woman, as woman for man? Full soon,
If I live, and the life that may look on him drop not dead,
Shall the ear that hears not a leaf quake hear his tread
The sense that knows not the sound of the deep day's tune
Receive the God, be it love that he brings or dread.

The naked noon is upon me: the fierce dumb spell,
The fearful charm of the strong sun's imminent might,
Unmerciful, steadfast, deeper than seas that swell,
Pervades, invades, appals me with loveless light,
With harsher awe than breathes in the breath of night.
Have mercy, God who art all! For I know thee well,
How sharp is thine eye to lighten, thine hand to smite.

The whole wood feels thee, the whole air fears thee: but fear
So deep, so dim, so sacred, is wellnigh sweet.
For the light that hangs and broods on the woodlands here,
Intense, invasive, intolerant, imperious, and meet
To lighten the works of thine hands and the ways of thy feet,
Is hot with the fire of the breath of thy life, and dear
As hope that shrivels or shrinks not for frost or heat.

Thee, thee the supreme dim godhead, approved afar,
Perceived of the soul and conceived of the sense of man,
We scarce dare love, and we dare not fear: the star
We call the sun, that lit us when life began
To brood on the world that is thine by his grace for a
span,

Conceals and reveals in the semblance of things that are Thine imminent presence, the pulse of thy heart's life, Pan.

The fierce mid noon that awakens and warms the snake
Conceals thy mercy, reveals thy wrath: and again
The dew-bright hour that assuages the twilight brake
Conceals thy wrath and reveals thy mercy: then
Thou art fearful only for evil souls of men
That feel with nightfall the serpent within them wake,
And hate the holy darkness on glade and glen.

Yea, then we know not and dream not if ill things be,
Or if aught of the work of the wrong of the world be thine.
We hear not the footfall of terror that treads the sea,
We hear not the moan of winds that assail the pine:
We see not if shipwreck reign in the storm's dim shrine;
If death do service and doom bear witness to thee
We see not,—know not if blood for thy lips be wine.

But in all things evil and fearful that fear may scan,
As in all things good, as in all things fair that fall,
We know thee present and latent, the lord of man;
In the murmuring of doves, in the clamoring of winds that call
And wolves that howl for their prey; in the midnight's pall,
In the naked and nymph-like feet of the dawn, O Pan,
And in each life living, O thou the God who art all.

Smiling and singing, wailing and wringing of hands,
Laughing and weeping, watching and sleeping, still Proclaim but and prove but thee, as the shifted sands
Speak forth and show but the strength of the sea's wild will
That sifts and grinds them as grain in the storm-wind's mill.

In thee is the doom that falls and the doom that stands:
The tempests utter thy word, and the stars fulfil.

Where Etna shudders with passion and pain volcanic
That rend her heart as with anguish that rends a man's,
Where Typho labors, and finds not his thews Titanic,
In breathless torment that ever the flame's breath fans,
Men felt and feared thee of old, whose pastoral clans
Were given to the charge of thy keeping; and soundless panic
Held fast the woodland whose depths and whose heights were Pan's.

And here, though fear be less than delight, and awe
Be one with desire and with worship of earth and thee,
So mild seems now thy secret and speechless law,
So fair and fearless and faithful and godlike she,
So soft the spell of thy whisper on stream and sea,
Yet man should fear lest he see what of old men saw
And withered: yet shall I quail if thy breath smite me.

Lord God of life and of light and of all things fair,
Lord God of ravin and ruin and all things dim,
Death seals up life, and darkens the sunbright air,
And the stars that watch blind earth in the deep night swim,
Laugh, saying, "What God is your God, that ye call on him?
What is man, that the God who is guide of our way should care
If day for a man be golden, or night be grim?"

But thou, dost thou hear? Stars too but abide for a span,
Gods too but endure for a season; but thou, if thou be
God, more than shadows conceived and adored of man,
Kind Gods and fierce, that bound him or made him free,

The skies that scorn us are less in thy sight than we,
Whose souls have strength to conceive and perceive thee, Pan,
With sense more subtle than senses that hear and see.

Yet may not it say, though it seek thee and think to find
One soul of sense in the fire and the frost-bound clod,
What heart is this, what spirit alive or blind,
That moves thee: only we know that the ways we trod
We tread, with hands unguided, with feet unshod,
With eyes unlightened; and yet, if with steadfast mind,
Perchance may we find thee and know thee at last for God.

Yet then should God be dark as the dawn is bright,
And bright as the night is dark on the world—no more.
Light slays not darkness, and darkness absorbs not light;
And the labor of evil and good from the years of yore
Is even as the labor of waves on a sunless shore.
And he who is first and last, who is depth and height,
Keeps silence now, as the sun when the woods wax hoar.

The dark dumb godhead innate in the fair world's life
Imbues the rapture of dawn and of noon with dread,
Infects the peace of the star-shod night with strife,
Informs with terror the sorrow that guards the dead.
No service of bended knee or of humbled head
May soothe or subdue the God who had change to wife:
And life with death is as morning with evening wed.

And yet, if the light and the life in the light that here
Seem soft and splendid and fervid as sleep may seem
Be more than the shine of a smile or the flash of a tear,
Sleep, change, and death are less than a spell-struck
dream,
And fear than the fall of a leaf on a starlit stream.
And yet, if the hope that hath said it absorb not fear,
What helps it man that the stars and the waters gleam?

What helps it man, that the noon be indeed intense,
The night be indeed worth worship? Fear and pain
Were lords and masters yet of the secret sense,
Which now dares deem not that light is as darkness, fain
Though dark dreams be to declare it, crying in vain.
For whence, thou God of the light and the darkness, whence
Dawns now this vision that bids not the sunbeams wane?

What light, what shadow, diviner than dawn or night,
Draws near, makes pause, and again—or I dream—draws near?
More soft than shadow, more strong than the strong sun's light,
More pure than moonbeams—yea, but the rays run sheer
As fire from the sun through the dusk of the pinewood, clear
And constant; yea, but the shadow itself is bright
That the light clothes round with love that is one with fear.

Above and behind it the noon and the woodland lie,
Terrible, radiant with mystery, superb and subdued,
Triumphant in silence; and hardly the sacred sky
Seems free from the tyrannous weight of the dumb fierce mood
Which rules as with fire and invasion of beams that brood
The breathless rapture of earth till its hour pass by
And leave her spirit released and her peace renewed.

I sleep not: never in sleep has a man beholden
This. From the shadow that trembles and yearns with light
Suppressed and elate and reluctant—obscure and golden
As water kindled with presage of dawn or night—
A form, a face, a wonder to sense and sight,

Grows great as the moon through the month; and her eyes embolden

Fear, till it change to desire, and desire to delight.

I sleep not: sleep would die of a dream so strange;

A dream so sweet would die as a rainbow dies,

As a sunbow laughs and is lost on the waves that range

And reck not of light that flickers or spray that flies.

But the sun withdraws not, the woodland shrinks not or sighs,

No sweet thing sickens with sense or with fear of change;

Light wounds not, darkness blinds not, my steadfast eyes.

Only the soul in my sense that receives the soul

Whence now my spirit is kindled with breathless bliss

Knows well if the light that wounds it with love makes whole,

If hopes that carol be louder than fears that hiss,

If truth be spoken of flowers and of waves that kiss,

Of clouds and stars that contend for a sunbright goal.

And yet may I dream that I dream not indeed of this?

An earth-born dreamer, constrained by the bonds of birth,

Held fast by the flesh, compelled by his veins that beat

And kindle to rapture or wrath, to desire or to mirth,

May hear not surely the fall of immortal feet,

May feel not surely if heaven upon earth be sweet;

And here is my sense fulfilled of the joys of earth,

Light, silence, bloom, shade, murmur of leaves that meet.

Bloom, fervor, and perfume of grasses and flowers aglow,

Breathe and brighten about me: the darkness gleams,

The sweet light shivers and laughs on the slopes below,

Made soft by leaves that lighten and change like dreams;

The silence thrills with the whisper of secret streams

That well from the heart of the woodland: these I know:

Earth bore them, heaven sustained them with showers and beams.

I lean my face to the heather, and drink the sun

Whose flame-lit odor satiates the flowers: mine eyes

Close, and the goal of delight and of life is one:

No more I crave of earth or her kindred skies.

No more? But the joy that springs from them smiles and flies:

The sweet work wrought of them surely, the good work done,

If the mind and the face of the season be loveless, dies.

Thee, therefore, thee would I come to, cleave to, cling,

If haply thy heart be kind and thy gifts be good,

Unknown sweet spirit, whose vesture is soft in spring,

In summer splendid, in autumn pale as the wood

That shudders and wanes and shrinks as a shamed thing should,

In winter bright as the mail of a war-worn king

Who stands where foes fled far from the face of him stood.

My spirit or thine is it, breath of thy life or of mine,

Which fills my sense with a rapture that casts out fear?

Pan's dim frown wanes, and his wild eyes brighten as thine,

Transformed as night or as day by the kindling year.

Earth-born, or mine eye were withered that sees, mine ear

That hears were stricken to death by the sense divine,

Earth-born I know thee: but heaven is about me here.

The terror that whispers in darkness and flames in light,

The doubt that speaks in the silence of earth and sea,

The sense, more fearful at noon than in midmost night,

Of wrath scarce hushed and of imminent ill to be,

Where are they? Heaven is as earth, and as heaven to me

Earth: for the shadows that sundered them here take flight;

And nought is all, as am I, but a dream of thee.

THE PALACE OF PAN.

INSCRIBED TO MY MOTHER.

SEPTEMBER, all glorious with gold, as a king
 In the radiance of triumph attired,
 Outlightening the summer, outsweetening the spring,
 Broods wide on the woodlands with limitless wing,
 A presence of all men desired.

Far eastward and westward the sun-colored lands
 Smile warm as the light on them smiles;
 And statelier than temples upbuilt with hands,
 Tall column by column, the sanctuary stands
 Of the pine-forest's infinite aisles.

Mute worship, too fervent for praise or for prayer,
 Possesses the spirit with peace,
 Fulfilled with the breath of the luminous air,
 The fragrance, the silence, the shadows as fair
 As the rays that recede or increase.

Ridged pillars that redden aloft and aloof,
 With never a branch for a nest,
 Sustain the sublime indivisible roof,
 To the storm and the sun in his majesty proof,
 And awful as waters at rest.

Man's hand hath not measured the height of them, thought
 May measure not, awe may not know;
 In its shadow the woofs of the woodland are wrought;
 As a bird is the sun in the toils of them caught,
 And the flakes of it scattered as snow.

As the shreds of a plumage of gold on the ground
 The sun-flakes by multitudes lie,
 Shed loose as the petals of roses discrowned
 On the floors of the forest engilt and embrowned
 And reddened afar and anigh.

Dim centuries with darkling inscrutable hands
 Have reared and secluded the shrine
 For gods that we know not, and kindled as brands
 On the altar the years that are dust, and their sands
 Time's glass has forgotten for sign.

A temple whose transepts are measured by miles,
 Whose chancel has morning for priest,
 Whose floor-work the foot of no spoiler defiles,
 Whose musical silence no music beguiles,
 No festivals limit its feast.

The noon's ministration, the night's and the dawn's,
 Conceals not, reveals not for man,
 On the slopes of the herbless and blossomless lawns,
 Some track of a nymph's or some trail of a faun's
 To the place of the slumber of Pan.

Thought, kindled and quickened by worship and wonder
 To rapture too sacred for fear
 On the ways that unite or divide them in sunder,
 Alone may discern if about them or under
 Be token or trace of him here.

With passionate awe that is deeper than panic
 The spirit subdued and unshaken
 Takes heed of the godhead terrene and Titanic
 Whose footfall is felt on the breach of volcanic
 Sharp steeps that their fire has forsaken.

By a spell more serene than the dim necromantic
 Dead charms of the past and the night,
 Or the terror that lurked in the noon to make frantic
 Where Etna takes shape from the limbs of gigantic
 Dead gods disanointed of might,

The spirit made one with the spirit whose breath
 Makes noon in the woodland sublime
 Abides as entranced in a presence that saith
 Things loftier than life and serener than death,
 Triumphant and silent as time.

PINE RIDGE: September, 1893.

A SEQUENCE OF SONNETS ON THE DEATH OF ROBERT BROWNING.

I

THE clearest eyes in all the world they read
 With sense more keen and spirit of sight more true
 Than burns and thrills in sunrise, when the dew
 Flames, and absorbs the glory round it shed,
 As they the light of ages quick and dead,
 Closed now, forsake us: yet the shaft that slew
 Can slay not one of all the works we knew,
 Nor death discrown that many-laurelled head.

The works of words whose life seems lightning wrought,
 And moulded of unconquerable thought,
 And quickened with imperishable flame,
 Stand fast and shine and smile, assured that nought
 May fade of all their myriad-moulded fame,
 Nor England's memory clasp not Browning's name.

DECEMBER 13, 1889.

II

Death, what hast thou to do with one for whom
 Time is not lord, but servant? What least part
 Of all the fire that fed his living heart,
 Of all the light more keen than sundawn's bloom
 That lit and led his spirit, strong as doom
 And bright as hope, can aught thy breath may dart Quench? Nay, thou knowest he knew thee what thou art,
 A shadow born of terror's barren womb,
 That brings not forth save shadows. What art thou,
 To dream, albeit thou breathe upon his brow,
 That power on him is given thee,—that thy breath
 Can make him less than love acclaims him now,
 And hears all time sound back the word it saith?
 What part hast thou then in his glory, Death?

III

A graceless doom it seems that bids us grieve:
 Venice and winter, hand in deadly hand,
 Hath slain the lover of her sunbright strand
 And singer of a stormbright Christmas Eve.
 A graceless guerdon we that loved receive
 For all our love, from that the dearest land
 Love worshipped ever. Blithe and soft and bland,
 Too fair for storm to scathe or fire to cleave,
 Shone on our dreams and memories evermore
 The domes, the towers, the mountains and the shore
 That gird or guard thee, Venice: cold and black
 Seems now the face we loved as he of yore.
 We have given thee love—no stint, no stay, no lack:
 What gift, what gift is this thou hast given us back?

IV

But he—to him, who knows what gift is thine,
 Death? Hardly may we think or hope, when we Pass likewise thither where to-night is he,
 Beyond the irremeable outer seas that shine
 And darken round such dreams as half divine
 Some sunlit harbor in that starless sea
 Where gleams no ship to windward or to lee,
 To read with him the secret of thy shrine.

There too, as here, may song, delight, and love,
 The nightingale, the sea-bird, and the dove,
 Fulfil with joy the splendor of the sky
 Till all beneath wax bright as all above:
 But none of all that search the heavens, and try
 The sun, may match the sovereign eagle's eye.

DECEMBER 14.

V

Among the wondrous ways of men and time
 He went as one that ever found and sought
 And bore in hand the lamplike spirit of thought
 To illumine with instance of its fire sublime
 The dusk of many a cloudlike age and clime.
 No spirit in shape of light and darkness wrought,
 No faith, no fear, no dream, no rapture, nought
 That blooms in wisdom, nought that burns in crime,
 No virtue girt and armed and helmed with light,
 No love more lovely than the snows are white,
 No serpent sleeping in some dead soul's tomb,
 No song-bird singing from some live soul's height,
 But he might hear, interpret, or illumine
 With sense invasive as the dawn of doom.

VI

What secret thing of splendor or of shade
 Surmised in all those wandering ways wherein
 Man, led of love and life and death and sin,
 Strays, climbs, or cowers, allured, absorbed, afraid.
 Might not the strong and sunlike sense invade
 Of that full soul that had for aim to win
 Light, silent over time's dark toil and din,
 Life, at whose touch death fades as dead things fade?
 O spirit of man, what mystery moves in thee
 That he might know not of in spirit, and see
 The heart within the heart that seems to strive,
 The life within the life that seems to be,
 And hear, through all thy storms that whirl and drive,
 The living sound of all men's souls alive?

VII

He held no dream worth waking: so he said,
 He who stands now on death's triumphal steep,
 Awakened out of life wherein we sleep
 And dream of what he knows and sees, being dead.
 But never death for him was dark or dread:
 "Look forth," he bade the soul, and fear not, Weep
 All ye that trust not in his truth, and keep Vain memory's vision of a vanished head
 As all that lives of all that once was he Save that which lightens from his word: but we,
 Who, seeing the sunset-colored waters roll,
 Yet know the sun subdued not of the sea,
 Nor weep nor doubt that still the spirit is whole,
 And life and death but shadows of the soul.
