Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start.
Read from some humber poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start.
THE HUMBLER POETS.
The Humbler Poets

A Collection of Newspaper and Periodical Verse

1870 to 1885

By Slason Thompson

Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start.

Longfellow

Chicago
A. C. McClurg and Company
1887
It has been said that "he is no common benefactor who shrewdly gathers from the world's manifold literature its words of finest wit and maturest wisdom for our entertainment, instruction, and inspiration." But it is not well at all times to partake of the richest dishes or to drink the rarest wines. The finest wit and the maturest wisdom may be read too oft. There come hours to every lover of poetry when he wishes for "some simple and heart-felt lay," something that shall speak from out a mind feeling the every-day cares of life amid the multitude, and not from the heights to which the masters "proudly stooped." It was this feeling that, some fifteen years ago, led me, a prose-thinker, to begin collecting from newspapers and the ephemeral literature of the day such verses as suited my mood, or which seemed the utterance of a soul that had put its thoughts into song. Upon the fly-leaf of my first scrap-book, surrounded by some now faded natural leaves of oak, maple, bilberry, and Virginia creeper, and two withered sprays of trailing arbutus, I find the misquotation from Love's Labor's Lost, "As though he had been at a feast of languages and stolen the scraps." The succeeding pages show that it was not from a feast of languages, but from the daily board of wayfaring humanity, that such scraps were gleaned. In the course of years, and during successive changes of residence from the extreme East to San Francisco and back, the collection grew until it contained over a thousand poems. A friend suggested the collocation of the most valuable into some permanent form. My sister, far removed from me as the crow flies, but near in sentiment and appreciation of the songs that "quiet the restless pulse of care," offered the use of her contemporaneous collection for the work. To her I am indebted for some eighty of the more truly poetical pieces included in this volume. Two friends in Chicago placed their collections at my disposal, from which I was able to add some twoscore poems to my store. These independent sources served a further purpose to establish the character and fairly exhaustive scope of my own collection.

Then came the difficult task of selection. My scraps bore no patent of nobility, no royal stamp to show they came from the mint of poetic inspiration. Hundreds of them were without a sign to afford a clue to their parentage. Where the estimate of time, popular favor, and literary criticism has served as a guide-post to other collectors, the very nature of this collection denied it to me; therefore I have been forced to fix an arbitrary standard of my own by which every separate piece was judged. The invariable question has been, "Does this poem or narrative in verse contain anything worth rescuing from oblivion?" Under this rule it will readily be perceived I could not exact anything like the approach to perfection demanded in a collection making claim to represent the best specimens of English verse. I could not require that each piece should contain what was best worth preserving, but only that it should contain something worth preserving at all. The latitude admitted by such a principle of selection will account for the unevenness of this collection as a whole. Some of the pieces are full-fledged poems, complete in form, spirit, and finish, and undoubtedly deserve to rank higher up than in The Humbler Poets. Some are mere snatches of song and story "wedded to rhyme," while others are little more than suggestions of beautiful ideas struggling through halting metre and homely jingles. Several are only the rude setting for one or two good lines or happy thoughts. Some of these hedgerow poems contain the germ for others by master hands. Who now can say that Longfellow did not borrow the thought—even some of the very words—for his description of the baby, in The Hanging of the Crane, from as lowly a source as My Lost Baby, page 47, when he wrote,

"He rules by the right divine
Of helplessness, so lately born
In purple chambers of the morn,
As sovereign over thee and thine."?

It may be asked upon what principle I have drawn the line of exclusion from this volume. My answer is that it has been drawn almost arbitrarily along the line of the collected works of the Lesser Poets,—as Bret Harte, R. H. Stoddard, Helen Hunt Jackson, Celia Thaxter, Austin Dobson, Frederick Locker, W. W. Story, R. W. Gilder, Mary Mapes Dodge, Theodore Tilton, Joaquin Miller, Louisa M. Alcott, Elizabeth Akers Allen, Paul H. Hayne, William Winter, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Benjamin F. Taylor, Lucy Larcom, Eila Wheeler, Louise Chandler Moulton, Dinah Mulock Craik, H. C. Bunner, Mary Clemmer, T. B. Aldrich, J. T. Fields, and others, may without offence be called. It is possible, and even probable, that this volume may contain some fiddles from between the covers of the works of these contributors to the periodical poetry of the day, or even from higher sources. But I have taken what the lawyers would call the reasonable care of a reasonable man to reduce the chances of such a fault. The range of poetry in the English tongue is now so vast as to put it beyond the study of a lifetime to possess the memory of everything in it. That my rule has not been lived up to in one or two instances will find excuse, I trust, in the character of the pieces in whose favor the exceptions have been made. The selections credited to Francis W. Bourdillon are notable instances where I have let down the fence to admit poetry that found its way into my scrap-books before the author thought to call it within an enclosure of his own.

Less than twenty selections found in the numerous standard collections, which have been consulted industriously, have been retained in this. No apology seems necessary for the retention of The Burial of Moses, Tired Mothers, The Blue and the Gray, Our Last Toast, Light, and The King's Picture. They fall naturally into the companionship of this volume, and are not generally accessible to a large body of readers of poetry. Rain on the Roof is included for the reason assigned in an accompanying note. The Water-Wheel has been a fugitive without a father so long, that this opportunity was taken to name its author. William Cullen Bryant had the courage to give the Beautiful Snow a place in his Library of Poetry and Song, although denied sanctuary by Dana and other editors. As it appears in this volume the last verse has been restored. Some readers may be interested in comparing it with the Beautiful Snow written by Major Sigourney, who was long credited with the authorship of the more famous poem.
EXPLANATORY.

As the reader comes to the end of a poem after poem in this collection he may take the pen of a master, but without a sign to show whence it came, he must remark the result of one of the most inexcusable faults of modern journalism. Some newspapers make it a rule not to publish the names of their own writers who contribute poetry, while others systematically reprint verses with only the name of the publication from which they are clipped, ignoring the signature appended to the original verse. From the blank spaces at the foot of the unclaimed poems in this volume there rises an appeal to the publishers of newspapers to do a small justice to the minor poets of the English tongue. It says with irresistible logic, "If a poem is worth publishing at all, its author is worthy of recognition."

Little more remains to be said. It is not pretended that all the selections herein were written within the years mentioned on the titlepage. Indeed, some of them are "old vagrants," and the date of many more it is impossible to fix, for newspaper poetry travels in cycles, the same piece turning up in the same "Poet's Corner" about once in seven years. Unlike standard collections from the best authors, this volume contains a very small percentage of poems to be found elsewhere. It preserves many that would otherwise have perished by the wayside,—lost for want of a collector. It is sui generis. Perhaps it may inspire future editions to which a more exacting standard of excellence can be applied. If in its pages there is shown the possession of a discriminating judgment regarding the treasures "more golden than gold," irrespective of their lovely source, let it be attributed to an early study of Mr. Francis Turner Palgrave's Golden Treasury, which I regret to say some ill-equipped editor has attempted to gild with modern alloy.

If the pleasure I have taken in collecting my scraps here, there, and everywhere, and the labor I have bestowed in bringing them within the compass of this volume,—the doubting judgment respecting some and the regret of rejecting others,—if this shall be the means of preserving many of the better fugitive verses of the period; if to any man or woman, youth or maiden, it shall give a worthy book to take from the shelf when the tasks for the day are all done; if any shall find herein some familiar but misled verse; if its pages shall recall forgotten scenes to some and whisper in the ear of "uneventful toil" some strains of the music that is everywhere; if its leaves shall bring a balm of hope, encouragement, and sweet content to some despondent heart; if its final moral shall teach some frail and weary wight that love, truth, and mirth are unfailing comforters, comrades, friends,—I shall be satisfied.

CHICAGO, October, 1885.

S. T.
CONTENTS

Index of Titles

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Index of Titles</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>OF POETS AND POETRY</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>FOR CHRISTMAS TIDE</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>UNDER THE OPEN SKY</td>
<td>91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP</td>
<td>123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>ECHOES OF THE PAST</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>IN THE TWILIGHT</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>HOME AND FIRESIDE</td>
<td>217</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>HOPES, ENCOURAGEMENT, AND CONTENTMENT</td>
<td>233</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>WITH A STORY TO TELL</td>
<td>329</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>PARTING AND ABSENCE</td>
<td>355</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TRAGEDY AND SORROW</td>
<td>365</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>EVERY-DAY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS</td>
<td>381</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>WAR AND PEACE</td>
<td>405</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, AND EPIGRAPH</td>
<td>421</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>INDEX OF FIRST LINES</td>
<td>453</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Title</td>
<td>Page</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Accursed</td>
<td>366</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Across the Lot&quot;</td>
<td>325</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Afeared of a Gal</td>
<td>445</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aftermath, The</td>
<td>199</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age of Love, The</td>
<td>133</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Girl's a Girl for A' That</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ah! Me</td>
<td>118</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>All the Same In the End</td>
<td>429</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antony and Cleopatra</td>
<td>143</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Any One Will Do</td>
<td>431</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ash Pool, The</td>
<td>395</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asking</td>
<td>372</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>As Pebbles In the Sea</td>
<td>265</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Astronomical</td>
<td>437</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At Home</td>
<td>217</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At Last</td>
<td>410</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At Sea</td>
<td>185</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At the Court-House Door</td>
<td>392</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At the Loom</td>
<td>285</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At the Piano</td>
<td>212</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Autumn</td>
<td>112</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby In Church</td>
<td>20</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby-Land</td>
<td>37</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby Over the Way, The</td>
<td>61</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby’s Letter</td>
<td>48</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby’s Rattle, A</td>
<td>43</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bald-headed Tyrant, The</td>
<td>267</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bar-Tender’s Story, The</td>
<td>100</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bean Blossoms</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful Grandmamma</td>
<td>19</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful Snow</td>
<td>371</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful Snow</td>
<td>370</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Before Sailing</td>
<td>337</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bertie’s Philosophy</td>
<td>66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Better to Climb and Fall</td>
<td>249</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beyond the Haze</td>
<td>266</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Bide a Wee, and Dinna Fret”</td>
<td>209</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Billy’s Rose</td>
<td>339</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bird on the Telegraph Wire, The</td>
<td>96</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birthday Greeting, A</td>
<td>102</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blue and the Grey, The</td>
<td>473</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Francis Miles Flish</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>James Hendry</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>James W. Watson</td>
<td>19</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Major Sigourney</td>
<td>370</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eva M. Tappan</td>
<td>66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>S. E. G.</td>
<td>261</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>M. E. P.</td>
<td>102</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Francis Miles Flish</td>
<td>473</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
INDEX OF TITLES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Vagrant, A</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Violet's Grave, The</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wabash Violets</td>
<td>394</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Waiting</td>
<td>246</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wanderer, The</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Watching for Papa</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Water-Lily, The</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Water-Mill, The</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Welcome, Little Stranger</td>
<td>29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We Love but Few</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We Shall be Satisfied</td>
<td>283</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Have I Done?</td>
<td>272</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What House to Like</td>
<td>301</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is His Creed?</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is Life?</td>
<td>235</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Life Hath</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What My Lover Said</td>
<td>260</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What They Dream and Said</td>
<td>257</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When My Ship Comes In</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the Corn Come Home</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;When the Frost is on the Punkin&quot;</td>
<td>213</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When Will Love Come?</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where Ignorance is Bliss</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>While We May</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who Gather Gold</td>
<td>220</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who'll Tend Baby?</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why?</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why Drink Wine</td>
<td>417</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why Is It So?</td>
<td>252</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why Truth Goes Naked</td>
<td>422</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Winter</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Winter</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>With the Tide</td>
<td>281</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Woman's Complaint, A</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Woman's Wish, A</td>
<td>212</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Week</td>
<td>264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work</td>
<td>268</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>World and I, The</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yearning</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Yes&quot;</td>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yes</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yes!</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yes!</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zoology</td>
<td>435</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

PART I.

Of Poets and Poetry.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

PART I.

Of Poets and Poetry.

An Invocation to Poesy.

Stay with me, Poesy! playmate of childhood!
Friend of my manhood! delight of my youth!
Roamer with me over valley and wildwood,
Searching for loveliness, groping for Truth.
Stay with me, dwell with me, spirit of Poesy;
Dark were the world if thy bloom should depart;
Glory would cease in the sunlight and starlight,
Freshness and courage would fade from my heart.

Stay with me, comfort me, now more than ever,
When years stealing over me lead me to doubt
If men, ay, and women, are all we believed them
When we two first wandered the green earth about!
Stay with me, strengthen me, soother, adorer,
Last knowledge, not wisdom, should cumber my brain,
And tempt me to sit in the chair of the scorners,
And say, with sad Solomon, all things are vain.

Stay with me, lend me thy magical mirror,
Show me the darkness extinguished in light;
Show me to-day's little triumph of Error
Foiled by to-morrow's great triumph of Right!
Stay with me, nourish me, robe all creation
In colors celestial of amber and blue;
Magnify littleness, glorify commonness,
Pull down the false and establish the true.

Oliver Wendell Holmes.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Stay with me, Poesy! Let me not stagnate!
Despairing with fools, or believing with knaves,
That men must be either the one or the other, —
Victors or victims, oppressors or slaves!
Stay with me, cling to me, while there is life in me!
Lead me, assist me, direct and control.
Be in the shade what thou wert in the sunshine,
Source of true happiness, light of my soul!

Belgravia.  CHARLES MACKAY.

—

THE POETIC MYSTERY.
(Suggested by "Alice in Wonderland.")

"POET, sit and sing to me;
Sing of how you make your rhymes,
Tweedledum and tweedledee,
I have tried it fifty times,
When I have a perfect sense,
Then I have imperfect sounds;
Vice versa! Tell me whence
You get both, I neither."  "Zounds!"

Cried the poet, "Don't you see
Easy 'tis as rolling log,
Holding ed or catching flea,
Meeting friend or leaving grog!
No such matter should annoy,
Deep the poet never delves;
Take care of the sense, my boy,
And the sounds care for themselves."

—

NOCTURNE.
(An Echo of Chopin.)

"When we seek to explain our musical emotions, we look about for images calculated to excite similar emotions, and strive to convey through those images to others the effect produced by music on ourselves." — HAWTHORNE,

Music and Morals.

WIND, and the sound of a sea
Heard in the night from afar,
Spending itself on an unknown shore,
Feeling its way o'er an unseen floor
Lighted by moon nor star;

OF POETS AND POETRY.

Telling a tale to the listening ear
Of wounds and woes that the rolling year
Brought to the human heart;
Telling of passion and innermost pain,
Sinking and swooning, and growing again,
As the wind and the waves take part;
Lifting a voice to the voiceless skies,
Tender entreaties that faint for replies,

Born of a secret despair;
Fluttering back on the clear tide of tone,
Gathering in force till the melody's grown
Strong to interpret the accents unknown
Haunting the dark fields of air;
Speaking the longings of life, the full soul's
Hidden desires in music that rolls
Wave-like in search of a shore;
Eddies of harmony, floating around,
Widen in circles of lessening sound,
Die in the distance, till silence is found
And earth redemands us once more.

All the Year Round.

POETRY AND THE POOR.

"The world is very beautiful!" I said,
As, yesterday, beside the brimming stream,
Glad and alone, I watched the tremulous gleam
Slant through the wintry wood, green carpeted
With moss and fern and curving bramble spray,
And bronze the thousand russet margin-reeds,
And in the sparkling holly glint and play,
And kindle all the brier's flaming scads.

"The world is very horrid!" I sigh,
As, in my wonted ways, today I tread
Chill streets, deformed with dim monotony,
Hiding strange mysteries of unknown dread,—
The reeking court, the breathless fever-sin
The haunts where things unholy throng and brood;
Grim crime, the fierce despair of strong-armed men,
Child infancy, and shameless womanhood.

And men have looked upon this piteous thing,—
Blank lives unvisited by beauty's spell,—
And said, "Let be: it is not meet to bring
Dreams of sweet freedom to the prison cell;
Sing them no songs of things all bright and fair,
Paint them no visions of the glad and free,
Lest with purged sighs their miseries they see,
And through vain longings pass to blank despair."
O brother, treading ever-darkening ways,
O sister, whelmed in ever-deepening care,
Would God we might unfold before your gaze
Some vision of the pure and true and fair!
Better to know, though sadder things be known,
Better to see, though tears half blind the sight,
Than thraldom to the sense, and heart of stone,
And horrible contentment with the night.

Oh, bring we then all sweet and gracious things
To touch the lives that lie so chill and dear,
That they may dream of some diviner sphere,
Whence each soft ray of love and beauty springs!
Each good and perfect gift is from above,
And there is healing for earth's direst woes;
God hath unsealed the springs of light and love,
To make the desert blossom as the rose.

The Spectator.

W. WALSHAM BEDFORD.

THE RAIN UPON THE ROOF.

Long ago a poet dreaming,
Weaving fancy's warp and woof,
Penned a tender, soothing poem
On the "Rain upon the Roof."

Once I read it, and its beauty
Filled my heart with memories sweet;
Days of childhood fluttered round me,
Violets sprang beneath my feet.
And my gentle, loving mother
Spoke again in accents mild,
Curbing every wayward passion
Of her happy, thoughtless child.
Then I heard the swallows twittering
Underneath the cabin eaves,
And the laughing shout of Willie
Up among the maple leaves.
Then I blessed the poet's dreaming—
Blessed his fancy's warp and woof,
And I wept o'er memories treasured,
As the rain fell on the roof.

Years ago I lost the poem,
But its sweetness lingered still,
As the freshness of the valley
Marks where flowed the springtime rill.
Lost to reach, but not to feeling;
For the rain-drop never fails

RAIN ON THE ROOF.

When the humd shadows hover
Over all the starry spheres,
And the melancholy darkness
Gently weeps in rainy tears,
What a joy to press the pillow
Of a cottage-chamber bed,
And to listen to the patter
Of the soft rain overhead!

Every tinkle on the shingles
Has an echo in the heart,
And a thousand dreamy fancies
Into busy being start;

O'er my head with pattering music,
But it peoples memory's halls
With the old familiar faces
Loved and treasured long ago,
Treasured now as in life's springtime,—
For no change my heart can know.
And I live again my childhood
In the home far, far away:
Roam the woodland, orchard, wildwood,
With my playmates still at play;
Then my gray hairs press the pillow,
Holding all the world aloof,
Dreaming sweetly as I listen
To the rain upon the roof.

Every pattering drop that falleth
Seemeth like an angel's tread,
Bringing messages of mercy
To the weary heart and head.
Pleasant thoughts of years departed,
Pleasant soothenings for today,
Earnest longings for to-morrow,
Hoping for the far away;
For I know each drop that falleth
Comes to bless the thirsty earth,
Making seed to bud and blossom,
Springing all things into birth.
As the radian bow that scattereth
All our faithlesswees with proof
Of a seedtime and a harvest,
So the rain upon the roof.

MRS. F. B. GAGE.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

And a thousand recollections
Weave their air-threads into woof,
Are listen to the patter
Of the rain upon the roof.

Now in memory comes my mother
As she used in years gone,
To survey her darling dreamers
Ere she left them till the dawn:
Oh! I see her leaning o'er me,
As I list to this refrain
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

Then my little seraph sister,
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright-eyed cherub brother—
A serene, angelic pair!
Glide around my watchful pillow,
With their praise or mild reproof,
As I listen to the murmure
Of the soft rain on the roof.

And another comes to thrill me
With her eyes' delicious blue;
And forget, I, gazing on her,
That her heart was all untrue;
I remember that I loved her
As I ne'er may love again,
And my heart's quick pulses vibrate
To the patter of the rain.

There is nought in art's bravura
That can work with such a spell
In the spirit's pure deep fountains,
Whence the holy passions swell,
As that melody of Nature,
That subdued, subduing strain,
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

Coates Kinney.

NOTE.—This charming poem was so long a vagrant, that its text became very much corrupted until the author furnished a version for publication in which the last verse read as follows:

Art hath sought of tone or cadence
That can work with such a spell
In the soul's mysterious fountains,
Whence the tears of rapture well,
As that melody of Nature,
That subdued, subduing strain,
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

OF POETS AND POETRY.

It also contained several minor differences in reading from the original. Where considerable improvements, they have been adopted; but as a poet's first thoughts are often his best thoughts, I have taken the liberty to follow original "copy" where it seemed to claim best with the patter of the rain. I was the more emboldened to do this by the fact that poets are proverbially unsafe revisers of their own work! William Cullen Bryant edited the life out of many of his younger passages, while Tennyson in later days has restored the spirit and force out of some of his earlier work.

A DEED AND A WORD.

A little stream had lost its way
Amid the grass and fern;
A passing stranger scooped a well,
Where weary men might turn;
He walled it in, and hung with care
A lattice at the brink;
He thought not of the deed he did,
But judged that all might drink.
He passed again, and lo! the well,
By summer never dried.
Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues,
And saved a life beside.

A nameless man, amid a crowd
That thronged the daily mart,
Let fall a word of hope and love,
Unstilled, from the heart;
A whisper on the tumult thrown,
A transient breath—
It raised a brother from the dust,
It saved a soul from death.
O germ! O fount! O word of love!
O thought at random cast!
Ye were but little at the first,
But mighty at the last.

Charles Mackay.

1 Here, on reading the note in manuscript, Mr. Francis F. Browne interjected the query, "Is it a fact?" and quoted the following verses from Gautier, as translated by Austin Dobson:

"O poet! then forbear
The loosely-sanded verse;
Choose rather these to wear
The baskin, straight and terse.

"Leave to the tyro's hand
The limp and shapeless style;
See that thy form demand
The labor of the line."
THE KING'S PICTURE.

The true king from the council chamber
Came, weary and sore of heart;
He called to Jiff, the painter,
And spoke to him thus apart:
I am sickened of the faces ignoble,
Hypocrites, cowards, and knaves;
I shall shrink in their shrunken measure,
Chief slave in a realm of slaves.

Paint me a true man's picture,
Gracious, and wise, and good.
Dowered with the strength of heroes
And the beauty of womanhood.
It shall hang in my inner chamber,
That, thither when I retire,
It may fill my soul with its grandeur,
"And warm it with sacred fire."

So the artist painted the picture,
And it hung in the palace hall;
Never a thing so lovely
Had garnished the stately wall.
The king, with head uncovered,
Gazed on it with rapt delight,
Till it suddenly wore strange meaning—
Baffled his questioning sight.

For the form was the supplest courtier's,
Perfect in every limb;
But the bearing was that of the henchman
Who filled the flagons for him;
The brow was a priest's, who pondered
His parchment early and late;
The eye was the wandering minstrel's,
Who sang at the palace gate.

The lips, half sad and half mirthful,
With a fitful trembling grace,
Were the very lips of a woman
He had kissed in the market-place;
But the smiles which her lips transfigured,
As a rose with its shimmer of dew,
Was the smile of the wife who loved him,
Queen Ethelyn, good and true.

Then, "Learn, O King," said the artist,
"This truth that the picture tells—
That in every form of the human
Some hint of the highest dwells;

THE HUMBLER POETS.

That, scanning each living temple
For the place that the veil is thin,
We may gather by beautiful glimpses
The form of the God within."

Helen B. Bostwick.

UNSPOKEN WORDS.

The kindly words that rise within the heart,
And thrill it with their sympathetic tone,
But die ere spoken, fail to play their part,
And claim a merit that is not their own.
The kindly word unspoken is a sin,—
A sin that wraps itself in purest guise,
And tells the heart that, doubting, looks within,
That not in speech, but thought, the virtue lies.

But 'tis not so; another heart may thirst
For that kind word, as Hagar in the wild—
Poor banished Hagar!—prayed a well might burst
From out the sand to save her parching child.
And loving eyes that cannot see the mind
Will watch the unexpected movement of the lips.
Ah! can you let its cutting silence wind
Around that heart and scathe it like a whip?

Unspoken words like treasures in a mine
Are valueless until we give them birth;
Like unfound gold their hidden beauties shine,
Which God has made to bless and gild the earth.
How sad 't would be to see the master's hand
Strike glorious notes upon a voiceless lute!
But oh, what pain when, at God's own command,
A heart-string thrills with kindness, but is mute!

Then hide it not, the music of the soul,
Dear sympathy expressed with kindly voice,
But let it like a shining river
To deserts dry—to hearts that would rejoice.
Oh, let the symphony of kindly words
Sound for the poor, the friendless, and the weak,
And He will bless you! He who struck the chords
Will strike another when in turn you seek.
IT IS COMMON.

So are the stars and the arching skies,
So are the smiles in the children's eyes;
Common the life-giving breath of the spring;
So are the songs which the wild birds sing.
—Blessed be God, they are common.

Common the grass in its glowing green;
So is the water's glistening sheen;
Common the springs of love and mirth;
So are the holiest gifts of earth.

Common the fragrance of rosy June;
So is the generous harvest moon,
So are the towering, mighty hills,
So are the twittering, trickling rills.

Common the beautiful tints of the fall;
So is the sun which is over all;
Common the rain, with its pattering feet;
So is the bread which we daily eat.
—Blessed be God, it is common.

So is the sea in its wild unrest;
Kissing forever the earth's brown breast;
So is the voice of unifying prayer,
Evermore piercing the ambient air.

So unto all are the "promises" given,
So unto all is the hope of heaven;
Common the rest from the weary strife;
So is the life which is after life.
—Blessed be God, it is common.

RECIPE FOR A POEM.

Take for your hero some thoroughbred scamp,—
Miner, or pilot, or jockey, or tramp,—
Gambler (of course), drunkard, bully, and cheat,
Peddle princes, in way of deceit;
So fond of the ladies, he's given to bigamy
(Better, perhaps, if you make it polygamy);
Pepper his talk with the raciest slang;
Culled from the haunts of his rude, vulgar gang;
Seasoned with blasphemy—lard him with curses;
Serve him up hot in your "dialect" verse—
Properly dished, he'd excite a sensation,
And tickle the taste of our delicate nation.
PART II.

Among the Little Folk.
PART II.

Among the Little Folk.

BABY-LAND.

"How many miles to Baby-land?"
"Any one can tell;
Up one flight,
To the right;
Please to ring the bell."

"What can you see in Baby-land?"
"Little folks in white—
Downy heads,
Cradle-beds,
Faces pure and bright!"

"What do they do in Baby-land?"
"Dream and wake and play,
Laugh and crow,
Shout and grow;
Jolly times have they!"

"What do they say in Baby-land?"
"Why, the oddest things;
Might as well
Try to tell
What a birdie sings!"

"Who is the Queen of Baby-land?"
"Mother, kind and sweet;
And her love,
Born above,
Guides the little feet."
NELLY TELLS HOW BABY CAME.

There's no use of your talking, for mamma told me so,
And if there's any one that does, my mamma ought to know;
For she has been to Europe and seen the Pope at Rome,
Though she says that was before I came to live with her at home.

You see we had no baby, — unless you call me one,
And I have grown so big, you know, 'twould have to be in fun, —
When I went to see grandma, about two weeks ago,
And now we've one, a little one, that squirms and wiggles so.

And mamma says an angel came down from heaven above,
And brought this baby to her for her and me to love;
And it's got the cutestest of feet, as little as can be,
And shining eyes and curly hair, and hands you scarce can see.

And then it never cries a bit, like some bad babies do;
And papa says it looks like me — I don't think so, do you?
For I'm a girl and it's a boy, and boys I can't endure;
Unless they're babies like our own, they'll plague and tease you, sure.

But you say the angel didn't come; now you just tell me why;
The Bible says there's angels in heaven, and that's up in the sky;
And Christ loves little babies, and God made everything,
And if the angels didn't, who did our baby bring?

You can't tell: no, I guess you can't, but mamma ought to know,
For it's her baby — hers and ours — and mamma told me so;
And they don't make any cunning things like him on earth, you see.
For no wax doll, with real hair, is half so nice as he.

I know an angel brought him, and I think one brought me too;
Though I don't just now remember, and so can't tell, can you?
But mamma knows; and this I know, — the baby was n't home
When I went away, and now he is. — If you want to see him, come.

For mamma says if I am good I can kiss him every day,
And we'll kiss him now, and then go out and have a nice long play;
And if anybody asks you how babies come and go,
Why, tell them it's the angels, for mamma told me so.

THOMAS S. COLLIER.

WELCOME, LITTLE STRANGER.

(By A Displaced Three-Year-Old.)

Mozer bought a baby,
'Tite bitsey sing:
Sinks I mos' could put him
From my yubber ying.
Ain't he awful ugly?
Ain't he awful pink?
"Just come down from heaven" —
Yat's a fag, I sink.

Doctor tol' nozzer
Great big awful lie;
Nose ain't out o' joints, zen,
Yat ain't why I cry.
Mamma stays up in bedroom —
Guess he makes her sick.
Frow him in the gutter,
Beat him wiz a stick.

Cuddle him and love him!
Call hum "Blessed sing"!
Don't care if my kite ain't
Got a bit of string!
Send me off with Bridget
Every single day, —
"Be a good boy, Charley,
Run away and play."

Said "I ought to love him!"
No, I won't no sur!
Nassy cryin' baby,
Not got any hair.
Got all my nice kisses,
Got my place in bed, —
Mean to take my drumsticks
And beat him on the head.

—

ONLY A BABY.

(To A Little One Just a Week Old.)

Only a baby,
'Thout any hair,
'Cept just a little
Fuzz here and there.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Only a baby,
Name you have none,
Barefooted and dimpled,
Sweet little one.

Only a baby,
Teeth none at all;
What are you good for,
Only to squall?

Only a baby,
Just a week old;
What are you here for,
You little scold?

BABY'S REPLY.

Only a baby!
What sood I be?
Lots o' big folks
Been little like me.

Ain't dot any hair?
'Es I have, too;
S'pos'n' I had n't;
Dess it too drow.

Not any teeth —
Would n't have one;
Don't dit my dinner
Gna win' a bone.

What am I here for?
'At's petty mean;
Who's dot a better right
'Tever you've seen?

What am I doud for,
Did you say?
Eber so many sings
Ebery day.

Tourse I squall at times,
Sometimes I bawly;
Zey dassn't spank me,
Taus I 'm so small.

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

Only a baby!
'Es, sir, 'at's so;
'N' if you only tood,
You'd be one, too.

'At 's all I've to say,
You're moe' too old;
Dess I'll det into bed,
'Toes dettin' cold.

THE LAST ARRIVAL.

There came to port last Sunday night
The queerest little craft,
Without an inch of rigging on;
I looked and looked — and laughed!
It seemed so curious that she Should cross the unknown water
And moor herself within my room —
My daughter! oh, my daughter!

Yet by these presents witness all
She's welcome fifty times,
And comes consigned in hope and love
And common metre rhymes.
She has no manifest but this;
No flag floats o'er the water;
She's rather new for our marine —
My daughter! oh, my daughter!

Ring out, wild bells, and tame ones too!
Ring out the lover's moon!
Ring in the little worsted socks!
Ring in the bib and spoon!
Ring out the nurse! Ring in the nurse!
Away with paper, pen, and ink!
My daughter! oh, my daughter!

THE "COMING MAN."

A pair of very chubby legs
Encased in scarlet hose;
A pair of little stubby boots
With rather doubtful toes;
A little kit, a little coat,
Cut as a mother can,
And lo! before us strides in state
The Future's "coming man."

His eyes, perchance, will read the stars,
And search their unknown ways;
Perchance the human heart and soul
Will open to their gaze;
Perchance their keen and flashing glance
Will be a nation's light,—
Those eyes that now are wistful bent
On some "big fellow's" kite.

That brow where mighty thought will dwell
In solemn, secret state;
Where fierce ambition's restless strength
Shall war with future fate.
Where science from now hidden caves
Now treasures shall pour;
'Tis knit now with a troubled doubt,
Are two, or three cents, more?

Those lips that, in the coming years,
Will picad, or pray, or teach;
Whose whispered words, on lightning flash,
From world to world may reach;
That, sternly grave, may speak command,
Or, smiling, win control;
Are coxing now for gingerbread
With all a baby's soul!

Those hands — those little busy hands —
So sticky, small, and brown.
Those hands, whose only mission seems
To pull all order down, —
Who knows what hidden strength may lie
Within their future grasp,
Though now 'tis but a taffy-stick
In sturdy hold they clasp?

Ah, blessings on those little hands,
Whose work is yet undone!
And blessings on those little feet,
Whose race is yet unrun!
And blessings on the little brain
That has not learned to plan!
What'er the Future hold in store,
God bless the "coming man!"

THE BALD-HEADED TYRANT.

Oh! the quietest home on earth had I,
No thought of trouble, no hint of care;
Like a dream of pleasure the days flew by,
And peace had folded her pinions there.
But one day there joined in our household band
A bald-headed tyrant from No-man's-land.

Oh the despot came in the dead of night,
And no one ventured to ask him why;
Like slaves we trembled before his might,
Our hearts stood still when we heard him cry;
For never a soul could his power withstand,
That bald-headed tyrant from No-man's-land.

He ordered us here, and he sent us there, —
Though never a word could his small lips speak, —
With his toothless gums and his vacant stare,
And his helpless limbs so frail and weak;
Till I cried, in a voice of stern command,
"Go up, thou bald-head from No-man's-land!"

But his abject slaves they turned on me;
Like the bears in Scripture they'd read me there,
The while they worshipped on bent knee
The ruthless wretch with the missing hair;
For he rules them all with relentless hand,
This bald-headed tyrant from No-man's-land.

Then I searched for help in every clime,
For peace had fled from my dwelling now,
Till I finally thought of old Father Time,
And now before him I made my bow:
"Wilt thou deliver me out of his hand,
This bald-headed tyrant from No-man's-land?"

Old Time he looked with a puzzled stare,
And a smile came o'er his features grim:
"I'll take the tyrant under my care;
Watch what my hour-glass does for him.
The veriest humbug that ever was planned
Is this same bald-head from No-man's-land."

Old Time is doing his work full well:
Much less of might does the tyrant wield;
But, ah! with sorrow my heart will swell
And sad tears fall as I see him yield.
Could I stay the touch of that shrivelled hand,
I would keep the bald-head from No-man's-land.
THE HUMBLER PORTS.

For the loss of peace I have ceased to care;
Like other vessels I've learned, forsooth,
To love the wretch who forgot his hair
And hurried along without a thought;
And he rules me too with his tiny hand,
This bald-headed tyrant from No-man's-land.

---

A HINT.

Our Daisy lay down
In her little nightgown,
And kissed me again and again,
On forehead and cheek,
On lips that would speak,
But found themselves shut to their gain.

Then foolish, absurd,
To utter a word,
I asked her the question so old,
That wife and that lover
Ask over and over,
As if they were surer when told.

There, close at her side,
"Do you love me?" I cried;
She lifted her golden-crowned head,
A puzzled surprise
Shone in her gray eyes—
"Why, that's why I kiss you!" she said.

---

OUR DARLING.

Bounding like a football,
Kicking at the door;
Falling from the table-top,
Sprawling on the floor;
Smashing cups and saucers,
Splitting dolly's head;
Putting little pussy cat
Into baby's bed;
Building shops and houses,
Spoiling father's hat;
Hiding mother's precious keys
Underneath the mat;

---

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

Jumping on the fender,
Poking at the fire;
Dancing on his little legs,—
Legs that never tire;
Making mother's heart leap
Fifty times a day;
Aping everything we do,
Every word we say;
Shouting, laughing, tumbling,
Roaring with a will,
Anywhere and everywhere,
Never, never still;
Present—bringing sunshine;
Absent—leaving night;
That's our precious darling,
That's our heart's delight.

---

THE NEW BABY.

I'm a poor little sorrowful baby,
For Bidget is way down stairs,
The titten has statched my finder,
And dolly won't say herayers.
Ain't seen my bootful mamma
Since ever so long ado,
And I ain't her tunningest baby
No longer, for Bidget says so.

My mamma's dot a new baby;
Dod diddive it, he did, yesterday;
And it kies, and it kies, so deful,
I wish he would take it away.
Don't want no sweet little sister,
I want my dood mamma, I do,
I want her to tis me, and tis me,
And tall me her pessus Lulu.

Oh, here turns nurse wis the baby!
It seez me yite out of its eyes;
I dess we will keep it, and dive it
Some tandy whenever it kies;
I dess I will dive it my dolly
To play wis 'most every day;
And I dess, I dess — say, Bidget,
Ask Dod not to take it away.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

WASHING-DAY.

While mother is tending baby
We'll help her all we can;
For I'm her little toddlekins,
And you're her little man.
And Neil will bring the basket,
For she's the biggest daughter,
And I'll keep rubbing, rubbing,
And you'll pour in the water.
And now we'll have to hurry,
Because it's getting late;
Poor dolly is n't dressed yet,
But dolly'll have to wait.
I'll pour, and you can rub 'em,
Whichever you had rather;
But seems to me, if I keep on,
We'll get a quicker father.
Maybe when mother sees us
Taking so much troubles,
She'll let us put our pipes in
And blow it full of bubbles.
But now we'll have to hurry,
Because it's getting late;
And dolly is n't dressed yet,
But dolly'll have to wait.

Hearth and Home.

BABY'S LETTER.

Dear ole unkle, I dot oor letter:
My ole mammy, she ditten better.
She every day little bit stronger,
Don't mean to be sick berry much longer.

Daddy's so fat, can't hardly stagger;
Mammy says he jinks too much lager.
Dear little baby had a bad colic,
Had to take tree drops nassy paleygolic.

Toot a dose of tatinip, felt worse as ever.
Shasn't take no more tatinip, never!
Wind on stomit, felt pootty bad,
Worse fit of sickness ever I had!

Ever had belly-ate, ole unkle Bill?
'Lasn't no fun now, say what oo will.
I used to sleep all day and cry all night;
Don't do so now, 'cause it ain't yite.

WASHING-DAY.

While mother is tending baby
We'll help her all we can;
For I'm her little toddlekins,
And you're her little man.
And Neil will bring the basket,
For she's the biggest daughter,
And I'll keep rubbing, rubbing,
And you'll pour in the water.
And now we'll have to hurry,
Because it's getting late;
Poor dolly is n't dressed yet,
But dolly'll have to wait.
I'll pour, and you can rub 'em,
Whichever you had rather;
But seems to me, if I keep on,
We'll get a quicker father.
Maybe when mother sees us
Taking so much troubles,
She'll let us put our pipes in
And blow it full of bubbles.
But now we'll have to hurry,
Because it's getting late;
And dolly is n't dressed yet,
But dolly'll have to wait.

Hearth and Home.

BABY'S LETTER.

Dear ole unkle, I dot oor letter:
My ole mammy, she ditten better.
She every day little bit stronger,
Don't mean to be sick berry much longer.

Daddy's so fat, can't hardly stagger;
Mammy says he jinks too much lager.
Dear little baby had a bad colic,
Had to take tree drops nassy paleygolic.

Toot a dose of tatinip, felt worse as ever.
Shasn't take no more tatinip, never!
Wind on stomit, felt pootty bad,
Worse fit of sickness ever I had!

Ever had belly-ate, ole unkle Bill?
'Lasn't no fun now, say what oo will.
I used to sleep all day and cry all night;
Don't do so now, 'cause it ain't yite.

My Lost Baby.

Comes little Maud and stands by my knee,
Her soft eyes filled with a troubled joy;
And her wondering heart is perplexed to see
Her babyhood lost in our baby boy.

For Maud was a babe but a week ago,—
A gentle, lovable, clinging thing;—
Now we are saddened but pleased to know
The queen is dethroned and there reigns a king,—

A tiny king, with a cheek like down;
With dark, indefinite-colored eyes;
With hair of the softest satiny brown;
Who doubles his farts and hiccoughs and cries;

Who groans, grinaces, and paws the air,
And twists his mouth in a meaning less smile;
Who faces his eyes in a winkless stare,
And seems in the deepest thought the while;

A wee small king with a comical face,
Whom one moment we laugh at, the next caress;
A little monarch who holds his place
By the wondrous might of his helplessness.
Come hither, my Maud, with your wistful eyes;
Come hither, I'll lay the small tyrant down;
I'll gather you up in a glad surprise,
And press to my bosom your head of brown.

Nestle down close to your mother's breast,
Poor little babe of a week gone by;
Find for a moment a haven of rest, —
Clasping my neck with a satisfied sigh.

Alas! I have lost her, she is no more
The baby girl that I loved to press
Close to my heart; she's a woman before
This animate atom of helplessness.

My heart is sad for my girl to-day;
In a moment babyhood's privileged years
Have passed from her life forever away,
We see them vanish through misty tears.

Farewell, sweet babe of a week ago!
Thou hast reached the land of the nevermore,
And Maud's little feet are standing on
The perilous heights of childhood's shore.

---

A BABY'S RATTLE.

I.

Only a baby's rattle,
And yet if you offered me gold
More than my heart could dream of,
Or jewels my hand could hold.

For that worthless toy, I should answer,
You cannot buy the tears
Of love and joy, the remembrance
Of all that it means for all years.

The old associations
Of the years that have waned and fled
Lie there with the childish token
That was clasped by a hand that is dead.

And beyond all earthly treasures
That prowess or brain could win,
I prize that worn old plaything
For the memories shrined therein.

II.

There may be hope in the future
With its dreams too bright to last,
But they lack the consecration
That clings round thoughts of the past.

She came when the May-time scattered
May-birds upon bough and lea:
And the glint of the sunshine seemed sweeter,
And a new song was sung by the sea.

'Twas a page from the book of Creation,
With an imprint I knew was divine,
And I felt the infinite yearning
For the new life sprang from mine.

Ah me! how we loved our blossom!
And it scarce seems days ago
That she crowed and laughed in the summer,
And faded in winter snow.

It seems like a vision remembered
Of a death in unrestful sleep,
When fearsome thoughts come upon you
As storms brood over the deep.

And whenever I hear the laughter
That rings from a child at play,
I think of our dear dead snowdrop, —
And it seems but yesterday.

III.

The May-time had changed to summer,
And the roses of autumn come,
The birds sang bleithe in the branches,
But blither the birdie at home.

The cynic may sneer at the feeling,
For a cold, hard creed is rife;
But I know that my love for my darling
Was my purest thought in life.

She grew with the summer's fruitage,
But in warm autumnal days,
She faded, it seemed like the leaflets
That strewed the woodland ways.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

It was hard to mark, and still harder
To think that the hopes we kept
Must be buried away with old fancies,
And dreams that in silence slept.

Were we never to see her joyous
In childhood's innocent play?
Ah, no! she was called, and left us—
And it seems but yesterday.

IV.
At last—how well I remember
The long and lingering night,
When we watched by the tiny cradle
Till the morning's earliest light;

And then when the desolate morning
Shone cold through the winter bars,
Lo! God had taken our snowdrop
To blossom beyond the stars.

It was hard to bow in submission
When we thought of the vacant place,
And there within the cradle
The white little baby face.

Only one thought could comfort,
The echo of words divine,
That, tender as any mother,
By the waters of Palestine.

He spake, who bade the children
Draw near on the sacred sod,
When he stretched out hands of blessing,—
"Of such is the kingdom of God."

WATCHING FOR PAPA.

Stirr always stood upon the steps
Just by the cottage door,
Waiting to kiss me when I came
Each night home from the store.

Her eyes were like two glorious stars,
Dancing in heaven's own blue—
"Papa," she'd call like a wee bird,
"I's lookout out for oo!"

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

Alas! how sadly do our lives
Change as we onward roam!
For now no birdie voice calls out
To bid me welcome home.

No little hands stretched out for me,
No blue eyes dancing bright,
No baby face peeps from the door
When I come home at night.

And yet there's comfort in the thought
That when life's toll is o'er,
And passing through the sable flood
I gain the brighter shore,

My little angel at the gate,
With eyes divinely blue,
Will call with birdie voice, "Papa,
I's lookout out for oo!"

MATTIE'S WANTS AND WISHES.

I wants a piece of talito
To make my doll a dress;
I does n't want a big piece—
A yard 'll do, I guess.

I wish you'd fird my needle,
And find my fimbly, too—
I has such heps of ' sewin',
I don't know what to do.

My Hepay torred her apron
A tum'lin' down the stair;
And Caesar's lost his pantaloons,
And needs anozer pair.

I wants my Maud a bonnet,
She has n't none at all;
And Fred must have a jacket,
His uzer one's too small.

I wants to go to grandma's,
You promised me I might;
I know she'll like to see me—
I wants to go to-night.

She lets me wash the dishes,
And see in grandpa's watch—
Wish I'd free, four pennies,
To buy some butter-scotch.
I wants some newer mittens,
I wish you’d knit me some,
’Cause most my fingers freezes,
They leak so in the sun.
I wore it out last summer
A-pollin’ George’s sled;
I wish you would a’t laugh so —
It hurts me in my head.
I wish I had a cooky —
I’m hungry ’s I can be;
If you has it pretty large ones,
You’d better bring me free.

GRAN’MA AL’US DOES.
I wants to mend my wagon,
And has to have some nails;
Just two, free will be plenty;
We’re goin’ to haul our rails.
The splendidest cob fences
We’re makin’ ever was!
I wiz’ you’d help us find ’em —
Gran’ma al’us does.
My horse’s name in “Betsey;”
She jumped and broke her head,
I put her in the stable
And fed her milk and bread;
The stable ’s in the parlor, —
We didn’t make no muss;
I wiz’ you’d let it stay there —
Gran’ma al’us does.
I’s goin’ to the cornfield
To ride on Charlie’s plough,
I spect he’d like to have me —
I wants to go right now.
Oh, won’t I “geeup” awful,
And “whoa” like Charlie whoas!
I wiz’ you would n’t bother —
Gran’ma never does.
I wants some bread and butter,
I’s hungry worstest kind;
But Freddy mustn’t have none —
’Cause he would n’t mind.
Put plenty of sugar on it;
I’ll tell you what I knows;
It’s right to put on sugar —
Gran’ma al’us does.

THE UNFINISHED PRAYER.

“Now I lay,” — repeat it, darling.
“Lay me,” — lisped the tiny lips
Of my daughter, kneeling, bending
O’er her folded finger-tips.

“Down to sleep” — “To sleep,” she murmured,
And the curly head bent low;
“I pray the Lord,” I gently added;
You can say it all, I know.

“Pray the Lord” — the sound came faintly,
Fainter still — “My soul to keep;”
Then the tired head fairly nodded,
And the child was fast asleep.

But the dewy eyes half opened
When I clasped her to my breast,
And the dear voice softly whispered,
“Mamma, God knows all the rest.”

Oh, the trusting, sweet confiding
Of the child heart! Would that I
Thus might trust my Heavenly Father,
He who hears my feeblest cry.

“NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP.”

Golden head so lowly bending,
Little feet so white and bare,
Dewy eyes, half shut, half opened,
Lisping out her evening prayer.

Well she knows when she is saying,
“Now I lay me down to sleep,”
’Tis to God that she is praying,—
Praying him her soul to keep.

Half asleep, and murmuring faintly,
“If I should die before I wake,” —
Tiny fingers clasped so saintly,—
“I pray the Lord my soul to take.”
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Oh the rapture, sweet, unbroken, Of the soul who wrote that prayer! Children's myriad voices floating Up to heaven record it there.

If, of all that has been written, I could choose what might be mine, It should be that child's petition, Rising to the throne divine.

A LITTLE GIRL'S CURIOSITY.

My ma's been working very hard, And also very sly, And keeps her sewing out of sight, Whenever I am nigh. I asked her once what made her stop Her work when I came in; She said she only stopped to get A needle, thread, or pin.

The bureau-drawer next to mine Is locked both right and day, And when ma wants to open it She sends me off to play. I stole a peep one afternoon, Although it was not right; But oh, the little things I saw Were such a pretty sight!

The cutest, nicest little clothes, Just big enough for doll; But then I know they're not for her, She needs them not at all. I know they're not for ma nor pa, Nor me, nor brother "Hor," For we can't wear such little clothes — I wonder who they're for?

THAT BOY.

Is the house turned topsy-turvy? Does it ring from street to roof? Will the racket still continue, Spite of all your mild reproof? Are you often in a flutter? Are you sometimes thrilled with joy? Then I have my grave suspicions That you have at home — that Boy.

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

Are your walls and tables hammered? Are your nerves and ink upset? Have two eyes, so bright and roguish, Made you every care forget? Have your garden beds a prowler Who delights but to destroy? These are well-known indications That you have at home — that Boy.

Have you seen him playing circus With his head upon the mat, And his heels in mid-air twinkling — For his audience, the cat? Do you ever stop to listen, When his merry pranks annoy, — Listen to a voice that whispers, You were once just like — that Boy?

Have you heard of broken windows, And with nobody to blame? Have you seen a trousered urchin Quite unconscious of the same? Do you love a teasing mixture Of perplexity and joy? You may have a dozen daughters, But I know you've got — that Boy.

THE CHILDREN'S BEDTIME.

The clock strikes seven in the hall, The curfew of the children's day, That calls each little pattering foot From dance and song and livelong play; Their day, that in our wider light Floats like a silver day-moon white, Nor in our darkness sinks to rest, But sinks within a golden west.

Ah, tender hour that sends a drift Of children's kisses through the house, And cuckoo-notes of sweet " Good-night," And thoughts of home and heaven arouse; And a soft stir of sense and heart, As when the bee and blossom part; And little feet that patter slower, Like the last droppings of the shower.
And in the children's rooms aloft
What blossom shapes do gayly slip
Their dainty sheaths, and rosy run
From chapping hand and kissing lip.
A naked sweetness to the eye—
Blossom and babe and butterfly
In witching one so dear a sight!
An ecstasy of life and light.

And, ah, what lovely witches
Bestrew the floor,—an empty sock,
By vanished dance and song left loose
As dead bird's throat; a tiny smock
That, sure, upon some meadow grew,
And drank the heaven-sweet rains; a shoe
Scarce bigger than an acorn-cup:
Frocks that seem flowery moods cut up.

Then lily-dret in angel-white
To mother's knee they trooping come;
The soft palms fold like kissing shells,
And they and we go shining home,—
Their bright heads bowed and worshiping
As though some glory of the spring,
Some daffodil that mocks the day,
Should fold his golden palms and pray.

And gates of Paradise swing wide
A moment's space in soft accord,
And those dread angels, Life and Death,
A moment well the flaming sword,
As o'er the weary world forlorn
From Eden's secret heart is borne
That breath of Paradise most fair,
Which mothers call the "children's prayer."

Ah, deep, pathetic mystery!
The world's great woe unconscious hung,
A rain-drop on a blossom's lip,
White innocence that wooed our wrong,
And love divine that looks again,
Unconscious of the cross and pain,
From sweet child-eyes, and in that child
Sad earth and heaven reconciled.

Then, kissed, on beds we lay them down
As fragrant-white as clover's sod;
And all the upper floors grew hushed
With children's sleep, and dews of God.
And as our stars their beams do hide,
The stars of twilight, opening wide,
Take up the heavenly tale at even,
And light us on to God and heaven.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Ah, it touched the tenderest heart-strings
With a breath and force divine,
And such melodies awakened,
As no wording can define.
And I turned to see our darling,—
All forgetful of my cares,
When I saw the little creature
Slowly creeping up the stairs.
Step by step she slowly clambered
On her little hands and knees,
Keeping up a constant chatter,
Like a magpie in the trees,
Till at last she reached the topmost
When, over all her world's affairs,
She, delighted, stood a victor
After creeping up the stairs.
Fainting heart, behold an image
Of man's brief and struggling life,
Whose best prizes must be captured
With a noble, earnest strife;
Onward, upward, reaching ever,
Bending to the weight of cares,
Hoping, fearing, still expecting,
We go creeping up the stairs.
On their steps may be no carpet,
By their side may be no rail,
Hands and knees may often pain us,
And the heart may almost fail;
Still above there is the glory
Which no sinfulness impairs,
With its rest and joy forever,
After creeping up the stairs.

Burlington Haweys.
REV. W. S. McFetridge.

LITTLE GOLDENHAIR.

GOLDENHAIR climbed upon grandpapa's knee!
Dear little Goldenhair! tired was she—
All the day busy as busy could be!

Up in the morning as soon as 't was light—
Up with the birds and butterflies bright,
Skipping about till the coming of night.

Grandpapa toyed with the curls on her head;
"What has my darling been doing?" he said,
"Since she rose, with the sun from her bed?"

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

"Pitty much!" answered the sweet little one;
"I cannot tell—so much things I have done:
Played with my dolly and feasted my bun.

"And then I jumped with my little jump-ropes,
And I made bubbles out of some water and soap—
Bootheful worlds! mamma's castles of hope!

"I afterwards readed in my picture-book;
And Bella and I we went out to look
For the smooth little fishes by the side of the brook.

"And then I came home and cuted my tea,
And climbed up on grandpapa's knee;
And I jes as tired as tired can be!"

Lower and lower the little head pressed,
Until it had dropped upon grandpapa's breast!
Dear little Goldenhair! sweet be thy rest!

We are but children; the things that we do
Are as sports of a babe to the Infinite view,
That marks all our weakness, and pities it, too.

God grant that when night overshadow our way,
And we shall be called to account for our day,
He shall find us as guileless as Goldenhair lay!

And oh! when weary, may we be so blest
As to sink like the innocent child to our rest,
And to feel ourselves clasped to the Infinite breast!

BEAUTIFUL GRANDMAMMA.

GRANDMAMMA sits in her quaint arm-chair,—
Never was lady more sweet and fair!
Her gray locks ripple like silver shells,
And her brow its own calm story tells
Of a gentle life and a peacefuleven.
A trust in God and a hope in heaven!

Little girl Mary sits rocking away
In her own low seat, like some winsome day;
Two dolly babies her kisses share,
And another one lies by the side of her chair.
Mary is fair as the morning dew—
Checks of roses and ribbons of blue!
"Say, grandmamma," says the pretty elf,
"Tell me a story about yourself.
When you were little what did you play?
Was you good or naughty, the whole long day?
Was it hundreds and hundreds of years ago?
And what makes your soft hair as white as snow?

"Did you have a mamma to hug and kiss?
And a doll like this, and this, and this?
Did you have a pussy like my little Kate?
Did you go to bed when the clock struck eight?
Did you have long curls and beads like mine?
And a new silk apron, with ribbons fine?"

Grandmamma smiled at the little maid,
And laying aside her knitting, she said:
"Go to my desk and a red box you'll see;
Carefully lift it and bring it to me."
So Mary put her dollies away and ran,
Saying, "I'll be as careful as ever I can."

Then grandmamma opened the box: and lo!
A beautiful child with throat like snow,
Lips just tinted like pink shells rare,
Eyes of hazel and golden hair,
Hands all dimpled, and teeth like pearls—
Fairest and sweetest of little girls!

"Oh, who is it?" cried winsome May;
"How I wish she was here to-day!
Wouldn't I love her like everything,
And give her my new carnelian ring?
Say, dear grandmamma, who can she be?"
"Darling," said grandmamma, "that child was me!"

May looked long at the dimpled grace,
And then at the saint-like, fair old face.
"How funny!" she cried, with a smile and a kiss,
"To have such a dear little grandma as this!
Still," she added, with a smiling zest,
"I think, dear grandma, I like you best!"

So May climbed on the silken knee,
And grandma told her her history—
What plays she played, what toys she had,
How at times she was naughty, or good, or sad.
"But the best thing you did," said May, "don't you see?
Was to grow a beautiful grandma for me!"
THE HUMBLER POETS.

The roses of health are blushing
On my darling's cheek to-day;
But baby is gone from the window
Of the house that's over the way.

FRED ENGLEHARDT'S BABY.

Drum as I see, most ery day
I laugh me wild to saw der way
My schmall young baby dries to play —
Dot funny leetle baby.

When I look of dem leetle toes,
Und saw dot funny leetle nose,
Und hear der way dot rooster crows —
I schmile like I vas crazy.

Sometimes der comes a leetle shquozh,
Dots ven der vindy vind does crawl
Right in his leetle ahtomach schmall —
Dot's too bad for der baby.

Dot makes him sing at night so ahtweet,
Und gorryparrie he must eat,
Und I must chump shpy on my feet
To help dot leetle baby.

He bull's my nose und kicks my hair,
Und crawls me oder everywhere,
Und schlobber me — but what I care?
Dot vas my schmall young baby.

Around my head dot leetle arm
Vas shquozh me all so nice und warm
Oh, may dere never come some harm
To dot schmall leetle baby.

CHARLES FOLLEN ADAMS.

LEEDLE YAWCOB STRAUSS.

I haf a vunny leedle poy
Vat gomes schust to my knee;
Der quierest schap, der greatest rogue
As efer you did see.
He runs und jumps und smashes dings
In all parts of der house —
But what of dot? He vas mine son,
Mine leedle Yawcob Strauss.

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

He get der measles und der mumps,
Und cerrying dot's out;
He spils mine glass of lager beer,
Past schnuff into mine krount;
He fills mine pipe with Limburg cheese —
Dot vas der roughest chouse;
I'ld make dot from no oder poy
But leedle Yawcob Strauss.

He dakes der milkpan for a drum,
Und cuts mine cane in dwo,
To make der stlickis to beat it mit —
Mine cracious, dot vas drue!
I dinks mine head vas schplit apart,
He kicks up such a touse —
But der boys vas few
Like dot schmall Yawcob Strauss.

He asks me questions sooch as dese:
Who kays mine nose so red?
Who vas it cut dot schmoot bace oudt
Vrom der hair upon my head?
Und vere der plase goes vom der lamp
Veneer der glim I douse?
—
How gan I all dese things eggsblain
To dot schmall Yawcob Strauss?

I sometimes dink I schall go wild
Mid sooch a grazy poy,
Und wish vonce more I could haf rest
Und baassold dimes chahlow;
But ven he vas aschleep in bed,
So quiet as a mouse,
I brays der Lord, "Duke anydings,
But leaf dot Yawcob Strauss."

Indianapolis Sentinel.

CHARLES FOLLEN ADAMS.

THE GOODEST MOTHER.

Evening was falling, cold and dark,
And people hurried along the way
As if they were longing soon to mark
Their own home candle's cheering ray.

Before me toiled in the whirling wind
A woman with bundles great and small,
And after her tagged, a step behind,
The Bundle she loved the best of all.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

A dear little rolly-poly boy
With rosy cheeks, and a jacket blue,
Laughing and chattering full of joy,
And here’s what he said — I tell you true:

“You’re the goodest mother that ever was.”
A voice as clear as a forest bird’s;
And I’m sure the glad young heart had cause
To utter the sweet of the lovely words.

Perhaps the woman had worked all day
Washing or scrubbing; perhaps she sewed;
I knew, by her weary footfall’s way,
That life for her was an uphill road.

But here was a comfort. Children dear,
Think what a comfort you might give
To the very best friend you can have here,
The lady fair in whose house you live,

If once in a while you’d stop and say,—
In task or play for a moment pause,
And tell her in sweet and winning way,
“You’re the goodest mother that ever was.”

THE COB HOUSE.

Willy and Charley, eight and ten,
Were under the porch in the noontide heat;
I could see and hear the little men,
Unseen, myself, in the window-seat.

Will on a cob house was hard at work,
With a zeal that was funny enough to me.
At eight one has hardly learned to shirk;
That comes later, — as you will see.

For Charley, by virtue of riper age,
Did nothing but stand and criticize;
His hands in his pockets, stage by stage
He watched the tottering castle rise.

“And now, after all your fuss,” says he,
“S’posin’ it tumbles down again?”
“Oh, Will answers as cool as could be,
“Of course I should build it better then.”

Charley shook sagely his curly head,
Opened his eyes of dancing brown,
And then for a final poser said,
“But s’posin’ it always kept tumblin’ down?”

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

Will, however, was not of the stuff
At a loss to be taken so.
“Why, then,” he answered ready enough,
“I should keep on building it better, you know.”

And, seeing the wise world’s wisest knot
Cut at a stroke with such simple skill,
Older people than Charley, I thought,
Might learn a lesson of Master Will.

KATE PUTNAM OSGOOD.

CARD HOUSES.

My little niece and I — I read
My Plato in my easy-chair;
And she was building on the floor
A pack of cards with wondrous care.

We worked in silence, but alas!
Among the cards a mighty spill,
And then the little ape exclaimed,
“Well! Such is life! Look, Uncle Will!”

I gave a start and dropped my book,—
It was the “Phaedo” I had read,—
A sympathetic current thrilled
Like lightning through my heart and head.

I eyed with curious awe the child,
The unconscious Sibyl, where she sat,
Whose thoughtless tongue could babble forth
Strange parables of life and fate.

Yet such is life! a Babel house,
A common doom hath tumbled all,
King, queen, and knave, and plain and trump,—
A motley crew in motley fall!

We rear our hopes, no Pharaoh’s tomb,
Nor brass, could build so sure a name,
But, soon or late, a sad collapse,
And great the ruin of the same.

Ah, such is life! Oh, sad and strange
That love and wisdom so ordain!
Some ere the builder’s hands have yet
One card against another lain;
Some when the house is tiny still;
Some when you've built a little more;
And some when patience hath achieved
A second, third, or higher floor.

Or should you win the topmost stage,
Yet is the strength but toil and pain —
And here the tiny voice rejoiced,
"But I can build it up again."

My height of awe was reached. Can habes
Behold what reason scans in vain?
Ah, childhood is divine, I thought,—
Yes, Lizzie, build it up again.

Bertie's Philosophy.

Small boy Bertie,
Drumming on the pane,
Looking at the chickens,
Dragged with the rain.

Little philosopher
Wrinkles his brow,
Says, "I wonder —
I don't see how.

"Where do chickens come from?
Mamma, please to tell.
Yes, I know they come from eggs,
Know that very well.

"Course the old hen hatched 'em,
I know that; but then —
Won't you tell me truly,
Where'd they get the hen?

"S'posin' you were my boy,
All the one I had,
And big folks wouldn't tell you things,
Shouldn't you feel bad?

"Every single thing you say
I know years ago;
Where that first hen came from,
Is what I want to know."

Providence Journal.

Eva M. Tappan

Boys' Rights.

I wonder now if any one
In this broad land has heard
In favor of downtrodden boys
One solitary word?

We hear enough of "woman's rights,"
And "rights of workingmen,"
Of "equal rights," and "nation's rights,"
But pray just tell us when
Boys' Rights were ever spoken of?
Why, we've become so used
To being snubbed by every one,
And slighted and abused,
That when one is polite to us,
We open wide our eyes,
And stretch them in astonishment
To nearly twice their size!

Boys seldom dare to ask their friends
To venture in the house;
It don't come natural at all
To creep round like a mouse.
And if we should forget ourselves
And make a little noise,
Then ma or auntie sure would say,
"Oh, my! those dreadful boys!"

The girls bang on the piano
In peace, but if the boys
Attempt a tune with fife and drum,
It's "Stop that horrid noise!"

"That horrid noise!" just think of it,
When sister never fails
To make a noise three times as bad
With everlasting "scales."

Insulted thus, we lose no time
In beating a retreat;
So off we go to romp and tear
And scamper in the street.

No wonder that so many boys
Such wicked men become;
"I was better far to let them have
Their plays and games at home.
Perhaps that text the teacher quotes
Sometimes, — "I train up a child,"
— Means only, train the little girls,
And let the boys run wild.
But patience, and the time shall come
When we will all be men,
And when it does, I rather think
Wrongs will be righted then.

Carrie May.
ROSEBUD'S FIRST BALL.

"'Tis really time you were out, I think,"
Said Lady Rose to her daughter small;
"So I'll send my invitations round,
And give you, my dear, a splendid ball.

We'd best decide on your toilet first;
Your sister Jacquemane wore dark red;
But you are so much smaller than she,
I think you must wear pale pink instead.

Then, whom to invite: we can't ask all,
And yet it's hardest of all to tell
The flowers from weeds. Indeed, last year
I snubbed Field Daisy, and now she's a belle.

We'll ask the Pansies, they're always in
The best society everywhere;
The Lilies, Heliotropes, and Pinks,
Geraniums, Fuchsias, must sure be there.

Miss Mignonette is so very plain,
A favorite, though, — I'll put her down;
The Violets, I think, are away;
They're always the first to leave for town.

The Larkspurs are such old-fashioned things
It's not worth while asking them to come;
The Zinnias are coarse, Bergamote stiff,
The Marigolds better off at home.

Miss Morning Glory I'd like to ask,
But then, she never goes out at night;
She's such a delicate thing, she says,
She scents can bear a very strong light.

The Verbenas, I know, will be put out
If we don't ask them; the Petunias, too,
They are not quite au fait, but then, my dear,
They're such near neighbors, what's one to do?

I'll make out my list at once, for there
A butterfly is coming this way;
I'll send my invitations by him,—
He'll go the rounds without delay.

Dear dear! I think that to-morrow night
You'll really be out. Now listen, my child:
Don't go much with your cousin Sweet Brier;
He's very nice, but inclined to be wild."

New York Star.

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

THE LITTLE CONQUEROR.

"'Twas midnight; not a sound was heard
Within the — 'Papa, won't 'ou 'ook
An' see my pootty 'little house?
I wis 'ou wouldn't wear 'our book — "

"Within the palace where the king
Upon his couch in anguish lay — "
"Papa, pa-pa, I wis 'ou'd turn
And have a 'ittle tony play — "

"No gentle hand was there to bring
The cooling draught, or cool his brow;
His courtiers and his pages gone — "
"Turn, papa, turn; I want 'ou now — "

Down goes the book with needless force,
And with expression far from mild;
With sulen air and clouded brow
I beat myself beside my child.

Her little trusting eyes of blue
With mute surprise gaze in my face,
As if in its expression stern
Reproof and censure she could trace.

Anoa her little bosom heaves,
Her rosy lips begin to curl;
And with a quivering chin she sobs,
"Papa don't love his 'ittle dilly!"

King, palace, book, are all forgot;
My arms are round my darling thrown,—
The thundercloud has burst, and lo!
Tears fall and mingle with her own.

"LULU."

"MIDGET, gypsy, big eyed elf, little Kitty Clover,
What have you been playing at for this hour and over?
Where have you been wandering, in the name of wonder?
Were you frightened at the wind? Are you foul of thunder?
Were you in a fairies' cave while the rain was falling,
With your ears sewn tightly up, not to hear me calling?
Who has taught your hair to curl?
Where's your apron, dirty girl?"
THE HUMBLER POETS.

"Now my brains is all messed up, got too big a headful;
Fifteen questions at a time makes me up dreadful.
Course I been a visiting, me and Rainy Weather, —
Sure to find the birds at home when we go together;
Guess my ears was full of songs so I didn't hear you,
Else because you stayed at home I got too far from near you.
Once some little thing said low,
'Mamma wants you, Li'l, I know,'

'Vet it was that fancy bird that kept and kept a singing,
While the rain was coming down and thunder-bells was ringing.
'Oh, you goosey-bird,' I said, 'rains like sixty-seven,
And your song'll get so wet it can't fly up to heaven;
Did you swallow it one day when you was a drinking?
If it all the talk you've got, or only just your thinking?
Or do songs come up and pour,
And rain makes 'em bloom out?'

"Then the bird came close to me, — mamma, he did, truly, —
'Nonever told before, but I'll tell you, Li'l:
One day God got tired of heaven and the angels' singing,
Thought their harps were out of tune, made such awful dinging;
So he sang a piece of song, put some feathers round it,
Then he threw it in a tree, where some bird's name found it;
And he mixed the song and name
Till they grew the very same.'

"Mamma, what you smiling at? Had n't you better hold me?
I'll be tried a saying through what the birdie told me:
God sends word down by the rain when he wants to hear him, —
That is why the whisper-drops tinkle by so near him.
Should you think his song would lose? I can tell you better!
It don't have so far to go as my grandma's letter;
Earth and heaven's so close apart,
God can catch it in his heart."

"I was the wind that curled my hair, — didn't he fix it funny?
Combed and twisted it like this 'bout a spec of money;
'Where's my apron?' Let me see! I must think it over;
'Praid you've got a naughty girl for your Kitty Clover,
'Cause I gave that to the brook with the big stones in it,
Where it has to run across every little minute;
Covered 'em all dry and near,
So my brook won't wet its feet!"

BABY IN CHURCH.

AUNT NELLIE had fashioned a dainty thing
Of hamburg and ribbon and lace,
And mamma had said, as she settled it round
Our baby's beautiful face,

CARRIE W. THOMPSON.

Among the Little Folk.

Where the dimples play and the laughter lies
Like sunbeams hid in her violet eyes, —
"If the day is pleasant, and Baby is good,
She may go to church and wear her new hood."

Then Ben, aged six, began to tell,
In elder-brotherly way,
"How very, very good she must be
If she went to church next day."

He told of the church, the choir, and the crowd,
And the man up in front who talked so loud;
But she must not talk, nor laugh, nor sing,
But just sit as quiet as anything.

And so, on a beautiful Sabbath in May,
When the fruit-buds burst into flowers
(There was n't a blossom on bush or tree
So fair as this blossom of ours),

All in her white dress, dainty and new,
Our Baby sat in the family pew,
The grand, sweet music, the reverent air,
The solemn hush, and the voice of prayer,
Filled all her baby soul with awe,
As she sat in her little place,
And the holy look that the angels wear
Seemed pictured upon her face.
And the sweet words uttered so long ago
Came into my mind with a rhythmic flow, —
"Of such is the kingdom of heaven," said He,
And I knew He spoke of such as she."

The sweet-voiced organ pealed forth again,
The collection-box came around,
And Baby dropped her penny in,
And smiled at the clinking sound,
Alone in the choir Aunt Nellie stood,
Waiting the close of the soft prelude,
To begin her solo. High and strong
She struck the first note; clear and long
She held it, and all were charmed, but one
Who, with all the night she had,
Sprung to her little feet and cried,
"Aunt Nellie, you're being bad!"

The audience smiled, the minister coughed,
The little boys in the corner laughed,
The tenor shook like an aspen-leaf,
And hid his face in his handkerchief.
THE HUMBler POETS.

And poor Aunt Nellie could never tell
How she finished that terrible strain,
But says nothing on earth could tempe
Her to go through the scene again.
So we have decided, perhaps 'tis best,
For her sake, and ours, and all the rest,
That we wait, may be a year or two,
Ere our Baby re-enter the family pew.

WHO'LL TEND BABY?

"WHO'LL take care of the baby?"
Says Joe to Sam, in fierce debate
Upon the woman question;
"You've answered well all other points,
Now here's my last suggestion:
When woman goes to cast her vote,
Some miles away, it may be,
Who, then, I ask, will stay at home
'To rock and tend the baby?"

Quoth Sam: "I own you've made my case
Appear a little breezy;
I hoped you'd pass this question by,
And give me something easy:
But since the matter seems to turn
On this one as its axis,
Just get the one who rocked it when
'She went to pay her taxes!"

E. E.

HER NAME.

In search from "A" to "Z" they passed,
And "Marguerita" chose at last;
But thought it sounded far more sweet
To call the baby "Margaret."
When grandma saw the little pet,
She called her "darling Margaret."
Next Uncle Jack and Cousin Aggie
Sent cup and spoon to "little Maggie."
And grandpapa the right must beg
To call the lassie "bonnie Meg."
(From "Marguerita" down to "Meg")
And now she's simply "little Meg."

AMONG THE LITTLE FOLK.

WHY?

What did the baby come for?
That was the question trite
The neighbors asked of each other
That stormy winter night.
What was the need of children?
'Twas hard enough before
To keep care out of the window,—
The gray wolf from the door.

Out of the wintry barren,
Over the sleeping town,
Out of the cold, dark heaven
Drifted the snow-flakes down.
Within the low, old cottage
Flickered the candle's flame
In the dusk of the early dawning,
But never an answer came.

What did the baby come for?
A woman's heart could tell:
At touch of the tiny fingers,
Like to a fairy spell,
A heart that was hard with doubting,
A soul that was barred with sin,
Opened a side from God's ocean,
The mother-love swept in.

What did the baby come for?
A strong man's heart had grown,
Through poverty's constant grinding,
As hard as the nether stone.
Only a baby's prattle,
And yet, O wonderful song
That made a man's heart grow lighter,
Made a man's hands grow strong!

Was ever a spring or summer
That vanished on wings so fleet?
Ahi! 'twas a joy to labor,
When living had grown so sweet!
Care never came near the window,
And poverty, gaunt and grim,
Never stepped over the threshold,—
There was no place for him.

MAUD MOORE.
"ONLY A BIT OF CHILDHOOD THROWN AWAY."

What did the baby go for?
Softly the summer night
Fell like a benediction
On the baby, shrouded white.
Only two golden summers!
"I was not a life, we say,
"Only a bit of childhood
The great God threw away."

Out on the dusky meadow,
Over the slumbering town,
Out of the silent heaven
Brightly the stars looked down.
What did the baby go for?
Picked up the dawning's flame
Into the cottage window,
But never an answer came.

What did the baby go for?
Oh, thou shadow of death!
Oh, thou angel! thou demon
Icy of touch and breath!
We cry to the sunlit heavens,
And no voice answereth.

Will there ever come a morning
When, with our tears all dried,
Resting in fair green pastures
The river of life beside,
We shall know, beyond all doubting,
Just why the baby died?

Oh, thank God for the children!
Ay, give thanks, — though we lay
Under the sod of the valley
The fairest of all away.
Thank Him for those that leave us,
Thank Him for those that stay.

MAUD MOORE.
PART III.

For Christmas Tide.

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

In the rush of the merry morning,
When the red burns through the gray,
And the wintry world lies waiting
For the glory of the day;
Then we hear a fitful rushing
Just without upon the stair.
See two white phantoms coming,
Catch the gleam of sunny hair.

Are they Christmas fairies stealing
Rows of little socks to fill?
Are they angels floating hither
With their message of good-will?
What sweet spell are these elves weaving,
As like larks they chirp and sing?
Are these palms of peace from heaven
That these lovely spirits bring?

Rosy feet upon the threshold,
Eager faces peeping through,
With the first red ray of sunshine,
Chanting cherubs come in view;
Mistletoe and gleaming holly,
Symbols of a blessed day,
In their chubby hands they carry,
Streaming all along the way.

Well we know them, never weary
Of this innocent surprise;
Waiting, watching, listening always
With full hearts and tender eyes,
While our little household angels,
White and golden in the sun,
Greet us with the sweet old welcome,—
"Merry Christmas, every one!"

Rise up, ye crystal spheres,
Once bless our human ears,
If ye have power to touch our senses so;
And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time,
And let the bass of heaven's deep organ blow;
And with your ninefold harmony,
Make up full consort to angelic symphony.

Milton.
FAIRY FACES.

Out of the mists of childhood,
Steeped in a golden glory,
Come dreamy forms and faces,
Snatches of song and story;
Whispers of sweet, still faces;
Rays of ethereal glimmer.
Thou gleam like sunny heavens,
Nor to grow colder or dimmer:
Now far in the distance, now shining near,
Lighting the snows of the shivering year.

Faces there are that tremble,
Bleared with a silent weeping,
Weird in a shadowy sorrow,
As if endless vigil keeping.
Faces of dazzling brightness,
With childish radiance lighted,
Flashing with many a beauty,
Nor care nor time had blighted.

But o'er them all there's a glamour thrown,
Bright with the dreamy distance alone.

Aglow in the Christmas halo,
Shining with heavenly lustre,
These are the fairy faces
That round the heartstone cluster.
Those the deep, tender records,
Sacred in all their meetness,
That, wakening purest fancies,
Sotten us with their sweetness;
As, gathered where flickering lagots burn,
We welcome the holy season's return.

A CHRISTMAS SONG.

The elm is a kind and goodly tree,
With its branches bending low;
The heart is glad when its form we see,
And we list to the river's flow.
Ay, the heart is glad and the pulses bound,
And joy illumines the face,
Whenever a goodly elm is found,
Because of its beauty and grace.
But kinder, I ween, more goodly in mien,
With branches more drooping and free,
The flut of whose leaves fidelity weaves,
Is the beautiful Christmas Tree.

The maple is supple and lithe and strong,
And claimeth our love anew,
When the days are listless and quiet and long,
And the world is fair to view;
And later,—as beauties and graces unfold,—
A monarch right regally drest,
With streamers afloat, and pennons of gold,
It seemeth of all the best.

More lissome, I ween, the brightness and sheen,
And the coloring sunny and free,
And the bompers soft, that are held aloft
By the beautiful Christmas Tree.

St. Nicholas.

Mrs. Hattie S. Russell.

A CHRISTMAS CAMP ON THE SAN GABRIEL.

Lamar and his Rangers camped at dawn on the banks of the San Gabriel.
Under the mossy live oaks, in the heart of a lonely dell;
With the cloudless Texas sky above, and the mosquite grass below,
And all the prairie lying still, in a misty, silvery glow.

The sound of the horses cropping grass, the fall of a nut, full ripe,
The stir of a weary soldier, or the tap of a smoked-out pipe,
Fall only as sounds in a dream may fall upon a drowsy ear,
Till the Captain said, "'Tis Christmas Day! so, boys, we'll spend it here;

"For the sake of our homes and our childhood, we'll give the day its dues."

Then some leaped up to prepare the feast, and some sat still to muse,
And some pulled scarlet yupon-berries and wax-white mistle-toe,
To garland the stand-up rifles,—for Christmas has no foe.
And every heart had a pleasant thought, or a tender memory, Of unforgotten Christmas Tides that nevermore might be; They felt the thrill of a mother's kiss, they heard the happy psalm, And the men grew still, and all the camp was full of a gracious calm.

"Halt!" cried the sentinel; and lo! from out of the brushwood near There came, with weary, fainting step, a man in mortal fear, — A brutal man, with a tiger's heart, and yet he made this plea: "I am dying of hunger and thirst; so do what you will with me."

They knew him well: who did not know the cruel San Sabatan, — The robber of the Rio Grande, who spared not any man? In low, fierce tones they spoke his name, and looked at a coil of rope; And the man crouched down in abject fear — how could he dare to hope?

The Captain had just been thinking of the book his mother read, Of a Saviour born on Christmas Day, who bowed on the cross his head; Blending the thought of his mother's tears with the holy mother's grief, — And when he saw San Sabatan, he thought of the dying thief.

He spoke to the men in whispers, and they heeded the words he said, And brought to the perishing robber, water and meat and bread; He ate and drank like a famished wolf, and then lay down to rest, And the camp, perchance, had a stiller feast for its strange Christmas guest.

But, or ever the morning dawned again, the Captain touched his hand: "Here is a horse, and some meat and bread; fly to the Rio Grande! Fly for your life! We follow hard; touch nothing on your way — Your life was only spared because 't was Jesus Christ's birthday."

He watched him ride as the falcon flies, then turned to the breaking day; The men awoke, the Christmas berries were quietly cast away; And, full of thought, they saddled again, and rode off into the west — May God be merciful to them, as they were merciful to their guest!

Amelia Barr.

Christmas Treasures.

I count my treasures o'er with care: The little toy that baby knew, A little sock of faded hue, A little lock of golden hair.

Long years ago this Christmas time My little one, my all to me, Sat robed in white upon my knee, And heard the merry Christmas chime.

"Tell me, my little golden-head, If Santa Claus should come to-night, What shall he bring my baby bright, What treasure for my boy?" I said.

And then he named the little toy, While in his honest, mournful eyes There came a look of sweet surprise, That spoke his quiet, trustful joy.

And as he lipt his evening prayer, He asked the boon with childish grace, Then, toddling to the chimney-place, He hung his little stocking there.

That night, as lengthening shadows crept, I saw the white-winged angels come With heavenly music to our home, And kiss my darling as he slept.

They must have heard his baby prayer, For in the morn, with smiling face, He toddled to the chimney-place, And found the little treasure there.

They came again one Christmas Tide, That angel host so fair and white, And, singing all the Christmas night, They lured my darling from my side.

A little sock, a little toy, A little lock of golden hair, The Christmas music on the air, A watching for my baby boy.

But if again that angel train And golden head come back to me To bear me to eternity, My watching will not be in vain.
CHRISTMAS OUTCASTS.

CHRIST died for all; and on the hearts of all
Who gladly decorate their cheerful homes
At Christmas Tide, this blessed truth should fall,
That they may mix some honey with the gall
Of those to whom a Christmas never comes.

The poor are everywhere in Nature’s course,
Yet they may still control some sweetened crumbs,
No matter what they lack in hearts or purse;
But there are those whose bitter fate is worse,
To whom no day of Christmas ever comes.

The man who wildly throws away his chance,
An outcast from all cheerful hearts and homes,
Who may not mingle where the happy dance,
Nor gain from loving eyes one kindly glance,
Is he to whom no Christmas ever comes.

The man condemned in hidden ways to grope,
At sight of whom each kindly voice is dumb,
Or he whose life is shortened in its scope,
Who waits for nothing but the hangman’s rope,
Is he to whom a Christmas cannot come.

CHRIST died for all; he came to find the lost,
Whether they hide in palaces or slums,—
No matter how their lines of life are crossed,
And they who love him best will serve him most
By helping those to whom no Christmas comes.

New York Sun.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

There are sounds in the sky when the year grows old,
And the winds of the winter blow—
When night and the moon are clear and cold,
And the stars shine on the snow,
Or wild is the blast and the bitter sleet
That beats on the window-pane
But best on the frosty hills are the feet
Of the Christmas time again
Chiming sweet when the night wind swells,
Blest is the sound of the Christmas Bells!

FOR CHRISTMAS TIDE.

Dear are the sounds of the Christmas chimes
In the land of the lived towers,
And they welcome the dearest of festival times
In this Western world of ours!
Bright on the holly and mistletoe bough
The English firelight falls,
And bright are the wreathed evergreens new
That gladden our own home walls!
And hark! the first sweet note that tells,
The welcome of the Christmas Bells!

The owl that sits in the ivy’s shade,
Remote from the ruined tower,
Shall start from his slumber watch afraid
When the clock shall strike the hour;
And over the fields in their frosty rhyme
The chime sounds shall go,
And chime shall answer unto chime
Across the moonlit snow!

Holy manger bells,
How sweet the lingering music dwells,—
The music of the Christmas Bells.

It fell not thus in the East afar
Where the Babe in the manger lay:
The wise men followed their guiding star
To the dawn of a milder day;
And the fig and the sycamore gathered green,
And the palm-tree of Deborah rose;
’T was the strange first Christmas the world had seen—
And it came not in storm and snows.
Not yet on Nazareth’s hills and dells
Had floated the sound of Christmas Bells.

The cedars of Lebanon shook in the blast
Of their own cold mountain air;
But nought o’er the wintry plain had passed
To tell that the Lord was there!
The oak and the olive and almond were still,
In the night now worn and thin;
No wind of the winter-time roared from the hill
To waken the guests at the inn;
No dream to them the music tells
That is to come from the Christmas Bells!

The years that have fled like the leaves on the gale
Since the morn of the Miracle-Birth,
Have widened the fame of the marvellous tale
Till the tidings have filled the earth!
And so in the climes of the icy North,
And the lands of the cane and the palm,
By the Alpine cotters’ blazing hearths,
And in tropic belts of calm,
Men list to-night the welcome swells,
Sweet and clear, of Christmas Bells!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

They are ringing to-night through the Norway fir,
And across the Swedelish fells,
And the Cuban palm-tree dreamily stirs
To the sound of those Christmas Bells!
They ring where the Indian Ganges rolls
Its flood through the rice-fields wide;
They swell the far hymns of the Lapps and Poles
To the praise of the Crucified.
Sweeter than tones of the ocean's shells
Mingle the chimes of the Christmas Bells!

The years come not back that have circled away
With the past of the Eastern land;
When He plucked the corn on the Sabbath day
And healed the withered hand;
But the bells shall join in a joyous chime
For the One who walked the sea,
And ring again for the better time
Of the Christ that is to be!
Then ring!—for earth's best promise dwells
In ye, O Joyous Prophet Bells!

Ring out at the meeting of night and morn
For the dawn of a happier day!
Lo, the stone from our Saviour's sepulchre torn
The angels have rolled away!
And they come to us here in our low abode,
With words like the sunrise gleams,—
Come down and ascend by that heavenly road
That Jacob saw in his dream.
Spirit of love, that in music dwells,
Open our hearts with the Christmas Bells!

Help us to see that the glad heart prays
As well as the bended knees;
That there are in our own as in ancient days
The Scribes and the Pharisees;
That the Mount of Transfiguration still
Looks down on these Christian lands,
And the glorified ones from that holy hill
Are reaching their helping hands,
These be the words our music tells
Of solemn joy, O Christmas Bells!

CHRISTMAS SHADOWS.

Then needles have dropped from her nerveless hands,
As she watches the dying embers glow;
For out from the broad old chimney-place
Come ghostly shadows of "long ago,"—

FOR CHRISTMAS TIDE.

Shadows that carry her back again
To the time of her childhood's artless joy;
Shadows that show her a tiny row
Of stockings awaiting the Christmas toy;
Shadows that show her the faces loved
Of many a half-forgotten friend,
And the Christmas Eve, it is passing by,
While Past and Present in shadows blend.
Alone in the dear old homestead now,
With only the shadows of "Auld Lang Syne,"
The clock is ticking the moments on,
While the tears in her aged eyes still shine.

If only from the silent world,
The world of shadows which mocks her so,
One might return to his vacant chair,
To sit with her in the firelight's glow!
If only—Was that a white, white hand
That seemed to beckon her out of the gloom?
Or was it the embers' last bright flash
That startled the shadows round the room?

The Christmas Eve, it has passed at length;
A glorious day from the night is born;
The shadows are gone from earth away,
And the bells are ringing for Christmas morn.
But, ah! by the broad old chimney-place
The angel of death keeps watch alone,
For straight to the Christ-child's beckoning arms
A longing spirit hath wholly flown.

UPON THE THRESHOLD.

Once more we stand with half-reluctant feet
Upon the threshold of another year;
That line where Past and Present seem to meet
In stronger contrast than they do elsewhere.

Look back a moment. Does the prospect please,
Or does the weary heart but sigh regret?
Can Recollection smile, or, ill at ease
With what is past, wish only to forget?

Say, canst thou smile when Memory's lingering gaze
Once more recalls the dying year to sight?
Wouldst thou live o'er again those changing days,
Or bid them fade forever into night?
A solemn question, and the faltering heart
Searce dare say "Yes," yet will not quite say "No;"
For joy and sadness both have played their part
In making up the tale of "long ago."

Here Memory sees the golden sunlight gleam
Across the path of life and shine while;
And now the picture changes like a dream,
And sorrow dims the eyes and kills the smile.

So — it has gone — where all has gone before;
The morning wind has sung the dead year's dirge,
Time's waves roll on against the crumbling shore,
And sinks the worn-out bark beneath the surge.

Here ends the checkered page of prose and verse,
Of shapely words and lines writ all awry,
There they must stand for better or for worse;
So shut the book and bid the year good-by!

Chambers's Journal.

G. E.

A NEW YEAR.

Over the threshold a gallant new-comer
Steppest with tread that is royal to see;
While as the winter-tide, rosy as summer,
Hope in his eyes, and his laugh rangeth free.
Lo! in his hands there are gifts overflowing,
Promises, prophecies, come in his train;
O'er him the dawns in its beauty is glowing,
Flee from his presence the shadows of pain.

How shall we welcome him? Shall we remember
One who as royally came to our door
Twelve months ago when the winds of December
Moaned in the tree-tops and raved on the shore?
He, too, had largess of bounty to offer;
He was as smiling as gracious of mind;
Only the beautiful sought he to proffer,
Only such looks as were calm and serene.

Now he has fled; and our hopes that have perished,
Lovely ideals which never were found,
Dreams that we followed and plants that we cherished,
Lies, like the autumn leaves, dead on the ground.
So wilt thou cheat us with sign and with token,—
So wilt thou woo us to follow thee on,
Till thy last sigh, through a lute that is broken,
Till thy last vision is faded and gone.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Why should the road that leads to heaven
Be all one reach of sterile sand?
Why not, just here and there, be given
A rose to deck the dreary land?
But why repine? Others have trod,
With sorrier feet and heavier sins,
Their painful pathway toward their God —
My pilgrimage anew begins.

Failure and failure, hitherto,
Has time inscribed upon my leaves;
I've wandered many a harvest through
And never yet have gathered sheaves;
Yet once again the leaf I turn,
Hope against hope for one success;
One merit-mark at least to earn,
One sunbeam in the wilderness.

PART IV.

Under the Open Sky.
Here haply too, at vernal dawn,
Some musing bard may stray,
And eye the smoking drug-lichen,
And misty mountain grey;
Or by the reaper's nightly beam,
Mellow-checkering through the trees,
Rave to my darkly dashing stream,
Hoarse swelling on the breeze.

Let lofty firs, and ashes cool,
My lowly banks o'cress'd,
And view, deep bending in the pool,
Their shadows' watery bed;
Let fragrant birks in woodbine drest
My craggy cliffs adorn;
And, for the little songster's nest,
The close-embowering thorn.

ROBIN'S COME.

From the elm-tree's topmost bough,
Hark! the robin's early song!
Telling one and all that now
Merry springtime hastens along;
Welcome tidings dost thou bring,
Little harbinger of spring:
Robin's come.

Of the winter we are weary,
Weary of the frost and snow;
Longing for the sunshine cheery,
And the brooklet's gurgling flow;
Gladly then we hear thee sing
The joyful reveille of spring:
Robin's come.

Ring it out o'er hill and plain,
Through the garden's lonely bowers,
Till the green leaves dance again,
Till the air is sweet with flowers!
Wake the cowslips by the rill,
Wake the yellow daffodil:
Robin's come.

Then, as thou wert wont of yore,
Build thy nest and rear thy young
Close beside our cottage door,
In the woodbine leaves among;
Hurt or harm thou need'st not fear,
Nothing rude shall venture near:
Robin's come.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Singing still in yonder lane,
Robin answers merrily;
Ravished by the sweet refrain,
Alice clasps her hands in glee,
Calling from the open door,
With her soft voice o'er and o'er,
Robin's come.

NESTLINGS.

O LITTLE bird! sing sweet among the leaves,
Safe hid from sight, beside thy downy nest;
The rain falls, murmuring to the drooping caves
A low refrain, that suits thy music best.
Sing sweet, O bird! thy recompense draws nigh,—

Four callow nestlings 'neath the mother's wing,
So many flashing wings that by and by
Will cleave the sunny air. Oh, sing, bird, sing!

(Sing, O my heart! Thy callow nestlings sleep,
Safe hidden 'neath a gracious folding wing,
Until the time when from their slumbers deep
They wake, and soar in beauty. Sing, heart, sing!)

O little bird, sing sweet! Though rain may fall,
And though thy brood thy care require,
Behind the rain-cloud, with its trailing tail,
Shineth, undimmed, the gracious, golden fire.
Sing on, O bird! nor of the cloud take heed;
For thou art heir of glorious spring;
And every field is sacred to thy need—
The wealth, the beauty thine. Oh, sing, bird, sing!

(Sing, O my heart! Sing on, though rain may pour;
Sing on, for unawares the winds will bring
A drift of sunshine to thy cottage door,
And arch the clouds with rainbows. Sing, heart, sing!)

O bird! sing sweet. What though the time be near
When thou shalt sit upon the swaying bough,
With no sweet mate, no nestling by, to hear
The bubbling song thou sing'st to glad them now!
Thy task was done, fulfilled in sweet spring days—
In golden summer, when thy brood take wing,
Shalt thou not still have left a hymn of praise
Because thy work is over? Sing, bird, sing!

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

(Sing, O my heart! What if thy birds have flown?
Thou hast the joy of their awakening.
A thousand memories left thee for thine own;
Sing thou for task accomplished. Sing, heart, sing!)

THE CHIMNEY NEST.

A Dainty, delicate swallow-feather
Is all that we now in the chimney trace
Of something that days and days together
With twittering birds'notes filled the place.

Where are you flying now, swallow, swallow?
Where are you wailing the spaces blue?

How many little ones follow, follow,
Whose wings to strength in the chimney grew?

Deep and narrow, and dark and lonely,
The sooty place that you nestled in;
Over you one blue glimmer only, —
Say, were there many to make the din?

This is certain, that somewhere or other
Up in the chimney is loosely hung
A queer-shaped nest, where a patient mother
Brooded a brood of tender young.

That here, as in many deserted places,
Brimming with life for hours and hours,
We miss with the hum a thousand graces,
Valued the more since no more ours.

Ah! why do we shut our eyes half blindly,
And close our hearts to some wee things near,
Till he who granted them kindly, kindly
Gathers them back, that we see and hear,

And know, by loss of the same grown dearer,
Nought is so small of his works and ways,
But, holding it tenderly when 't was nearer,
Has added a joy to our vanished days!

So, little, delicate swallow-feather,
Fashioned with care by the Master's hand,
I'll hold you close for your message, whether
Or not the whole I may understand.

MARY B. DODGE.
The Captive Humming-Bird.

Fleet-flying gem, of burnished crest
And silver-tipped wing,
With azure, gold, and sapphire breast;
Aolian captive thing!

Tell me the secret of thy song,
And whence thy robe of beams,
If to the earth thou dost belong,
Or Paradise of dreams.

Born for one season a ray,
To banquet 'mid the bowers,
Or wilt thou chant another May,
Sweet minstrel of the flowers?

The coyest honeysuckles still
Their daintiest buds unfold,
For thee to kiss, with honeyed bill,
Their nectar lips of gold.

The lily opes its snowy cells,
"The pink, its crimson door,"
"Pink," whispers every fond bluebell,
"My honey to the core."

White blushing flowers for thee all fling
Their fragrance on the air,
The purple morning-glories cling
On high in beauty rare.

The tiny chalice of the thyme,
And daisies, plead below,
Each dewy-eyed, too small to climb,
"Come, kiss me ere you go."

Away on thy melodious wing
To Love's mysterious bowers,
Still thy free band of minstrels bring
To revel 'mid the flowers.

Breathe on their bosoms fair and sweet,
And rosy lips apart,
And give and take, in Love's retreat,
The honey of the heart.

Joel T. Hart.
THE BIRD ON THE TELEGRAPH WIRE.

The long lines stretched from west to east,
The bird was a dot 'gainst the wide blue sky,
And I, full of summer gladness and joy,
Wrote of the bird as he swung on high.

So free from all care and sorrow and toil!
So fearless 'mid music of countless spheres!
So true to its instincts, though under its feet
Passed "the news of the world" and the labor of years!

He trilled a song to his patient mate;
Not a note was made less loud and sweet
By a thought of the wounded and dying men,
Though the news of the battle passed under his feet.

He sang of his birdies — one, two, three,
Of his nest in the apple-tree over the way,
While the wires were bearing the death of a prince —
How a kingdom’s throne was empty that day.

A lovely sight, with his breast of gold,
His glossy wings and beaded eyes;
One of life’s beautiful things, I thought,
O’erlying its deeper mysteries.

Little cared he for battles or thrones,
While the air was so soft and the sun so bright;
His nestful and mate were enough for him,
And he taught me a lesson — to trust in God’s might.

On the earth which sages and martyrs have trod
He teaches us how to build our nest;
Through trials, temptations, and mysteries strange,
He teaches us, trusting, to say, "It is best."

PANSIES.

I send thee pansies while the year is young,
Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;
Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung
By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;
And in recollection lives regret
For wasted days and dreams that were not true,
I tell thee that the "pansy freighted with jet"
Is still the heart’s ease that the poets knew.
Take all the sweetness of a gift unsought,
And for the pansies send me back a thought.

SARAH Doudney Clarke.

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

THE WATER-LILY.

"O star on the breast of the river!
O marvel of bloom and grace!
Did you fall right down from heaven,
Out of the sweetest place?
You are white as the thoughts of an angel,
Your heart is steeped in the sun:
Did you grow in the Golden City,
My pure and radiant one?"

"Nay, nay, I fell not out of heaven;
None gave me my saintly white:
It slowly grew from the darkness,
Down in the dreary night.
From the core of the silent river
I won my glory and grace.
White souls fall not, O my poet,
They rise — to the sweetest place."

THE ROSE-BUSH.

There was a rose-bush in a garden growing,
Its tender leaves unfolding day by day,
The sun looked on, and his down-going
Left it amid the starlit dusk of nights of May.

The dew-drop came and kissed it in the gloaming;
It gathered sweetness in the morning hours;
The bee beheld it as he went a roaming,
And thought, "What honey will be hidden in its flowers?"

The light grew richer and the days grew long;
The May-time deepened into June;
The air was laden with the robin's song,
The light wind touched the leaves and set them all a-tune.

And now a tiny bud appeared, and then another —
Bright promises of radiant flowers;
The breezes, whispering, told it to each other,
The rose-bush heard them in the gladsome hours.

New hope awoke and thrilled in all its veins;
Life is so sweet that culminates in flowers!
It smiled and grew in misty summer rains,
And caught the freshness of the evening showers.
And oft the gardener came and stood beside;
He tended it always with zealous care,
Watching lest any evil should betide,
Or blight creep o'er the leaves that grew so fair.

He crushed the buds and dropped them on the ground;
The rose-bush felt a chill in every vein;
It dropped, as if to hide each bitter wound—
This strange experience was its earliest thought of pain.

"Poor little plant," the gardener thought;
"Thou art too young, too young to know
That few buds unto flowers are brought.—
It is by pruning thou must grow."

And still the summer smiled and shone,
And other roses bloomed and died.
"Mine would more beauteously have bloomed,"
The little rose-bush sadly sighed.

Again the gardener sought his flowers,
Where he had watched his treasure blow:
The autumn blast had swept the bowers,
The winds and storms had laid them low!

Though sad of heart, the rose-bush still was green;
It lifted up its drooping head;
"The life that would have filled the buds may still be seen,
'Tis folded in its heart," he said.

He stooped and took it from the ground
All trembling with its vague alarms,
And quick and tenderly he wrapped it round,
And kindly bore it in his arms.

And now, where soft the sunshine flows,
Within a fair, immortal bower,
In all its fragrant beauty blooms the rose,
Its every bud grown into perfect flower.

---

THE PHANTOM OF THE ROSE.

Sweet lady, let your lids unclose,
Those lids by maiden dreams caressed;
I am the phantom of the rose
You wore last night upon your breast.
Like pearls upon my petals lay
The weeping fountain's silver tears,
Ere in the glittering array
You bore me proudly 'mid your peers.

---

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

O lady, 'twas for you I died
Yet have I come and will I stay;
My rose phantom by your side
Will linger till the break of day.

Yet fear not, lady; nought shall I—
Nor mass, nor hymn, nor funeral prayer;
My soul is but a perfumed sigh,
Which pure from Paradise I bear.

My death is as my life was—sweet;
Who would not die as I have done?
A fate like mine who would not meet,
Your bosom fair to lie upon?

A poet on my tender tomb
Engraved this legend with a kiss:
"Here lies a rose of fairest bloom;
E'en kings are jealous of its bliss."

JEROME A. HART.
(From Théophile Gautier.)

NOTE. — A scholar who criticizes the second half of Mr. Hart's spirited verse as diverging unnecessarily from the spirit of Gautier suggests this much less poetical quatrain in its place:

Yet fear not, neither mass nor prayer
Nor holy funeral hymn I claim—
My soul is but a perfumed sigh,
And pure from Paradise it came.

---

THE MESSAGE OF THE ROSE.

Only a rose in a glass,
Set by a sick man's bed;
The day was weary, the day was long,
But the rose it spoke with a voice-like song,
And this is what it said:

"I know that the wind is keen,
And the drifted snows lie deep;
I know that the dead lies spread
Over the laughing brook and the lake's blue bed,
And the fountain's rush and leap.

"I know, I know all this;
Yet here I sit—a rose!
Smiling I sit and I feel no fear,
For God is good and the spring is near,
Couch'd in the shrouding snows.
"Canst thou not smile with me?
Art thou less strong than I?
Less strong at heart than a feeble flower.
Which lives and blossoms but one brief hour,
And then must droop and die?

"Surely, thou canst endure
Thy little pains and fears,
Before whose eyes, all fair and bright,
In endless vistas of delight,
Stretch the eternal years!"

Then o'er the sick man's heart
Fell a deep and hushed repose;
He turned on his pillow and whispered low,
That only the listening flower might know:
"I thank thee, Rose, dear Rose."

---

BEAN-BLOSSOMS.

WHERE grass grows short and the meadows end,
And hedged fields slowly the hill ascend,
To the gentle breezes bending low,
Lazily bending, the bean-flowers blow.

In winter the steaming horses toil
With the bright plough deep in the loamy soil;
In spring the sower goes forth to sow:
Sweet in the summer the bean-flowers blow.

Thither the bee with his ceaseless hum,
Thither the maidens with their lovers come.
Pity that beauty cannot last!
Pity the blossoms fade so fast!

Oh, sweet the scent of the garden rose:
As sweet on the hill the bean-flower blows.
The bean to the threshing-floor shall come,
But the rose is not at the harvest home.

Maiden, what do the bean-flowers say?
"Beauty but lasts for a little day;
Who learns the lesson our blossoms tell,
May be sweet and lovely and good as well."

St. James Gazette.

---

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

In spring, when branches of woodbine
Hang leafless over the rocks,
And the fleecy snow in the hollows
Lay in unshepherded locks,
By the road where the dead leaves rustled,
Or damply matted the ground,
While over me gurgled the robin
His honeyed passion of sound,
I saw the trailing arbutus
Blooming in modesty sweet,
And gathered store of its richness
Offered and spread at my feet.

It grew under leaves, as if seeking
No hint of itself to disclose,
And out of its pink-white petals
A delicate perfume rose,
As faint as the fond remembrance
Of joy that was only dreamed;
And like a divine suggestion
The scent of the flower seemed.

I had sought for love on the highway,
For love unselfish and pure,
And had found in good deeds blooming,
Though often in haunts obscure.

Often in leaves by the wayside,
But touched with a heavenly glow,
And with self-sacrifice fragrant,
The flowers of great love grow.

O lovely and lovely arbutus!
As year unto year succeeds,
Be thou the laurel and emblem
Of noble, unselfish deeds.

The Academy.

---

A FLOWER FROM THE CATSKILLS.

The orchards that climb the hillsides,
That lie in the valley below,
Are white in the soft May sunshine,
And fragrant with May-day snow.
The violets wakened by April
Their watch in the meadow yet keep,
The golden spurs of the columbine
Are hung where the lichens creep.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Still gleams by the sluggish waters
Some loitering marigold,
Where ferns, late greeting the sunshine,
Their downy green plumes unfold.
And just by the wooded waysides
Faint glows the azalea’s blush,—
The dawn of the coming summer,
The morning’s awaking flush!

But there where the wind-bent rain-clouds
O’ershadow the Catskills’ crest,
There blossoms one flower more precious,
Far sweeter than all the rest.
Where scarcely a leaf has opened,
The promise of summer to give,
Where the lingering winds of winter
For the sleet and the snow-drift grieve,
Where the trees grow scented and stunted,
And scarcely a shadow is cast,
There nestles the trailing arbutus
Close, close to the hill’s cold breast.
The storm-winds give to it courage,
The skies give it power to bless,
And it giveth to all its loving
In its happy thankfulness.

Now pink as the lip of the sea-shell,
Now white as the breakers’ foam,
It spreadeth its stainless treasure
To brighten its rugged home.
Low trailing amid the mosses,
Its delicate blossoms lie,—
Giving the earth its beauty,
Its worship giving the sky.

Though bleak be the home that reared it,
And rough be its lullaby,
Gathering strength from the tempest,
And grace from the fair blue sky,
It waiteth with patient longing,
In the snow’s embrace held fast,
Still trusting, with faith unbroken,
The sun to welcome at last,—

To welcome with loving greeting
The soft falling step of spring.
Scarce felt on the northern hills-slopes,
Where the lingering snow-drifts cling;
And faint on the winds up-sweeping
Is wafted its perfume rare,
Like the incense of worship ascending,—
The mountains’ low, unspoken prayer!

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

O brave little blossom! still teach us
Through love to be patient and strong,
Though the spring be laggard in coming,
And the days be dark and long.
Like thy bloom by the rude wayside,
Of days some life may we bless,
Till our souls, like thy fragrance ascending,
Reach heavenly perfection.

—

HEART’S-EASE.

While o’er my life still hung the morning star,
Dreamy and soft in tender-lighted skies,
While care and sorrow held themselves afar,
And no sad mist of tears had dimmed my eyes,
I saw Love’s roses blowing,
With scent and color glowing,
And so I wished for them with longing sighs.

The brightest hung so high, and held aloft
Their crimson faces, passionately bright;
The gay, rich, golden ones escaped me off,
And lodged with sharpest thorns the lofty white;
From all my eager pleading
They turned away, unheeding;
Among Love’s roses none were mine of right.

Yet, of sweet things, those roses seemed most sweet
And most desirable, until a voice,
Soft as sad music, said, “Lo, at thy feet
A little flower shall make thy heart rejoice.”
And so, the voice obeying,
I saw, in beauty straying,
A wealth of heart’s-ease, waiting for my choice.

Great purple passies, each with snowy heart,
And golden ones, with eyes of deepest blue;
Some “freaked with jet,” some pure white ones apart,
But all so sweet and fresh with morning dew,
I could not bear to lose them,
I could not help but choose them,
For sweet Content sat singing where they grew.

So, now, Love’s roses shake their scented leaves,
But tempt me not to their enchanted quest;
I gather ‘heart’s-ease,’ set in dew leaves,
And am content,—for me it is the best.
Be glad if, sweet and glowing,
You find Love’s roses blowing—
I sing through life with heart’s-ease at my breast.
HELIOTROPE.

How strong they are, those subtle spells
That lurk in leaves and flower-bells,
Rising from faint perfumes;
Or, mingling with some olden strain,
Strike through the music shafts of pain,
And people empty rooms.

They come upon us unaware,
In crowded halls and open air,
And in our chambers still;
A song, an odor, or a bird
Evoke the spell and strikes the chord,
And all our pulses thrill.

I wandered but an hour ago,
With lagging footsteps tired and slow,
Along the garden walk;
The summer twilight wrapped me round,
Through open windows came the sound
Of song and pleasant talk.

The odor-stealing dews lay wet
And heavy on the mimosee
That crept about my feet;
Upon the folded mossy vest
That clothed the ruby rose's breast
It fell in dropplings sweet.

It fell on beds of purple bloom,
From whence arose the rare perfume
Of dainty heliotrope;
Which smote my heart with sudden power,—
My favorite scent, my favorite flower,
In olden days of hope!

Ah, me! the years have come and gone,
Each with its melody or moan,
Since that sunshiny hour,
When, for the sake of hands that brought,
And for the lesson sweet it taught,
I chose it for my flower.

Faint-scented blossoms! Long ago
Your purple clusters came to show
My life had wider scope;
They spoke of love that day—tonight
I stand apart from love's delight,
And wear no heliotrope.

THE CLOVER.

Some sings of the lily, and daisy, and rose,
And the pansies and pinks that the summer-time throws
In the green grassy lap of the medder that lays
Blinkin' up at the skies through the sunshiny days;
But what is the lily and all of the rest
Of the flowers to a man with a heart in his breast
That has dipped brimm'n full of the honey and dew
Of the sweet clover-blossoms his babyhood knew?

I never set eyes on a clover-field now,
Or fool round a stable, or climb in the snow,
But my childhood comes back, just as clear and as plain
As the smell of the clover I'm sniffin' again;
And I wander away in a barefooted dream,
Where I tangle my toes in the blossoms that gleam
With the dew of the dawn of the morning of love
Ere it wept o'er the graves that I'm weepin' above.

And so I love clover—it seems like a part
Of the sacredest sorrows and joys of my heart;
And wherever it blossoms, oh, there let me bow,
And thank the good God as I'm thankin' him now;
And I pray to him still for the strength, when I die,
To go out in the clover and tell it goodbye,
And lovingly nestle my face in its bloom,
While my soul slips away on a breath of perfume.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

THE VIOLET'S GRAVE.

The woodland, and the golden wedge
Of sunshine slipping through;
And there, beside a bit of hedge,
A violet so blue!
So tender was its beauty, and
So douse and sweet its air,
I scooped, and yet withheld my hand—
Would place, and yet would spare.

Now which was best? For spring will pass,
And vernal beauty fly—
On maiden's breast or in the grass,
Where would you choose to die?

From THE SICILIAN OF VICOVARI.

THE LILY AND THE LINDEN.

Far away under skies of blue,
In the pleasant land beyond the sea,
Bathed with sunlight and washed with dew,
Budded and bloomed the fleur-de-lis.

Through mists of morning, one by one,
Grantly the perfect leaves unfold,
And the daisy glow of the sinking sun
Flushed and deepened its hues of gold.

She saw him rise o'er the rolling Rhine,
She saw him set in the western sea,
"Where is the empress, garden mine,
Doth rule a realm like the fleur-de-lis?"

"The forest trembles before the breath,
From the island oak to the northern pine,
And the blossoms pale with the bee of death.
When my anger ruishes the tropic vine.

"The lotus wakes from its slumbers lone,
To waft its homage unto me,
And the spice-groves lay before my throne
The tribute due to the fleur-de-lis!"

So hailed she vassals far and wide,
Till her glance swept over a hemisphere,
But noted not, in her queenly pride,
A slender sapling growing near.

Slow uprising o'er glade and glen,
Its branches bent in the breezes free,
But its roots were set in the hearts of men,
Who gave their life to the linden-tree.

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

"Speak, O seer of the mighty men!
Answer, sage of the mystic air!
What is the lot of the linden green?
What is the fate of the lily fair?"

"Hearst thou the wall of the winter wake?
Hearst thou the roar of the angry sea?
Ask not, for heaven's own thunders break
On the linden fair and the fleur-de-lis!"

The storm-clouds fade from the murky air,
Again the freshening breezes blow,
The sunbeams rest on the garden rare,
But the lily lies buried beneath the snow!

From the ice-locked Rhine to the western sea
Mournfully spreads the wintry pall,
Cold and still is the fleur-de-lis,
But the linden threatens to shadow all!

Frowning down on the forest wide,
Darkly loometh his giant form,
A lone he stands in his kingly pride,
And mocks at whirlwind and laughs at storm.

"Speak, O sage of the mystic air!
Answer, seer of the mighty men!
Must all thy trees of the forest fair
Fall at the feet of the linden green?"

"Wouldst thou the scroll of the future see?
Thus I divine the fate of all!
A worm is sapping the linden-tree,
The pride that goeth before a fall.

"For shame may come to the haughty crest,
A storm may sweep from the northern sea,
And winds from the east and winds from the west
May blow in wrath o'er the linden-tree!

"Here, where the voice of the winter grieves,
The lily hath lain its regal head;
Bright was the gleam of the golden leaves,
But the lily was flecked with spots of red.

"Behind the clouds of the battle strive
The glow of resurrection see!
Lo! I proclaim a newer life,
The truer birth of the fleur-de-lis!"
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Thus saith the seer of the mighty men,
Thus saith the sage of the mystic air,
The sunshine fell from the linden green
And gilded the grave of the lily fair.

Stewart's Quarterly. — Dr. Fred Crosby.

RAIN.

Millions of massive rain-drops
Have fallen all around;
They have danced on the house-tops,
They have hidden in the ground.

They were liquid like musicians
With anything for keys,
Beating tunes upon the windows,
Keeping time upon the trees.

PROMISE.

There is a rainbow in the sky,
Upon the arch where tempest trod;
God wrote it ere the world was dry —
It is the autograph of God.

Note. — This quatrain was cut from the body of a poem which contained little of worth, and the very best of which is now forgotten.

WHAT THEY DREAMED AND SAID.

Rose dreamed she was a lily,
Lily dreamed she was a rose;
Robin dreamed he was a sparrow,
What the owl dreamed no one knows.

But they all woke up together
As happy as could be,
Said each one: "You're lovely, neighbor,
But I'm very glad I'm me."

THE WANDERER.

Upon a mountain height, far from the sea,
I found a shell;
And to my listening ear this lonely thing
Ever a song of ocean seemed to sing —
Ever a tale of ocean seemed to tell.

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

How came this shell upon the mountain height?
Ah, who can say,
Whether there dropped by some too careless hand,
Whether there cast when ocean swept the land,
Ere the Eternal had ordained the day?

Strange, was it not? — Far from its native deep,
One song it sang:
Sang of the awful mysteries of the tide,
Sang of the storied sea, profound and wide —
Ever with echoes of old ocean rang.

And as the shell upon the mountain height
Sang of the sea,
So do I ever, leagues and leagues away,
So do I ever, wandering where I may,
Sing, O my home! sing, O my home, of thee!

EUGENE FIELD.

METEORS.

Tears of gold the heavens wept;
They fell and were by billows swept
Into the sea, 'mid coral caves,
Where roll the ever-restless waves.

And thus they lay, till they were found
By mermaids on the ocean's ground.
The sea-nymphs took the gems so rare,
And wound them in their sea-green hair.

And often now some summer's night
The ocean gleams with golden light
Caused by the mermaids sporting there
With tears of gold in flowing hair.

ANN PH. EICHBERG.

A BROOK SONG.

I'm hastening from the distant hills
With swift and noisy flowing;
Nursed by a thousand tiny rills,
I'm ever onward going.
The willows cannot stay my course,
With all their plaint wooing;
I sing and sing till I am hoarse,
My prattling way pursing.
I kiss the pebbles as I pass,
And hear them say they love me,
I make obeisance to the grass
That kindly bends above me.
So onward through the meads and dells
I listen, never knowing
The secret motive that impels,
Or whither I am going.

A little child comes often here
To watch my quaint communion
As I go tumbling swift and clear
Down to the distant ocean;
And as he plays upon my brink,
So thoughtless, like and merry
And full of noisy song, I think
The child is like me, very,
Through all the years of youthful play,
With never a thought of sorrow.
We, prattling, speed upon our way,
Unmindful of the morrow;
And through these sunny meads and dells
We gambol, never tiring
The solemn motive that impels,
Or whither we are going.

And men come here to say to me:
"Like you, with weird communion,
O little sing-song brooklet, we
Are hastening to the ocean;
Down to a vast and misty deep,
With fleeting tears and laughter
We go, nor rest until we sleep
In that profound Hereafter.
What titles may bear our souls along,
What monsters rise appalling,
What distant shores may bear our song
And answer to our calling?
Ah, who can say! Through meads and dells
We wander, never knowing
The awful motive that impels,
Or whither we are going!"

—EUGENE FIELD.

THE PRAIRIE PATH.

Upon the brown and frozen sod
The wind's wet fingers shake the rain;
The bare shrubs shiver in the blast
Against the dripping window-pane.
Inside, strange shadows haunt the room,
The flickering firelight rise and fall,
And make I know not what strange shapes
Upon the pale gray parlor wall.

I feel, but do not see these things,—
My soul stands under other skies;
There is a wondrous radiance comes
Between my eyelids and my eyes.
I seem to pull down on my feet
God's gentian flowers, as on I pass
Through a great prairie, still and sweet
With growing vines and blowing grass.

And then—ah! whence can he have come?—
I feel a small hand touching mine;
Our voices first are like the breath
That sways the grass and scented vine.
But clearer, grow the childish words
Of Egypt and of Hindostan;
And Archie's telling me again
Where he will go when he's a man.

The smell of pines is strangely bland
With sandalwood, and broken spice,
And cores of calamus; the flowers
Grow into gems of wondrous price.
We sit down in the grass and dream;
His face grows strangely bright and fair;
I think it is the amber gleam
Of sunset in his pale gold hair.

But while I look I see a path
Across the prairie to the light;
And Archie, with his small, bare feet,
Has almost passed beyond my sight.
Upon my heart there falls a smile
Upon my ears a soft advice:
I see the glory in his face,
And know his dreams have all come true.

Some day I shall go hence and home,—
We shall go hence, I mean to say;
And as we pass the shools of time,
"My brother," I shall, pleading, say,
"There was upon the prairie wide
A spot so dear to thee and me,
I fain would see it ere we walk
The fields of Immortality."

—A SUMMER PICTURE.

From saffron to yellow, from purple to gray,
Slow fades on the mountain the beautiful day;
I see where the roses are heavy with bloom,
And wait for the moonlight to whiten the gloom.
Far down the green valley I see through the night
The lamps of the village shine steady and bright;
But on my sweet silence there creeps not a tone
Of labor or sorrow, of pleading or moan.

Low sings the glad river along its dark way,
An echo by night of its chiming by day;
And tremulous branches lean down to the tide,
To dinkle the waters that under them glide.

The night moths are fluttering about in the gloom,
Their wings from the blossoms shake dainty perfume;
I know where the cups of the ilies are fair,
By the breath of their sweetness that floats on the air.

I sit in the shadow; but lo! In the west
The mountains in garments of glory are drest!
And slowly the sheen of their brightness drops down
To rest on the hills in a luminous crown.

The dew glitters clear where the shadows are green;
In ranks of white splendor the lilies are seen;
And the roses above me sway lightly to greet
Their shadowy sisters, afloat at my feet.

Low sings the glad river; its waters alight,
A pathway of silver, lead on through the night;
And fair as the glorified isles of the blest
Lies all the sweet valley, the valley of rest.

AUTUMN.

'Tis the golden gleam of an autumn day,
With the soft rain raining as if in play;
And a tender touch upon everything,
As if autumn remembered the days of spring.

In the listening woods there is not a breath
To shake their gold to the swarthy breeze;
And a glow as of sunshine on them lies,
Though the sun is hid in the shadowed skies.

The cock's clear crow from the farmyard comes,
The muffled bell from the belfry booms,
And faint and dim, and far from away,
Come the voices of children in happy play.

O'er the mountains the white rain draws its veil,
And the black rocks, cawing across them sail;
While nearer the swooping swallows skim
O'er the steel-gray river's fretted brim.

No sorrow upon the landscape weighs,
No grief for the vanished summer days;
But a sense of peaceful and calm repose
Like that which age in autumn knows.

The springtime longings are past and gone,
The passions of summer no longer are known,
The harvest is gathered, and autumn stands
Serene and thoughtful, with folded hands.

Over all is thrown a memorial hue,
A glory ideal the real never knew;
For memory sits from the past its pain,
And suffer its beauty alone to remain.

With half a smile and half a sigh
It ponders the past that has hurried by:
Sees it and feels it, and loves it all,
Content it has vanished beyond recall.

O glorious autumn, thus serene,
Thus living and loving all that has been!
Thus calm and contented let me be
When the autumn of age shall come to me.

BLACKWOOD.

WINTER.

WHERE are the flowers? where the leaves?
Where the sweet zephyrs' gentle breath?
Where mellowed fruits and golden sheaves?
Dead, dead; all icy bound in death!
Is Love too dead? Hence, needless pain!
Love only sleeps to wake again.
Love dead? Ah, no, not so with Love!
Love only dies to live above.

BLACKWOOD.

WINTER.

Tit'lu dark-robed man with solemn pace,
And mantle muffled round thy face,
Like the dim vision seen by Saul,
Upraised by spells from Death's dark hall;
Thou sad, small man, — face thin and old,
Teeth set, and nose pinched blue and cold,—
Never mind! Thy coat, so long and black,
And fitting round thee all so slack,
Has glorious spangles, and its stars
Are like a conqueror's feast from wars.
Who wove it in Time's awful loom
With woof of glory, warp of gloom?
Jove's planet glitters on thy breast;
The morning star adorns thy crest;
The waxing of the waning moon
Clings to thy turban late or soon;
Orion's belt is thine,—thy thigh
His jewelled sword hangs brightly by;
The Pleiades seven, the Gypsy's star,
Shine as thy shoulder-knots afar;
And the great Dog-star, bright, unknown,
Blazes beside thee like a throne.
Take heart! Thy coat, so long and black,
Sore worn, and fitting round thee slack,
Is brocaded by the Northern Lights,
Those silvery arrows shot by sprites,—
Is powdered by the Milky Way
With awful pearls unknown to day,
Which well make up for all the hues
Proud Summer, bridgroom-like, may use.

Proud Summer, with his roses' sheen,
And dress of scarlet, blue, and green,
Floods us with such a sea of light
We miss the fairs, far isles of Night,
And thoughtless dance, while he with lutes
Beguiles us or assists to fruits;
But like a shade from Spirit-land
Dim Winter beckons with his hand,—
He beckons: all things darker grow,
Save white-charred waves and wreathing snow
We pause; a chill creeps through our veins;
We dare not thank him for his pains;
We fear to follow, and we creep
To candle-light, to cards, to sleep.
Yet when we follow him, how deep
The secret he has got to keep!
How wonderful! how passing grand!
For, peering through his storms, there stand
The eternal cities of the sky,
With stars like street-lamps hung on high;
No angel yet can sum their worth;
Though angels sang when they had birth.

Chambers's Journal.
There is a low, sad rustle in the air,
Among the yellow banners of the corn;
The faded sunflower droops her heavy head,
The garden border of its wealth is shorn.
A subtle stillness broods o'er all the scene,
The benediction of the year has come;
The sheaves are garnered from the fading field,
The husbandman has sung the "Harvest Home."
In faded meadows, where the partridge trills
His clear, loud song to call his wandering mate,
The streams are shallow and the grasses brown,
Where scarlet poppies flecked the field but late;
There is a whisper in the falling stream,
A sligh through all the aisles of forest trees,
A tremulous vibration in the songs
The wild birds pour upon the evening breeze.
The sweet, dead days will come to us no more;
New summers may bring harvests of delight,
Fair days may dawn with eyes of splendid blue,
They cannot shine so infinitely bright
As the sweet, vanished hours which we have lost;
Or are they only garnered safe and sure,
To wait for us in some far, future world,
Where summers shall eternally endure?
The rustling leaves drop softly at my feet,
Warm airs caress my cheeks with loving kiss,
No chill of autumn shivers in the air,
Yet something indefinable I miss.
O Summer sweet, if never more on earth
I may rejoice in all your beauty rare,
I cannot say farewell, for we shall meet
Where you will bloom more infinitely fair.

Church's Musical Visitor.
D. M. Jordan.

LATE OCTOBER.
How peacefully the sunlight fell
Across the woodland's pleasant reaches,
And like a shower of gilded rain
The leaves dropped from the golden beeches!
Far down the shadowy aisles I heard
An undertone of plaintive sighing,
As if the waning Summer wept
For all her glories dead and dying.
The goldenrod, with drooping plume,
Had lost its aureole of gladness;
The starless morn by the road
Dropped down its seeds like tears of sadness;

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.
The far-off hill, veiled like a bride,
Seemed wedded to the sky immortal;
And through the sunset's golden gate
There flashed the gleam of heaven's portal.
O peaceful hour, O faith renewed,
That touched the fading earth with sweetness,
And lifted up my heart in thanks
For life's glad measure of completeness!
Though dead leaves rustle at my feet,
And all the fields are brown and sober,
The heart may blossom with new hope  Beneath the gray skies of October.

Cincinnati Commercial.
D. M. Jordan.

MOON AND DAWN.
The bluest gray—the grayest blue,
Where golden, gleaming stars are set;
A moon whose glorious yellow waves
Make fair the rippled rivulet.
Night has her curtin over all;
The first show dark against the sky;
The only sound is in the song
Of a mate nightingale close by.
The wooded walks, which seemed so sweet
Seem in the morning's fairy light,
Now, dim and shadowy, hold no charm
Save the mysterious charm of night.
One swallow stirs, the gold stars fade,
In the cold sky a chill wind wakes;
The gray clouds brighten out the morn,
And through pale mist the new day breaks.
Good-morn—good-night—which is the best?
God grant some day that I may find
Both true; good-morn to joy begun,
Good-night to sorrows left behind.

Saturday Magazine.

WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE PUNKIN.
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder 's in the shock,
And you hear the kyock and gobble of the strutting turkey-cock,
And the clackin' of the guineys, and the clackin' of the hens,
And the rooster's hallooer as he tiptoes on the fence,
IN SNOW-TIME.

How should I choose to walk the world with thee,
Mine own beloved? When green grass is stirred
By summer breezes, and each leafy tree
Shelters the nest of many a singing bird?
In time of roses, when the earth doth lie
Dressed in a garment of midsummer hues,
Beneath a canopy of sapphire sky,
Lulled by a soft wind's song? Or should I choose
To walk with thee along a wintry road,
Through flowerless fields, thick-skirted with frosty rime,
Beside an ice-bound stream, whose waters flowed
In voiceless music all the summer-time?
In winter dreariness, or summer glee,
How should I choose to walk the world with thee?

The time of roses is the time of love,
Ah, my dear heart! but winter fires are bright,
And in the lack of sunshine from above
We send more carefully love's sacred light.
The path among the roses is soft
Sun-kissed and radiant under youthful feet;
But on a wintry way true hands are oft
Do meet and cling in pressure close and sweet.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

THE HUMBLER POETS.

Oh, it's then's the time a feller is a feelin' at his best,
With the rickin' sun to greet him from a night of gracious rest,
As he leaves the house burchaded and goes out to feed the stock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

There's somepin kind o' heartly-like about the atmosphere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here,
Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees,
And the mumble of the hummin'birds and the buzzin' of the bees;
But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny morning of the early autumn days
Is a picture that no painter has the colorin' to mock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

The husky, rusty rustle of the tassels of the corn,
And the raspin' of the tangled leaves as golden as the morn;
The stubble in the furries — kind o' lonesome like, but still
A preachin' sermons to us of the barns they growed to fill;
The strawstack in the modder, and the reaper in the shed,
The hosses in their stalls below, the clover overhead,—
Oh, it sets my heart a clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

UNDER THE OPEN SKY.

There is more need of love's supporting arm
Along life's slippery pathway, in its frost;
There is more need for love to wrap us warm
Against life's cold, when summer flowers are lost.
Let others share thy life's glad summer glow,
But let me walk beside thee in its snow.

THE TROUT-BROOK.

You see it first near the dusty road,
Where the farmer stops with his heavy load,
At the foot of a weary hill;
Then away through it overflows,
Then away, with a leap and a laugh, it goes
At its own sweet, wandering will.

It flows through an orchard girdled and old,
Where in spring the dainty buds unfold
Their petals pink and white;
The apple-blossoms, so sweet and pure,
The streamlet's smiles and songs allure
To float off on its ripples bright.

It winds through the meadow, scarcely seen,
For o'er it the flowers and grasses lean
To salute its smiling face.
And thus, half hidden, it ripples along,
The whole way singing its summer song,
Maiden glee each arid place.

Just there, where the water, dark and cool,
Lingers a moment in yonder pool,
The dainty trout are at play;
And now and then one leaps in sight,
With sides aglow in the golden light
Of the long, sweet summer day.

Oh, back to their shelves those books consign,
And look to your rod and reel and line,
Make fast the feathered hook;
Then away from the town with its hum of life,
Where the air with worry and work is rife,
To the charms of the meadow brook.

CAEL WARING.
THE CLOUD.

A cloud came over a land of leaves
(Oh, hush, little leaves, lest it pass you by!)
How they had waited and watched for the rain,
Mountain and valley, and vineyard and plain,
With never a sign from the sky!
Day after day had the pitiless sun
Looked down with a lidless eye.

But now! On a sudden a whisper went
Through the topmost twigs of the poplar spire;
Out of the east a light wind blew;
(All the leaves trembled, and murmured, and drew Hope to the help of desire);
It stirred the faint pulse of the forest tree,
And breathed through the brake and the brier.

Slowly the cloud came, and then the wind died,
Dumb lay the land in its hot suspense;
The thrush on the elm-bough suddenly stopped,
The weather-warned swallow in mid-flying dropped,
The linnet ceased song in the fence;
Mute the cloud moved, till it hung overhead,
Heavy, big-bosomed, and dense.

Ah, the cool rush through the dry-tongued trees,
The patter and splash on the thirsty earth,
The eager bubbling of rill and rill,
The lisping of leaves that have drunk their fill,
The freshness that follows the dearth!
New life for the woodland, the vineyard, the vale,
New life with the world's new birth!
The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean,
The winds of heaven mix forever
With a sweet emotion.
Nothing in the world is single;
All things by a law divine
In one another's being mingle—
Why not I with thine?

See the mountains kiss high heaven,
And the waves clasp one another;
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdained its brother:
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea,
—What are all these hissing worth,
If thou kiss not me?

SHELLEY.

PART V.

Love, Sentiment, and Friendship.

THE AGE OF LOVE.

"Pray, tell me, Dimple Chin,
At what age does love begin?
"Oh!" the rosy lips reply,
"I can't tell you if I try,
"It is so long I can't remember;
Ask some younger miss than I."
"Tell, oh, tell me, Grizzled Face,
Do your heart and head keep pace?
When does hoary love expire?
When do frosts put out the fire?
"Ah!" the wise old lips reply,
"Youth may pass, and strength may die;
But for love!—I can't foretoken;
Ask some older sage than I."

WHEN WILL LOVE COME?

Some find Love late, some find him soon,
Some with the rose in May,
Some with the nightingale in June,
And some when skies are gray:
Love comes to some with smiling eyes,
And comes with tears to some:
For some Love sings, for some Love sighs,
For some Love's lips are dumb.
How will you come to me, fair Love?
Will you come late or soon?
With sad or smiling skies above,
By light of sun or moon?
Will you be sad, will you be sweet,
Sing, sigh, Love, or be dumb?
Will it be summer when we meet,
Or autumn ere you come?

PAKENHAM BEATTY.
A LOVE'S LIFE.

'Twas springtime of the day and year;
Clouds of white fragrance hid the thorn.
My heart unto her heart drew near,
And ere the dew had died the morn,
Sweet Love was born.

An August noon, an hour of bliss,
That stood with my hours along;
A word, a look, then — ah, that kiss!
Joy's veil was rent, her secret known:
Love was full-grown.

And now this drear November eve,
What has to-day been done, heard said?
It boots not; who has tears to grieve
For that last leaf yon tree has shed,
Or for Love dead?

Chambers' Journal.

THIS YEAR — NEXT YEAR.

This year — next year — sometime — never,
Gaily did she tell;
Rose-leaf after rose-leaf ever
Eddied round and fell.

This year — and she blushed demurely;
That would be too soon;
He could wait a little, surely,
'Tis already June.

Next year — that's almost too hurried,
Laughingly said she;
For when once a girl is married,
She no more is free.

Sometime — that is vague — long waiting
Many a trouble brings;
'Twixt delaying and debating
Love might use its wings.

Never — word of evil omen,
And she sighed, sigh, sigh —
'T is the hardest lot for women
Lone through life to go.

Next year — early in the May-time,
Was to be the day;
Looked she sweetly toward that gay time
Gleaming far away.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

Love came a beggar to her gate,
The night was drear, the hour was late,
And through the gloom she heard his moan
Whereat the gate he stood alone.

His round form in rags was clad,
His weeping eyes were wan and sad;
But hid beneath his garb of woe
He bore his arrows and his bow.

She wept to see the beggar weep,
She bade him on her bosom sleep,
His wretched plight allayed her fears,
She kissed and bathed him with her tears.

The merry eyes began to glow,
The rosy hand essayed the bow,
The rough disguise was cast aside,
And laughing Love for mercy cried.

Love came a beggar to her gate,
More wisely than with pomp and state;
For who hath woman's pity won
May count love's siege and battle done.
COULDN'T KEEP A SECRET.

I told my secret to the sweet wild roses,
Heavily dew, new waking in the morn;
And they had breathed it to a thousand others
Before another day was slowly born.

"Oh, fickle roses," said I, "you shall perish!"

So packed them for my lady sweet to wear
In the pure silence of her maiden bow.

The curled luxuriance of her chestnut hair.

I told the secret to a bird new building
Her nest at peace within the spreading tree;
And ere her children had begun to catter,
She told it o'er and o'er right joyously.

"Oh, traitor bird," I whispered, "stay thy singing,
Thou dost not know, there in thy nest above,
That secrets are not made to tell to others,
That silence is the birthright of true love."

I told the secret to my love, my lady;
She held it closely to her dazzling breast.
Then, as I clasped her, came a tiny whisper:

"The birds and flowers told me all the rest,
Nor shouldst thou chide them that they spake the secret;
The whole world is a chord of love divine,
And birds and flowers but fulfil their mission
In telling secrets sweet as mine and thine."

All the Year Round.

WHAT MY LOVER SAID.

By the merest chance, in the twilight gloom,
In the orchard path he met me,
In the tall wet grass with its fair perfume,
And I tried to pass, but he made no room;
Oh, I tried, but he would not let me!

So I stood and blushed till the grass grew red,
With my face bent down above it,
While he took my hand, as he whispering said —

How the clover lifted its pink, sweet head,
To listen to all that my lover said!
Oh, the clover in bloom! I love it.

In the high, wet grass went the path to hide,
And the low wet leaves hung over;
But I could not pass on either side,
For I found myself, when I vainly tried,
In the arms of my steadfast lover.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

And he held me there and he raised my head,
While he closed the path before me,
And he looked down into my eyes and said —

How the leaves bent down from the boughs o'erhead,
To listen to all that my lover said,
Oh, the leaves hanging lowly o'er me!

I am sure he knew, when he held me fast,
That I must be all unwilling;
For I tried to go, and I would have passed,
As the night was come with its dew at last,
And the skies with stars was filling,
But he clasped me close, when I would have fled,
And he made me hear his story,
And his soul came out from his lips, and said —

How the stars crept out, when the white moon led,
To listen to all that my lover said.
Oh, the moon and the stars in glory!

I knew that the grass and the leaves will not tell,
And I'm sure that the wind, precious rover,
Will carry his secret so safely and well
That no being shall ever discover
One word of the many that rapidly fell
From the eager lips of my lover.
And the moon and the stars that looked over
Shall never reveal what a fairy-like spell
They wove round about us that night in the dell,
In the path through the dew-draped clover;
Nor echo the whispers that made my heart swell
As they fell from the lips of my lover.

Boston Transcript.

LOVE'S TRANSFIGURATION.

O STRANGE sweet loveliness! O tender grace,
That in the light of passion's dayspring threw
Soft splendor on a fair familiar face,
Changing it, yet unchanged and old, yet new!
Perfect the portrait in my heart, and true,
Which traced the smile about the flower-like mouth,
And those gray eyes with just a doubt of blue,
Yet darkened with the passion of the South.
And the white arch of thoughtful forehead crowned
With meeting waves of hair — but still I found
Some undreamt light of tenderness that fell
From the new dawn, and made more fair to see
What was so fair, that now no song can tell
How lovely seemed thy lovelit face to me.

Chamber's Journal.
LOVE'S BELIEF.

I.
I believe if I should die,
And you should kiss my eyelids where I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,
The folded orbs would open at thy breath,
And, from its exile in the Isles of Death,
Life would come gladly back along my veins.

II.
I believe if I were dead,
And you upon my lifeless heart should tread,—
Not knowing what the poor clod chanced to be,—
It would find a sudden pulse beneath the touch
Of him it ever loved in life so much,
And throb again, warm, tender, true to thee.

III.
I believe if in my grave,
Hidden in woody dens all by the wave,
Your eyes should drop some warm tears of regret,
From every salty seed of your deep grief
Some fair, sweet blossom would leap into leaf,
To prove that death could not make my love forget.

IV.
I believe if I should fade
Into that realm where light is made,
And you should long once more my face to see,
I would come forth upon the hills of night
And gather stars like fagots, till thy sight,
Fed by the beacon-blaze, fell full on me.
I believe my love for thee
[Strong as my life] so nobly placed to be,
It could as soon expect to see the sun
Fall like a dead king from his heights sublime,
His glory stricken from the throne of time,
As thee unworthy the worship thou hast won.

V.
I believe who has not loved
Hath half the treasure of his life unproved,
Like one who, with the grape within his grasp,
Drops it, with all its crimson juice unpressed,
And all its juicy sweetness left unpressed,
Out of his careless and unheeding grasp.
I believe love, pure and true,
Is to the soul a sweet, immortal dew.

LIGHT AND LOVE.

If light should strike through every darkened place,
How many a deed of darkness and of shame
Would cease, arrested by its gentle grace,
And striving virtue rise, unscathed by blame!
The prisoner in his cell new hopes would frame,
The mender catch the metal's lurking trace.
The sage would grasp the lills that harm our race,
And unknown heroes leap to sudden fame.
If love but one short hour had perfect sway,
How many a rankling sore its touch would heal,
How many a misconception pass away,
And hearts long hardened learn at last to feel.
What sympathies would wake, what loves decay
If perfect love might reign but one short day!

FRIEND OR FOE?
Patter! patter! running feet!
Something stirring in the street!
Does it come, or does it go?
Patter! patter! friend or foe?

Love, the merry tricksy sprite,
In my lantern shin'to-night,
He is coming, friend or foe,
Love will "show him up" I know.
Patter! patter! nearer still;
Shall I? — no! — I — yes! — I will.
"Who goes there?" — "It's only me!"
Ah! my little pet Marie!

Merry, loving, fond, and fair,
In the dark I see you there.
Still the sentry I will play:
"There's a password, love, to say."

What! She cannot answer me?
Has she lost her tongue, may be?
Never mind, love; face fail well,
Tells what lips refuse to tell!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Passwords, questions, little one,
We can quite well leave alone.
Other folks than we, I know,
Shall solve our riddle: Friend or foe?

F. E. WEATHERLY.

—

LOVE'S LOGIC.

I. HER RESPECTABLE PAPA'S.
"My dear, be sensible! Upon my word
This — for a woman even — is absurd;
His income's not a hundred pounds, I know.
He's not worth loving." — "But I love him so."

II. HER MOTHER'S.
"You silly child, he is well made and tall;
But looks are far from being all in all.
His social standing's low, his family's low.
He's not worth loving." — "And I love him so."

III. HER ETERNAL FRIEND'S.
"Is that he picking up the fallen fan?
My dear! he's such an awkward, ugly man!
You must be certain, pet, to answer 'No.'
He's not worth loving." — "And I love him so."

IV. HER BROTHER'S.
"By love! were I a girl — through horrid hop
I would n't have a milk-and-water chap.
The man has not a single spark of 'go.'
He's not worth loving." — "Yet I love him so."

V. HER OWN.
"And were he everything to which I've listened:
Though he were ugly, awkward (and he is n't),
Poor, low-born, and destitute of 'go.'
He is worth loving, for I love him so."

Chambers' Journal.

—

"YES."

They stood above the world,
In a world apart;
And she drooped her happy eyes,
And stifled the throbbing pulses
Of her happy heart.
"Because you ever, ever will
Take such a crooked view of things,
Distorting this and that, until Confusion ends in cavilings."

"Because you never, never will
Perceive the force of what I say;
As if I always reasoned ill
Enough to take one's breath away!"

"But what if riper love replace
The vision that enchanted me,
When all you did was perfect grace,
And all you said was melody?"

"And what if loyal heart renew
The image never quite foregone,
Combining, as of yore, in you
A Samson and a Solomon."

"Then to the breezes will I toss
The straws we split with temper's loss;
Then seal upon your lips anew
The peace that gentle hearts ensue."

"Oh, welcome then, ye playful ways,
And sunshine of the early days;
And banish to the clouds above
Dull reason, that bedarkens love!"

---

R. D. Blackmore

THE SEA'S LOVE.

Once in the days of old,
In the years of youth and mirth,
The Sea was a lover bright and bold,
And he loved the golden Earth.
The Sun, in his royal raiment clad,
Loved her and found her sweet,
But the Sea was content and glad
Only to be at her feet.
Ah! that the bards should sing,
And wait for the golden years!
Love was and is but an idle thing,
'Tis but a wind that veers.

And Earth in her beauty and pride
Held her lips to the wooing Sun;
He said, "Thou art fair, O my bride."
And she sang, "I am shine alone."

The faithful Sea at her faithless feet
Rolled with a broken moan;
"O Sun!" he cried, "but thy bride is sweet,
And I am alone, alone!"
Ah! that the bards, etc.

Oft would the Sun depart,
And his bride in her gloom made moan,
And the Sea would cry that her loving heart
Should be left to pine alone.
And his voice is strange and sad and sweet,
"O love, not mine! not mine!
I am content to lie at thy feet,
And love thee in storm and shine."
Ah! that the bards should sing,
And wait for the golden years!
Love was and is but an idle thing,
"'Tis but a wind that veers."

F. E. Weatherly

INDECISION.

Do I love her?
Dimpling red lips at me pouting,
Dimpling shoulders as I float;
No, I don't!

Do I love her?
Prisoned in those crystal eyes
Purity forever lies;
Yes, I do!

Do I love her?
Little wild and wilful fiction,
Teasing, torturing contradiction;
No, I don't!

Do I love her?
With kind acts and sweet words she
Aids and comforts poverty;
Yes, I do!

Do I love her?
Quick she puts her cuisses on,
Stabs with laughter, stings with scorn;
No, I don't!

Do I love her?
No! Then to my arms she flies,
Filling me with glad surprise;
Ah, yes, I do!
FRENCH WITH A MASTER.

"Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

"To love, to live; this it is to live."

TEACH you French? I will, my dear! Sit and con your lesson here.
What did Adam say to Eve?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Don't pronounce the last word long;
Make it short to suit the song;
Rhyme it to your flowing sleeve,
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Sleeve, I said, but what's the harm
If I really meant your arm?
Mine shall twine it (by your leave),
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Learning French is full of slips;
Do as I do with the lips;
Here's the right way, you perceive,
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

French is always spoken best
Breathing deeply from the breast;
Darling, does your bosom breathe?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Now, my dainty little sprite,
Have I taught your lesson right?
Then what pay shall I receive?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Will you think me overbold
If I linger to be told
Whether you yourself believe
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Pretty pupil, when you say
All this French to me today,
Do you mean it, or deceive?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Tell me, may I understand,
When I press your little hand,
That our hearts together cleave?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

Have you in your treasure room
For some orange-buds to bloom?
May I such a garland weigh?
Aimer, aimer; c'est à vivre.

My sakes! just a pose if what the folks
Is saying should be so!
Go, Cousin Jane, and speak to her,
Find out and let me know;
Tell her the gals should court the men,
For isn't this leap-year?
That's why I'm kind of bashful like,
A waiting for her here.
THE MILLER AND THE MAID.

ACROSS the heath and down the hill,
Aback of patient Dobbin,
The farmer's daughter rides to mill,
And mocks the thrush and robin.

For saddle she's a sack of grain,
She sidewise sits and chirrups;
A finger in old Dobbin's mane
Is good as forty chirrups.

The miller comes — a merry blade! —
And dips his hat and greets her:
"What wish you here, my pretty maid?"
"'I've brought a sack of wheat, sir."

"And have you gold to give for grain?"
"Not I, we're poor, alack I sir;
But take your toll — a tenth, I wist —
From what is in my sack, sir."

He lifts her lightly from her seat,
And laughs — a merry miller;
"I cannot take my toll in wheat,
I must have gold or sillier.

"But since you've brought nor coin nor scrip,"
He smiles and fondly eyes her —
"I'll ask no toll but from your lip —
One kiss! who'll be the wiser?"

The maiden blushed and bowed her head,
And with her apron fingered,
And pouseth out her lips of red
Where countless kisses lingered.

"A single kiss!" (She smiled in glee,
As who would say, "I've caught you.")
"My father said your toll would be
A tenth of what I brought you."

The mill-stream shouted to the sands:
"He kissed the farmer's daughter!"
But the grim old wheel stretched out its hands
And spanked the saucy water.

F. N. SCOTT.
A KISS IN THE RAIN.

O'er stormy moor I chanced to meet
A lassie in the town;
Her locks were like the ripened wheat,
Her laughing eyes were brown.
I watched her, as she tripped along,
Till madness filled my brain,
And then—and then—I knew 'twas wrong—
I kissed her in the rain.

With rain-drops shining on her cheek,
Like dew-drops on a rose,
The little lassie strove to speak,
My boldness to oppose;
She strove in vain, and, quivering,
Her finger stole in mine;
And then the birds began to sing,
The sun began to shine.

Oh, let the clouds grow dark above,
My heart is light below;
'Tis always summer when we love,
However winds may blow;
And I'm as proud as any prince,
All honors I disdain;
She says I am her rainbow since
I kissed her in the rain.

TÊTE-À-TÊTE.

I.
A brr of ground, a smell of earth,
A pleasant murmur in the trees,
The chirp of birds, an insect's hum,
And, kneeling on their chubby knees,
Two neighbors' children at their play;
Who has not seen a hundred such?
A head of gold, a head of brown,
Bending together till they touch.

II.
A country school-house by the road,
A spicy scent of woods anear,
And all the air with summer sounds
Laden for who may care to hear.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

So do not two, a boy and girl,
Who stay, when all the rest are gone,
Solving a problem deeper far
Than one they seem intent upon.

Dear hearts, of course they do not know
How near their heads together lean;
The bee that wanders through the room
Has hardly space to go between.

Now darker is the head of brown,
The head of gold is brighter now,
And lines of deeper thought and life
Are written upon either brow.

The sense that thrills their being through
With nameless longings vast and dim
Has found a voice, has found a name,
And where he goes she follows him.

Again their heads are bending near,
And bending down in silent awe;
Above a morsel pure and sweet,
A miracle of love and law.

How often shall their heads be bowed
With joy or grief, with love and pride,
As waxeth strong that feeble life,
Or slowly ebbs its falling tide!

IV.
A seaward hill where lie the dead
In dreamless slumber deep and calm;
Above their graves the roses bloom,
And all the air is full of balm.

They do not smell the roses sweet;
They do not see the ships that go
A'long the far horizon's edge;
They do not feel the breezes blow.

Here loving hands have gently laid
The neighbors' children, girl and boy
And man and wife; head close to head
They sleep, and know nor pain nor joy.
WE WEDDED.

Some swift and bitter words we said,
And then we parted. How the sun
Swam through the sullen mist of gray!
A chill fell on the summer day,
Life’s best and happiest hours were done;
Friendship was dead.

How proud we went our separate ways,
And spoke no word and made no moan!
She braided up her flowing hair,
That I had always called so fair,
Although she scorned my loving tone,
My word of praise.

And I! I matched her scorn with scorn,
I hated her with all my heart,
Until — we chanced to meet one day;
She turned her pretty head away;
I saw two pretty tear-drops start,
Lo! love was born.

Some fond, repenting word I said,
She answered only with a sigh;
But when I took her hand in mine
A radiant glory, half divine,
Flooded the earth and filled the sky —
Now we are wed.

MUSIC IN THE SOUL.

Over my soul the great thoughts roll
Like the waves of a mighty sea;
But clear through the rushing and surging there sounds
A wonderful music to me.
So sweet, so low, the harmonies flow;
They rise and they fall, they come and they go;
Wonderful, beautiful, soft, and slow.

Not here, not there, not in this calm air,
Nor born of the silver sea;
Immortal — beyond all the music of man —
It is love that is singing to me.
So sweet, so low, the harmonies flow;
They rise and they fall, they come and they go;
Wonderful, beautiful, soft, and slow.

Not mine alone this melting tone —
The soul of it comes from thee —
For thou in thy bosom art singing of love,
And the music flows over to me.
So sweet, so low, the harmonies flow;
They rise and they fall, they come and they go;
Wonderful, beautiful, soft, and slow.

YES?

Is it true, then, my girl? did you mean it —
The word spoken yesterday night?
Does that hour seem so sweet now between it
And this has come day’s sober light?
Have you waked from a moment of rapture
To remember, regret, and repent,
And to hate, perchance, him who has trapped your Unthinking consent?

Who was he, last evening — this fellow
Whose audacity lent him a charm?
Have you promised to wed Punchinello?
For he took Figaro’s arm?
Will you have the Court foot of the papers,
The clown in the jester’s ring,
Who earns his scant bread by his capers,
To be your heart’s king?

A Modoc — a Malay — a Kaiffr
(“Bohemian” puts it too mild);
By profession a poor paragrapher,
Light Laughter’s unrecognized child;
At the best but a Brummagem poet,
Inspired of tobacco and beer,
Altogether off color — I know it;
I’ve all that, my dear.

When we met quite by chance at the theatre,
And I saw you home under the moon,
I’d no thought, love, that mischief would be at her
Tricks with my tongue quite so soon;
That I should forget fate and fortune,
Make a difference twist Sérès and delf;
That I’d have the calm nerve to importune
You, sweet, for yourself.

It’s appalling, by Jove, the audacious
Effrontery of that request!
But you — you grew suddenly gracious,
And hid your sweet face on my breast.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Why you did it I cannot conjecture;
I surprised you, poor child, I dare say,
Or perhaps — does the moonlight affect your Heart often that way?
It was glorious for me, but what pleasure
Could you find in such wooing as this?
Were my arms not too urinate in pressure,
Was no flavor of clove in my kiss?
Ah, your lips I pressed when I made with
Their dainty divinity free —
Twin loves never meant to be played with
By fellows like me.

You’re released! With some wooer replace me
More worthy to be your life’s light;
From the tablet of memory efface me,
If you don’t mean your “yes” of last night.
But unless you are anxious to see me a
Wreck of the pipe and the cup
In my birthplace and graveyard, Bohemia —
Love, don’t give me up.

YES!

"Is it true?" — that’s the doubtful suggestion
I’ve made to myself ever since;
Did I misinterpret your question?
Is joy, then, so hard to convince?
"Is it true?" — For my part, yes, completely,
And, if I may answer for you,
I’ll add it is wondrously, sweetly,
Entrancingly true.

Oh, dear, if I make a confession,
You’ll admit you have tempted it forth;
If if you have long had possession,
You’ll not deem the prize of less worth?
If I say that a lifetime of pleasure
Last evening was brimmed in my cup,
And that you poured the liberal measure,
You won’t give me up?

Ere ever I saw you I knew you,
I watched for your song and your jest.
And fancy in bright colors drew you
My hero, my boyard, my best.
Nor was it mere fancy anointed
Yourself as my bosom’s high priest;
When we met I was not disappointed —
No, love, not the least.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

Last night — and I a owning already
The secrets of nearly a year.
They tell me you’re fast, scarcely steady,
In short, a Bohemian, dear.
Well, those are not faults that need hurt you;
They’ll do to pair off with my own —
You have all a Bohemian’s virtue,
The rest I condone.

But I — how was I ever worthy
Of winning so precious a prize?
My thoughts, dear, are of the earth, earthy,
While yours soar away to the skies.
If all that you hint at were real, —
The jest, the derisive, and the tear,
The world could not dim my ideal,
Nor make you less dear.

So, darling, though you are above me
In intellect, knowledge, and worth,
Sufficient for me that you love me, —
I’ll follow you over the earth,
Sufficient for me that you deem me a
Soul not unworthy to sup
The joys of your wondrous Bohemia —
I can’t give you up.

Written for the San Francisco Bohemian Club,
as a reply to Bunner’s “Yes!"

GEORGE H. JESSOP.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

I am dying, Egypt, dying!
Eho the crimson life-tide fast,
And the dark Plutonian shadows
Gather on the evening blast.
Let the arm, O Queen, support me;
Hush thy sob and bow thine ear!
Heard the great heart secrets
Thou, and thou alone, must hear.

Though my scared and veteran legions
Rear their eagles high no more,
And my wrecked and scattered galleys
Sweat dark Actium’s fatal shore;
Though no glittering guards surround me,
Prompt to do their master’s will,
I must perish like a Roman —
Die the great Triumvir still!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Let not Caesar's servile minions
Mock the lion thus laid low;
'Twas no foe man's arm that fell him—
'Twas his own that dealt the blow—
His, who, pillowed on thy bosom,
Turned aside from glory's ray—
His, who, drunk with thy caresses,
Madly threw a world away.

Should the base plebeian rabble
Dare assail my fame in Rome,
Where my noble spouse, Octavius,
Weeps within her widowed home,
Seek her! Say the gods have told me—
Altars, augurs, circling wings—
That her blood with mine commingled
Yet shall mount the throne of kings!

As for thee, star-eyed Egyptian!
Glorious sorceress of the Nile!
Light the path to Stygian horrors
With the splendors of thy smile.
Give to Caesar crowns and arches,
Let his brow the laurel twine,
I can scorn the Senate's triumphs,
Triumphing in love like thine.

I am dying, Egypt, dying!
Hark! the sounding foeman's cry!
They are coming! Quick, my falchion!
Let me front them ere I die.
Ah! no more amid the battle
Shall my heart exciting swell;
Isis and Osiris guard thee—
Cleopatra—Rome—farewell.

——

Cleopatra to Antony.

Spread a feast with choicest viands—
Friends, 'twill be my very last;
Bring the rarest flowers to grace it—
Haste, my sands of life flow fast;
Place an asp beneath the lotus
That shall light me to the grave
With its starry petals' splendor;
Weep not, let your hearts be brave.

Speed, Octavius, with thy minions—
Fire thy heart with deadly hate!
Thou wilt miss the royal writs—
Cleopatra rules her fate!

——

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

She defies Rome's conquering legions!
Let them triumph in her fall!

What is earthly pomp or greatness?—
Love, thy love outweighs it all!

Thrones and sceptres are but trilles
To my spirit's yearning pain;
What were fortune's gifts without thee?
I would lose the world to gain?

Let no base heart tell our story;
Ages, speak, when time unburns
These dull ashes, say to Ages,
Soul to soul their love still burns.

Fatal asp, thy sleep's not endless,
That the morrow's dawn will prove;
I shall reign in lands elysian,
Antony's proud Queen of Love!

Isis and Osiris, hear me!
Hear me, gods of boundless power!
Ye have tasted deathless passion!
Ye will guide me to his bower!

Pardon, mighty ones, the error
If Octavia have wronged,
Judged by higher laws supernal;
Ah! how earthly passions thronged.

Overpowering heart and reason,
Nature, answering Nature's call,
Rushed as cloud responsive rushes
On to cloud, to meet and—fall.

Antony, my love, I'm dying!
Curdled fast life's crimson tide,
But no dark Plutonian shadows
Fall between us to divide.

Hark! the Stygian waters swelling,
Call me, love, with thee to rest,—
Death I fear not since thou braved it,
Fellowed on my aching breast.

Strange emotions fill my bosom
As I bear the vain unknowns;
Yet my heart still throb's in dying,
Antony, for thee alone.

Oh! "I feel immortal longings"—
I can brave stern Pluto's frown,—
Robe me in my regal garments,
Deck with jewels, sceptre, crown.

Antony! I'm coming! coming!
Ope, open wide thine arms!
Ah! the blissful hope of union
Robe the grave of its alarms.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

See! the glorious heroes beckon
O'er the Stygian water's swell,
I shall have immortal crowning!
Egypt—dear old Nile!—farewell.

MRS. SARAH D. CLARKE.

CLEOPATRA'S SOLILOQUY.

What care I for the tempest? What care I for the rain?
If it beat upon my bosom, would it cool its burning rain,—
This pain that never has left me since on his heart I lay,
And sobbed my grief at parting as I'd sob my soul away?
O Antony! Antony! Antony! when in thy circling arms
Shall I sacrifice to Eros my glorious woman's charms,
And burn life's sweetest incense before his sacred shrine,
With the living fire that flashes from thine eyes into mine?
Oh, when shall I feel thy kisses rain down upon my face,
As a queen of love and beauty I lie in thine embrace.
Melting, melting, melting, as a woman only can
When she's a willing captive in the conquering arms of man.
As he towers a god above her—and to yield is not defeat,
For love can own no victor if love with love shall meet!
I still have regal splendor, I still have queenly power,
And, more than all, unfaded is woman's glorious dower.
But what care I for pleasure? what's beauty to me now,
Since Love no longer places his crown upon my brow?
I have tasted its elixir, its fire has through me flashed,
But when the wine glowed brightest, from my eager lips 't was dashed.
And I would give all Egypt but once to feel the bliss
Which thrills through all my being wherewith I meet his kiss.
The tempest wildly rages, my hair is wet with rain,
But it does not still my longing or cool my burning pain.
For Nature's storms are nothing to the raging of my soul
When it burns with jealous frenzy beyond a queen's control.
I fear not pale Octavia, that haughty Roman dame,
My lion of the desert, my Antony, can tame.
I fear no Persian beauty, I fear no Grecian maid;
The world holds not the woman of whom I am afraid.
But I'm jealous of the rapture I tasted in his kiss,
And I would not that another should share with me that bliss.
No joy would I deny him, let him call it where he will,
So mistress of his bosom is Cleopatra still;
So that he feels forever, when he Love's nectar sips,
'T was sweeter, sweeter, sweeter when tasted on my lips;
So that all other kisses, since he has drawn in mine,
Shall be unto my loved as "water after wine."
Awhile let Caesar fancy Octavia's pallid charms
Can hold Rome's proudest soul a captive from these arms.
Her cold embrace but brightens the memory of mine,
And for my warm caresses he in her arms shall pine.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

'Twas not for love he sought her; but for her princely dower;
She brought him Caesar's friendship; she brought him kindly power.
I should have bid him take her, had he not counsel sought,—
I've but to smile upon him, and all her charms are nought;
For I would scorn to hold her by but a single hair
Save his own longlog for me when I'm no longer there;
And I will show you, Roman, that for one kiss from me
Wife, fame, and even honor to him shall nothing be!
Throw wide the window, Isis, fling perfumes o'er me now,
And bind the lotus-blossoms again upon my brow.
The rain has ceased its weeping, the driving storm is past,
And calm are Nature's pulses that lately beat so fast.
Gone is my jealous frenzy, and Eros reigns serene,
The only god e'er worshipped by Egypt's haughty queen.
With Antony, my loved, I'll kneel before his shrine,
Till the loves of Mars and Venus are nought to his and mine;
And down through coming ages, in every land and tongue,
With them shall Cleopatra and Antony be sung.
Burn sandal-wood and cassia; let the vapor round me wreath,
And mingle with the incense the lotus-blossoms breathe;
Let India's spicy odors and Persia's perfumes rare
Be wafted on the pinions of Egypt's fragrant air.
With the singing of the night breeze, the river's rippling flow,
Let me hear the notes of music in cadence soft and low.
Draw round my couch its curtains; I'll bathe my soul in sleep;
I feel its gentle languor upon me slowly creep.
Oh, let me cheat my senses with dreams of future bliss,
In fancy feel his presence, in fancy taste his kiss,
In fancy nestle closely against his throbbing heart,
And throw my arms around him, no more, no more to part.
Hush! hush! his spirit's pinions are resting in my ears;
He comes upon the tempest to calm my jealous fears;
He comes upon the tempest in answer to my call,—
Wife, fame, and even honor, for me he leaves them all;
And royally I'll welcome my lover to my side.
I have won him, I have won him from Caesar and his bride.
The Galaxy.

MRS. BAYARD CLARK.

CLEOPATRA'S DREAM.

Lo, by Nile's languid waters
Fades the dreamy summer day,
Where, on couch of gold and crimson,
Egypt's royal daughter lay,—
Dreaming Jay, while palm and pillar
Cast their lengthening shadows now,
And the lotus-laden zephyrs
Lightly kissed her queenly brow.
Soft the evening steals upon her,
As behind the curtained west
Sink the day-god in his splendor
—
Folds his wooing arms to rest.

Drowsy shades of dusky Egypt
Homeward, slow, their burdens bear,
While the boatman’s lazy challenge
Falls upon the quivering air.

Dreams she of her Roman lover,
He who cast a crown away,
Country, kindred, fame, and honor,
In her captive arms to lay?

Ay! of Antony her hero.
Sharer of her heart and throne,
He whose ships, now homeward sailing,
Bear her all of love alone.

Starts she in her sleeping glory,
And her brown arms, jewelled, bare,
Round and rich in queenly beauty,
Wildly cleave the slumberous air.

Beads of perspiration gather
On her matchless woman’s brow,
While her parted lips in anguish
Tell of heart-pangs none may know.

Sure some vision, dire and dreadful
Falls upon her eyes and brain,
Fiercely to her being’s centre
With a fiery shaft of pain.

Like a sea her full-orbed bosom
Swells and falls with pent-up ire;
Then her spirit breaks in thraldom,
And she shrieks in wild despair! —

"Charmian, quick, unloose my girdle,
Give me breath! I faint! I die!
He! slaves, bring my royal galleys,
Let us hence to Egypt fly.

Oh for vengeance on the traitor,
And upon his Roman bride!
Let him never dare — ah, Charmian,
Stand you closely by my side.

"Do I dream? Is this my palace
Yon my sweetly flowing Nile?
Ah, I see — O great Osiris,
How I thank thee for thy smile!
Oh, I've had such fearful vision
He, my Antony, untrue;
And my heart was nigh to bursting
With its fearful weight of woe.
"Good-night," I'd say: "good-night—good-by!"
"Good-night!"—from her with half a sigh—
"Good-night!"—Good-night! And then—
And then I do not go, but stand,
Again lean on the railing, and—
Begin it all again.

Ah! that was many a day ago—
That pleasant summer-time—although
The gate is standing yet;
A little cranky, it may be,
A little weather-worn—like me—
Who never can forget
The happy—"End"? My cynic friend,
Pray save your sneers—there was no "end." Watch yonder chubby thing!
That is our youngest, hers and mine;—
See how he climbs, his legs to twine
About the gate and swing.

In the Hammock.

The lazy, languid breezes sweep
Across a fluttered crowd of leaves;
The shadows fall so dim, so deep,
Ah, love, 'tis good to dream and sleep
Where nothing jars or nothing grieves.

My love she lies at languid ease
Across her silken hammock's length;
Her stray curls flutter in the breeze
That moves amidst the sunlight trees,
And stains their gold with mimic strength.

So calm, so still, the drowsy noon;
So sweet, so fair, the golden day;
Too sweet that it should turn so soon
From set of sun to rising moon,
And fade and pass away.

Her eyes are full of happy dreams,
And languid with unuttered bliss;
The calm of unstirred mountain streams,
The light of unforgotten scenes,
Live in her thoughts of that or this.

A year, a month, a week, a day;
The meaning of some look or word,
Swift, sudden as a sunbeam's ray,—
Do these across her memory stray
As if again she looked or heard?

Love, Sentiment, and Friendship.

It may be so. I would it were,
For I who love and she who dreams;
The world to me is only her,
Can my heart's cry to pity stir
Her heart that silent seems?

O deep eyes, lose your gentle calm;
O fair check, lose your tint of rose;
O heart, bear swift with love's alarm,
That I may win with chains and charm,
And hold you till life close.

Lo, sweet, I stand, and gaze and faint
Beneath the wonder of your eyes,
Whose beauty I can praise and paint
Till words and fancy lose restraint,
And fear forgotten dice.

London Society.

The Ring's Motto.

A lover gave the wedlock ring
Into the goldsmith's hand;
"Grave me," he said, "a tender thought
Within the golden band."
The goldsmith graved
With careful art,
"Till death us part."

The wedding bell rang gladly out;
The husband said, "O wife,
Together we shall share the grief,
The happiness of life,
I give to thee
My hand, my heart,
Till death us part."

"Twas she that lifted now his hand,
(O love, that this should be!)
Then on it placed the golden band,
And whispered tenderly:
"Till death us join,
Lo, thou art mine,
And I am thine.

"And when death joins, we nevermore
Shall know an aching heart,
The bridal of that better love
Death has no power to part.
That truth will be,
For thee and me,
Eternity."
THE HUMBLER POETS.

So up the hill and down the hill,
Through fifty changing years,
They shared each other's happiness,
They dried each other's tears.

Alas, alas,
That death's cold dart
Such love can part!

But one sad day — she stood alone
Beside his narrow bed;
She drew the ring from off her hand,
And to the goldsmith said:

"O man who graved
With careful art,
'Till death us part,'

"Now grave four other words for me,—
'Till death us join.'" He took
The precious golden band once more,
With solemn, wistful look,
And sought with care,
For love, not coin,
"Till death us join."

ASKING.

He stole from my bodice a rose,
My cheek was his color the while;
But, ah, the sly rogue! he well knew,
Had he asked it, I must have said no.

He snatched from my lips a soft kiss;
I tried at a frown — 't was a smile;
For, ah, the sly rogue! he knows this:
Had he asked it, I must have said no.

That "asking" in love's a mistake,
It puts one in mind to refuse;
'Tis best not to ask, but to take;
For it saves one the need to say no.

Yet, stay — this folly I've said;
Some things should be asked if desired;
My rogue hopes my promise to wed;
When he asks me, I will not say no.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

AN OLD RHYME.

"I dare not ask a kiss,
I dare not beg a smile,
Lest having that or this,
I might grow proud the while.
No, no, the utmost share
Of my desire shall be
Only to kiss the air
That lately kissed thee."

THE FRIVOLOUS GIRL.

Her eyes were bright and merry,
She danced in the mazy whirl;
She took the world in its sunshine,
For she was a frivolous girl.

She dressed like a royal princess,
She wore her hair in a curl;
The gossips said, "What a pity,
That she's such a frivolous girl!"

(Twenty years later.)

She's a wife, a mother, a woman,
Grand, noble, and pure as a pearl;
While the gossips say, "Would you think it,
Of only a frivolous girl?"

Steubenville Herald.

WHERE IGNORANCE IS BLISS.

Is love contagious? — I don't know;
But this I am prepared to say,
That I have felt for many a day
A great desire to make it so.

Does she vouchsafe a thought of me?
Sometimes I think she does; and then
I'm forced to grope in doubt again,
Which seems my normal state to be.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Why don't I ask, and asking know?
I grant perhaps it might be wise;
But when I look into her eyes,
And hear her voice which thrills me so,
I think that on the whole I won't;
I'd rather doubt than know she don't.

AN EXPLANATION.

Her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?
You'll be angry, I fear,
But her lips were so near—
Well, I can't make it clear,
Or explain it to you,
But—her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?

THINE EYES.

Thine eyes were so near
That—what else could I do?
You'll be angry, I fear,
But her lips were so near—
Well, I can't make it clear,
Or explain it to you,
But—her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?

Scribner's Magazine.

WALTER LEARNED.

HYMN TO SANTA RITA,

THE PATRON SAINT OF THE IMPOSSIBLE.

Have you heard the name of Santa Rita?
Patron of the hopeless, she;
Fleeting dreams of pleasure fleeter
Under her protection be;

Idle wish and aspiration,
Fruitless hope and gray despair,
Crave alike her mediation,—
Santa Rita! hear my prayer.

Long have I, with ardor true,
Sought the maiden of my dreams,
Chasing still my bright ideal,
Like a marsh-light's taunting gleams.
Candles sweet and incense sweeter
Do I vow thee, week by week,—
Give me, lovely Santa Rita!
The ideal girl I seek.

Rich fair eyes, like summer twilight
Ere the stars gliss through the blue,
Beaming with a soft and shy light.
Hiding summer lightnings too:
Rich brown hair in wayward cluster,
Rippling down in heavy fold,
Giving in the sunset's lustre
Here and there a gleam of gold;

Fair, sweet face, whose quick expression
Mirrors well the thoughts that fill,—
Soft now with love's shy confession.
Brightened now by fire of wit;
Fair, sweet nature, were it bolder
To dispel the doubts that spring,
I would touch her angel shoulder,
Just to feel the budding wing!

Silver voice to charm and fill me
With an ecstacy of sound;
Springing, buoyant step to thrill me
In the Waltz's dazzling round;
Maid as bright as rainbow's prism,
Wit as keen as archer's dart,
And, to work the mechanism,
Just a little light of heart.

This my longing, Santa Rita!
This the girl for whom I wait.
Tell me, tell me, shall I meet her
Ere I die disconsolate?
Are my dreams but idle fancy?
Lives there such a maiden rare?
I invoke thy nectarancy,—
Santa Rita! hear my prayer!

ALVEY A. ADEE.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

WE LOVE BUT FEW.

Oh, yes, we mean all kind words that we say
To old friends and to new;
Yet doth this truth grow dearer day by day:
We love but few.

We love! we love! What easy words to say,
And sweet to hear,
When sunrise splendor brightens all the way,
And, far and near,
Are breath of flowers and carolling of birds,
And bells that chime;
Our hearts are light: we do not weigh our words
At morning time!

But when the matin music all is hushed,
And life's great load
Doth weigh us down, and thick with dast
Doth grow the road,
Then do we say less often that we love.
The words have grown!
With pleading eyes we look to Christ above,
And clasp our own.

Their lives are bound to ours by mighty bands
No mortal strain,
Nor Death himself, with his prevailing hands,
Can separate.
The world is wide, and many friends are dear,
And friendship true:
Yet do these words read plainer, year by year:
We love but few.

A SONG FOR THE GIRL I LOVE.

A song for the girl I love —
God love her!
A song for the eyes that tender shine,
And the fragrant mouth that melts on mine,
The shimmering tresses uncontrolled
That clasp her neck with tendrils of gold;
And the blossom mouth and the dainty chin,
And the little dimples out and in —
The girl I love —
God love her!

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

UNDOWERED.

Thou hast not gold? Why, this is gold
All clustering round thy forehead white;
And were it weighed, and were it told,
I could not say its worth to-night!

Thou hast not wit? Why, what is this
Wherewith thou captivest many a wight,
Who doth forget a tongue is his,
As I well-nigh forget to-night?

Nor station? Well, ah, well! I own
Thou hast no place assured thee quite;
So now I raise thee to a throne;
Begin thy reign, my Queen, to-night.

Scriver's Magazine.

HARRIET MCEWEN KIMBALL.

THE SILENCE OF LOVE.

I hold that we are wrong to seek
To put in words our deepest thought;
The terse things by Nature taught
Are turned to coarser when we speak.
The flower whose perfume charms the sense
Grows hard and common to the touch,
And that which is wordy overmuch
Is marred by its experience;
For love, like sympathy, hath bounds
More strong in silence than in speech,
And hearts speak loudest, each to each,
Through meeting lips and clasp of hands.
Nor could I hope for fitting word
To form in speech the thoughts that start;
The inner core of every heart
Hath yearnings that are never heard.
They are too subtle, and transcend
The power of words to speak them right;
We therefore shut them out of sight,
To burn in silence to the end.
Yet even as the Magi held
Their sun as sacred, so I hold
My love is holy, sacred-smiled,
And pure as sacred fire of eld.
Nor dare I stain with word or pen
This inner purer love to thee,
Whose higher nature raiseth me
Beyond the common line of men.

HAMILTON DRUMMOND.

AH! ME.
The fairest flower upon the vine—
So far above my reach it grows
I ne'er can hope to make it mine—
Smiles in the sun,—a pointless rose.
The wind is whispering soft and low
Pond praises of its loveliness;
Its sweetness I can only guess,
But never know.

On beatious lips—as far away
As is the rose—a kiss there lies,
And on those lips that kiss must stay,
Though I may look with longing eyes;
A cruel fate hath willed it so,
Not mine that crimson mouth to press;
Its sweetness I can only guess,
But never know.

JUBILATE.
BEYOND the light-house, standing sentinel
Just where the line of earth and ocean meet,
The foam-crowned rollers slowly rose and fell
Upon the low reef with a murmurous beat.
And sweeping far away, like rippled gold,
Lay the wide bound of the endless sea,
Where a brave ship down to the sky-line rolled,
Bearing afar the one most dear to me.

Slowly the broad moon dipped into the west,
And for a moment hung the waves above;
While borne along the ocean's lighted breast
The stout ship swiftly bore the strong wind drove.

Right in the sailing sphere she sailed at last,
Her tall sails bearing her right bravely on;
Our flashed a radiancy, gliding hull and mast,
And in a moment ship and moon were gone.

And seeing this, my heart grew glad and light.
Though storms may roar along the restless main,
I know there is a limit to their might,
And I shall have my sweetheart's kiss again.

MY JOSIAR.

The sun went down as we sat there—
Josiar seemed uneasy;
An' his mother she began to call:
"Loovewczy, oh, Loovewczy!"
An' then Josiar spoke right up,
As I was just a starin',
An' said, "Loovewczy! what's the use
Of us two ever partin'?"

If kind o' took me by surprise,
An' yet I knew 't was comin';
I'd heard it all the summer long
In every wild bec's hummin';
I'd studied out the way I'd act,—
But law! I couldn't do it;
I meant to hide my love from him,
But seems as if he knew it.
An' lookin' down into my eyes
He must have seen the fire,—
An' ever since that hour I've loved
An' worshipped my Josiar.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

I can't tell what the women mean
Who let men fool around 'em,
Believin' all the nonsense that
They only say to sound 'em;
I know, for one, I've never seen
The man that I'd admire
To have a hangin' after me
Instead of my Josiah.

THE CONSTANT FRIEND.

Human hopes and human creeds
Have their root in human needs,
And I would not wish to strip
From that washerwoman's lip
Any song that she may sing,
Any hope that she can bring;
For the woman has a friend
That will keep her to the end.

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship needs no studied phrases,
Polished face, or winning wiles;
Friendship deals no lavish praises,
Friendship does no surface smiles.
Friendship follows Nature's dictum,
Shuns the blandishments of Art,
Boldly severe truth from fiction,
Speaks the language of the heart.

Friendship favors no condition,
Scorns a narrow-minded creed,
Lovingly fulfills its mission,
Be it word or be it deed.

Friendship cheers the faint and weary,
Makes the timid spirit brave,
Warms the erring, lights the dreary,
Smooths the passage to the grave.

Friendship — pure, unselfish friendship,
All through life's allotted span,
Nurture's, strengthens, widens, lengthens
Man's affinity with man.

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

FRIENDSHIP, LOVE, AND TRUTH.

Friendship doth bind, with pleasant ties,
The heart of man to man, and age
But strengthens it — it never dies
Till finished is life's final page.

Love is the sacred link which binds
Hearts joined by friendship firmer still;
Who once has felt it, in it finds
Joys which his soul with pleasure fill.

Truth only can complete the chain,
Its links enduring strength can give;
With this unbroken chain will remain
While e'er the human soul shall live.

DOLCE FAR NIENTE.

My friend, my chum, my trusty crony!
We are designed, it seems to me,
To be two happy lazaroni,
On sunshine fed, and macaroni,
Far off by some Sicilian sea.

From dawn to eve in the happy land,
No duty on us but to lie —
Straw-hatted on the shining sand,
With bronz'ing chest and arm and hand —
Beneath the blue Italian sky.

There, with the mountains idly glancing
Their purple splendors in the sea —
To watch the white-winged vessels passing
(Fortunes for busier fools amassing),
This were a heaven to you and me.

Our meerschaum coloring cloudy brown,
Two young girls coloring with a blush,
The blue waves with a silver crown,
The mountain shadows dropping down,
And all the air in perfect hush.

Thus should we lie in the happy land,
Nor fame, nor power, nor fortune miss;
Straw-hatted on the shining sand,
With bronz'ing chest and arms and hand —
Two loafers couched in perfect bliss.
A BIRTHDAY GREETING.

What shall I wish thee for the coming year?
Twelve months of dream-like ease? no care? no pain?
Bright spring, calm summer, autumn without rain
Of bitter tears? Wouldst have it thus, my friend?
What lesson, then, were learnt at the year's end?

What shall I wish thee, then? God knoweth well
If I could have my way no shade of xoan
Should ever dim thy sunshine; but I know
Strong courage is not learnt in happy sleep,
Nor patience sweet by eyes that never weep.

Ah, would my wishes were of more avail
To keep from thee the many jars of life!
Still let me wish thee courage for the strife,—
The happiness that comes of work well done,—
And, afterwards, the peace of victory won!

M. E. F.

OLD FRIENDS.

We just shake hands at meeting
With many that come nigh,
We nod the head in greeting
To many that go by.
But we welcome through the gateway
Our few old friends and true;
Then hearts leap up and straightway
There's open house for you,
Old friends,
Wide-open house for you.

The surface will be sparkling,
Let but a sunshine shine,
But in the deep lies darthing
The true life of the wine.
The froth is for the many,
The wine is for the few;
Unseen, untouched by,
We keep the best for you,
Old friends,
The very best for you.

"The many?" cannot know us,
They only pace the strand
Where at our worst we show us,
The waters thick with sand;

LOVE, SENTIMENT, AND FRIENDSHIP.

But out beyond the leaping
Din surge "tis clear and blue,
And there, old friends, we're keeping
A waiting calm for you,
Old Friends,
A sacred calm for you.

SOMETIMES.

Sometimes,—not often,—when the days are long,
And golden lie the ripening fields of grain,
Like cadence of some half-forgotten song,
There sweeps a memory across my brain.
I hear the handrail far among the grass,
The drowsy murmur in the scented lanes;
I watch the radiant butterflies that pass,
And I am sad and sick at heart sometimes—
Sometimes.

Sometimes, when royal winter holds his sway,
When every cloud is swept from azure skies,
And frozen pool and lighted hearth are gay
With laughing lips and yet more laughing eyes,
From far-off days an echo wanders by,
That makes a discord in the Christmas chimes;
A moment in the dance or talk I sigh,
And seem half lonely, in the crowd sometimes—
Sometimes.

Not often, not for long. O friend, my friend,
We were not lent our life that we might weep:
The flower-crowned May of earth hath soon an end;
Should our fair spring a longer sojourn keep?
Comes all too soon the time of falling leaves,
Come on the cold short days. We must arise
And go our way, and garner home our sheaves,
Though some few faint regret may cloud our eyes.

Sometimes.

Sometimes I see a light almost divine
In meeting eyes of two that now are one.
Impatient of the tears that rise to mine,
I turn to seek some work undone.
There dawns a look upon some stranger face;
I think, "How like, and yet how far less fair!"
And look, and look again, and seek to trace
A moment more your fancied likeness there—
Sometimes.
O sad, sweet thoughts! O foolish, vain regrets!
As wise it were, what time June roses blow,
To weep because the first blue violet
We found in spring has faded long ago.
O love, my love, if yet by song of bird,
By flower-scent, by some sad poet's rhymes,
My heart, that fain would be at peace, is stirred,
Am I to blame that still I sigh sometimes? —
Sometimes?

And sometimes know a pang of jealous pain,
That, while I walk all lonely, other eyes
May haply smile to yours that smile again
Beneath the sun and stars of Southern skies.
The past is past; but is it sin, if yet
I, who in calm content would seek to dwell,
Who will not grieve, yet cannot quite forget,
Still send a thought to you, and wish you well
Sometimes?

LOUISA F. STORY.

PART VI.

Echoes of the Past.
PART VI.

Echoes of the Past.

THE LOVE OF THE PAST.

As sailors watch from their prison
For the long, gray line of the coasts,
I look to the past re-arisen,
And joys come over in hosts
Like the white sea-birds from their roosts.

I love not the delicate present,
The future's unknown to our quest;
To-day is the life of the peasant,
But the past is a haven of rest,—
The joy of the past is the best.

The rose of the past is better
Than the rose we ravish to-day;
'Tis holier, purer, and fitter
To place on the shrine where we pray,—
For the secret thoughts we obey.

There are no deceptions nor changes,
There all is as placid and still;
No grief nor fate that estranges,
Nor hope that no life can fulfill;
But ethereal shelter from ill.

The coarse delights of the hour
Tempt and debauch and deprave;
And we joy in a poisonous flower,
Knowing that nothing can save
Our flesh from the fate of the grave.

But surely we leave them returning
In grief to the well-loved nest,
Filled with an infinite yearning,
Knowing the past to be rest,—
That the things of the past are the best.

The Spectator.
THE DAYS THAT ARE NO MORE.

O memories of green and pleasant places,
Where happy birds their woodnotes twitted low!
O love that lit the dear familiar faces
We buried long ago!

From barren heights their sweetness we remember,
And backward gaze with wistful, yearning eyes,
As hearts regret, mid snow-drifts of December,
The summer's sunny skies.

Glad hours that seemed their rainbow tints to borrow
From some illumined page of fairy lore;
Bright days that never lacked a bright to-morrow,
Days that return no more.

Fair gardens, with their many-blossomed alleys,
And red, ripe roses breathing out perfume;
Deep violet nooks in green, sequestered valleys
Empurpled o'er with bloom.

Sunset that lighted up the brown-leaved beeches,
Turning their dusky glooms to glittering gold;
Moonlight that on the river's fern-fringed beaches
Streamed white-rayed, silvery cold.

O'er moorlands bleak we wander weary-hearted,
Through many a tangled, wild, and thorny maze,
Remembering as in dreams the days departed,
The bygone, happy days.

MEMORY.

I.

O dreadful Memory! why dost thou tread
From out the secret chambers of my life?
Thou livest with the dead — go to thy dead!
Nor break my peaceful carelessness with strife.

Thy chains are heavy; thou hast bound me fast.
I bend beneath the weight I have to bear.
Leave me the Present, thou hast all the Past!
Unbind me — go! I keep the smallest share.

Art thou not weary of thy ceaseless chase?
Day after day hast thou not followed me?
Thus wilt relentless to pursue the race,
Until thy chains had bound me hopelessly.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

I.

I am thy captive; I am weak, thou strong!
Be merciful; cease to torment me more.
Spare me some pangs of torture, grief, and wrong;
Unlock my chains, thy wounds are deep and sore!

II.

O faint, delicious Memory, I call:
Come very near; there is no friend like thee!
See, I have nothing left, and thou hast all!
For one short hour give it back to me.

Give me my charming summer skies again,
The fragrance of my spring and autumn breeze,
The moon that I have watched the rise and wane,
The birds I love to hear among the trees.

Sweet eyes, lost in the distance, draw more near;
Dear hands, clasp mine — clasp closer yet, I pray;
Beloved voices, speak that I may hear;
Most precious Memory, go not away!

Without thee I am lonely; it is strange,
Nothing is left that can call my own.
The world is new, passing from change to change;
My nest is empty, all my birds have flown.

Depart not yet, thy tones are very sweet,
Echos of faith and hope and victory!
And is it true, ye lost, that we shall meet?
Canst thou restore thy treasures, Memory?

People's Magazine.

MEMORIES.

These dawn dear memories of the past
To charm us as we muse alone,
Still as the hews on rivers cast
When long, bright days have almost flown;
Sometimes they come and fill the mind
As stars the heavens when clouds are few;
And there a cherished welcome find,—
Though old, yet seeming ever new.

They are the treasures time has made
To shadow forth the bygone years;
Though dim be lifelines, they cannot fade,
For each some hollowed beauty bears.
Long-sleeping joys each gently wakes,
Forms of the past each gently weaves,—
E'en as a cloudless sunset awakes
A cool, red splendor 'mong green leaves.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

They are the day-dreams of a time
Ere life had felt the touch of care;
Loved like some sweet bell's holy chime
That faints upon the Sabbath air.
They are the echoes of the past,
And with us, when alone, they dwell;
For all their wondrous beauties last,
Like sounds of ocean in a shell.

ONE BY ONE.

One by one the old-time fancies
Fall like blossoms in the blast;
One by one girlhood's romances
Fled from present into past.
One by one the rosy cloudlets,
Tinted with the hues of dawn,
Lose the brightness and the beauty
That belong alone to morn.

Very fair the cherished visions
That enchant the halls of youth;
Earthly scenes seem then Elysian,
And the mirage is as truth.

One by one the visions vanish
In the light experience brings;
But though truth the unreal banish,
Still remain the living springs.

Though may fade the sparkling fountain
Glittering in the morning ray,
Still upon life's rugged mountain
Streams perennial take their way.

Then, my soul, be not disheartened
If thy castles fade in air.
And thy sunny sky be darkened
With unwonted shades of care.

Still be thine to choose and cherish
All things beautiful and bright,
Though thy fancy's garlands perish
In earth's disenchancing light.

Still be thine to see the rainbow
Spanning life's most dreary slope;
And to dream of deathless beauty
In the garden of thy hope.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

HAIWNED CHAMBERS.

In the old and ruined mansion
Where no joyous voices call,
And the gloomy shadows linger
Like a solemn funeral pall;
In some dim deserted passage
Into ruin falling fast,
Aye, they say, the chamber's haunted
With the spirits of the past.

When the shades of night have gathered,
There with deep, majestic gloom
Are these chambers clothed, while spectres
Gather hither from the tomb.
Not with loud, unallowed sounding,
Not with vain, unanswered call,
Are they gathered, but in silence,—
Mystic, mournful silence all.

Forms that once were bright with being,
Faces wan that once were fair,
Sadly come amid the silence
That at midnight reigneth there.
There they love to linger lightly
Till the stars have ceased to glow,—
Linger lonely in the places
That were joyous "long ago."

There are chambers, haunted chambers,
Which we each may call our own,
Where are present forms and faces
That in other days were known.
In the silence of the midnight
We, from busy life apart,
Glance in sadness and in sorrow
At the chambers of the heart.

Ah, what forms are these to haunt us
When alone with thoughts at night?
Ah, what faces look upon us
That we deemed were lost to sight!
Some are bright as when we knew them,
Others wan and filled with woe;
All awake the thoughts that slumbered
Of the days of "long ago!"

Ah, the haunted, haunted chambers
Of the weary human heart;
They are filled with mournful visions
That can nevermore depart.
Till that heart has ceased its throbbing
In the sorrow-laden breast,
And the visions of the vanished
Are forevermore at rest.

OUR CHILDHOOD'S HOME.

There is one spot on all the earth,
Where'er in after life we rove,
To which the heart will ever turn
With an unchanging, deathless love.

Scenes may perchance roll far between,
To distant lands the feet may roam,
But memory turns with yearning back
To it, our loved, our childhood's home.

Our childhood's home—who can forget
The many happy, happy years
Spent there when all the world seemed bright,
And all unknown were cares and tears?

The morning sun beamed brightly down
On tranquil brows, and never care
Had traced a line, nor sorrow stamped
Its desolating impress there.

But swiftly flew the summer hours
With laugh and jest and guileless song,
And in a pathway strewn with flowers
We sped our happy way along;

We revelled in a sea of love,—
A perfect Eden of delight;
And years flew on and brought no change,
For all was pure and all was bright.

How different now! No more we see
The pleasant home we loved so well;
No more we hear in silvery tones
The simple song of evening swell.

We miss the father's kind care,
The mother's kind and accents mild;
The sister's smile, the brother's clasp,—
All that was valued when a child.

What have we gained in lieu of these?
We sought for wealth, perchance a name;
But what is wealth compared with love,
And who can climb the steeps of Fame?

With weary heart and throbbing brow,
And mind with many cares oppressed,
Night after night we seek our couch,
And "sink to sleep but not to rest."

And still through all the busy strife,
Through all the cares and saddened fears
Of life, the heart will wander back
To those beloved and happy years;
And we shall say, in all the earth,
No matter where the feet may roam,
We may not find the stainless truth
That blessed our childhood's happy home.

Friendship is but a hollow mask,
Ambition but an empty name,
And disappointment waits on him
Who follows in pursuit of fame.

And then at last we drop and fade
Like autumn leaves, and fall and die,
With no kind hand to raise the head,
And gently close the dying eye.

Followed by strangers to the grave,
Few our departure to deplore,
The clay falls coolly on the breast,
The mound is raised, and all is o'er!

And yet not all; for in that land
Where tears and trials never come,
Thank God! we yet may join the band
Who shared with us our childhood's home.

A RAINY DAY.

How tired one grows of a rainy day.
For a rainy day brings back so much;
Old dreams revive that are buried away,
And the past comes back to the sight and touch.

When the night is short and the day is long,
And the rain falls down with ceaseless beat,
We tire of our thoughts as we tire of a song
That over and over is played in the street.

When I woke this morning and heard the splash
Of the rain-drop over the tall elm's leaves,
I was carried back in a lightning flash
To the dear old home with the sloping caves.

And you and I, in the garret high,
Were playing again at hide-go-seek;
And bright was the light of your laughing eye,
And rich the glow of your rounded cheek.
And again I was nestled in my white bed
Under the eaves, and hearing above
The feet of the rain-seeds over my head,
While I dreamed sweet dreams of you, my love.

Love, my lover, with eyes of truth,—
O beautiful love of the vanished years,
There is no other love like the love of youth,
I say it over and over with tears.

Wealth and honor and fame may come,—
They cannot replace what is taken away;
There is no other home like the childhood’s home,
No other love like the love of May.

Though the sun is bright in the mid-day skies,
There comes an hour when the sad heart grieves
With a lonely wall, like a lost child’s cry,
For the trundle-bed and the sloping caves;

When, with vague unrest and nameless pain,
We hunger and thirst for a voice and touch
That we never on earth shall know again—
Oh, a rainy day brings back so much!

UNFINISHED STILL.

A baby’s boot and a skein of wool,
Faded and soiled and soft;
Odd things, you say, and I doubt you’re right,
Round a seaman’s neck, this stormy night,
Up in the yards aloft.

Most likely it’s folly; but, mate, look here!
When first I went to sea,
A woman stood on your fair-off strand
With a wedding ring on the small soft hand
Which clung close to me.

My wife,—God bless her!—the day before
Sat she beside my foot;
And the sunlight kissed her yellow hair,
And the dainty fingers, delf and fair
Knitted a baby’s boot.

The voyage was over; I came ashore;
What think you I found there?
A grave the daisies had sprinkled white,
A cottage empty and dark at night,
And this beside the chair.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

The little boot; ‘t was unfinished still;
The tangled skein lay near;
But the knitter had gone away to her rest,
With the baby asleep on her quiet breast,
Down in the churchyard drear.

—

A VAGRANT.

I CANNOT check my thought those days,
When incense lingers in the air,
But with unwearied wing it strays,
I know not how or where.

I know not where the blossoms hide.
That throw their lures across its flight;
How stars can fling their gates so wide,
To give my thought delight.

There is no door close barred and sealed
Where cowers suffering or sin,
But will to touch or whisper yield,
And let this vagrant in.

It bears no passport; no parole,
But, free and careless as the air,
My thought despises all control,
And wanders everywhere.

Its warrant from the Throne of thrones,
Its duty to the King of kings,
Through heights, and depths, and circling zones
It soars on sprach wings.

What canst thou bring from ye fair height,
What bring me from the deepening sea?
What gather for thy own delight
That is not wealth to me?

Scribner’s Magazine.

DREAMS.

Good-night! ah! no; the hour is ill
Which sees thou its fields unite;
Let us remain together still,
Then it will be good-night.

Shelley.

The night hours wane, the bleak winds of December
Sweep through the branches of the singing pine,
And while I watch each slowly dying ember
I dream of joys that never may be mine.
The vacant chair, the room so sad and lonely,
Bring visions of a home 'neath other skies,
A home created by my fancy only,
My heart's true rest, my earthly paradise.

In the night watches when my hands are folded
In weary calm upon my hopeless breast,
These bright creaturés, by my heart's love moulded,
Quicken its beat, and rise all unrepressed.

Roof-tree and tower and portal rise unaided;
Aladdin like, their instant birth I see;
And at love's shrine, by doublings uninvaded,
I offer up my wild idolatry.

Only the fire's warm heart, intensely glowing,
Sends languid throbs of brightness through the gloom,
And gorgeous flowers, with tropic life o'erflowing,
Pour on the peaceful air their sweet perfume.

Now clasp I in my arms my long-sought treasure,
Now a dear head is pillowed on my breast;
And with a joy no earthly tongue can measure,
Warm, trembling lips to mine are fondly pressed.

For them art with me, with thy presence blessing,
Thou dearest, best, my first love and my last;
Within thy arms, thy purest love possessing,
Darkness is gone, and night is overpast.

O rapturous kisses! passionate caressing!
O heart's quick beating with a wild delight!
O murmured words, our mutual love confessing!
Parted no more, at last it is good-night.

---

AN OLD SONG.

You laugh as you turn the yellow page
Of that queer old song you sing,
And wonder how folks could ever see
A charm in the simple melody
Of such an old-fashioned thing.

That yellow page was fair to view,
That quaint old type was fresh and new,
That simple strain was our delight
When here we gathered night by night,
And thought the music of our day
An endless joy to sing and play.

---

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

In our youth, long, long ago,
A joyous group we loved to meet,
When hope was high and life was sweet;
When romance shed its golden light,
That circled, in a nimbus bright,
O'er Time's unwrinkled brow.

The lips are mute that sang these words:
The hands are still that struck these chords;
The loving heart is cold.
From out the circle, one by one,
Some dear companion there has gone.
While others stay to find how true
That life has chord and discord too,
And all of us are old.

'Tis not alone when music thrills,
The power of thought profound that fills
The soul! 'T is not all art!
The old familiar tones we hear
Die not upon the listening ear;
They vibrate in the heart.

And now you know the reason, dear,
Why I have kept and treasured here
This song of bygone years.
You laugh at the old-fashioned strain;
It brings my childhood back again,
And fills my eyes with tears.

---

THE BOAT-HORN.

Oar, list the boat-horn's wild refrain,
O'er eye's still waters stealing clear!
So softly sweet, so sad a strain.
Ne'er woke before to charm the ear.
From out the past it brings once more,
As waking echoes of a stream.
The tree-clad hills, the lakes and shore,
Of wild Ohio's winding stream.

Out on the wave while sweeping down
The boatman trod his little deck,
And dreamed, while lay his all around,
Of strange adventure, storm, and wreck.
That strain he wound his way to cheer
In dewy eye and golden morn;
The startled Indian paused to hear,
In echoes sweet, that simple horn.
ECHOES OF THE PAST.

The front and ends were fitly carved
With Scripter stories all,—
Finding of Moses, Jacob's dream,
And sadful Adam's fall.

Just room inside to put a cheer,
The B'r Bwine on the ledge
(I'll own I did git nervous when
He shoved it to the edge).

There week by week the parson stood
The Scripter to expound;

There, man and boy, I've set below,
And not a fault was found.

Of course I've seen great changes made,
And taught against 'em too;

And first a choir was interdooced,
Then a singin' in each pew;

Next, boughten carpet for the floor;

And then, that very year,

We got our new melodeon
And the big shandyliner.

Well, well! I tried to keep things straight—

I went to every meetin',

And voted "No!" to all they said,

And found my influence fetchin'.

At last the worst mistorin' fell—

I must blame Deacon Brown;

He helped the young folks when they said

The pulpit should come down.

They laughed at all those pious scenes
I'd found so edifying;

Said, "When the parson rose to preach,

He looked almost like flyin';"

Said that "Elijah's chariot

Just half-way up had tarried;"

And Deacon Brown set by and laughed,—

And so the pint was carried.

After a time, the carpenters

Have nearly made an end—

Excuse my feelin's. Seems to me

As if I'd lost a friend.

"It made their necks ache, lookin' up,"

Was what the folks did say;

More lookin' up would help us all

In this deginerate day.

The church won't never seem the same

(I'm half afraid) to me,

Under the preachin' of the truth

I've ben so used to be.
And now to see our parson stand,
Like any common man,
With just a mullin' round his desk—
I don't believe I can.

Mrs. E. T. Corett.

FOREVER.

FOREVER and ever the reddening leaves
Float to the sodden grasses,
Forever and ever the aching trees
Cower and shrivel to the chilling breeze
That sweeps from the far-off sodden seas,
To wither them as it passes.

Forever and ever the gray sky
Stoops o'er the sorrowful earth;
Forever and ever the steady rain
Palls on bare bleak hill and barren plain,
And flashes on roof and window-pane,
And hisses upon the hearth.

Forever and ever the weary thoughts
Are tracing the selfsame track
Forever and ever, to and fro,
On the old unchanging road they go,
Through dreaming and waking, through joy and woe,
Calling the dead hours back.

Forever and ever the tired heart
Ponders o'er the evil done;
Forever and ever through cloud and gleam,
Tracing the course of the strong life-stream,
And dreary and dull as the broken dream,
Forever the rain rains on.

THE WANDERER.

(Lines written on recrossing the Rocky Mountains in winter after many years.)

Long years ago I wandered here,
In the midsummer of the year—
Life's summer too.
A score of horsemen here we rode,
The mountain world its glories showed,
All fair to view.

These scenes, in glowing colors drest,
Mirrored the life within my breast,—
It's world of hope.

The whispering woods and fragrant breeze
That stirred the grass in verdant seas
On billowy slope,
And glinting skag in sunlit sky,
'Mid snowy clouds piled mountains high,
Were joys to me;
My path was o'er the prairie wide,
Or here on grander mountain side,
To choose, all free.

The rose that waved in morning air,
That spread its dewy fragrance there
In careless bloom,
Gave to my heart its sweetest hue,
O'er my mind life its color threw,
And sweet perfume.

Now changed the scene and changed the eyes
That here once looked on glowing skies
Where summer smiled;
These riven trees and wind-swept plain
Now show the winter's dread domain—
Its fury wild.

The rocks rise black from storm-pock'd snow,
All checked the river's pleasant flow,
Vanished the bloom;
These dreary wastes of frozen plain
Reflect my bosom's life again,
Now lonesome gloom.

The buoyant hopes and busy life
Have ended all in hateful strife
And thwarted aim.
The world's rude contact kills the rose,
No more its radiant color shows
False roads to fame.

Backward amid the twilight glow
Some lingering spots yet brightly show
On hard roads won
Where still some grand peaks mark the way,
Touched by the light of parting day
And memory's sun.

But here thick clouds the mountains hide,
The dim horizon, bleak and wide,
No pathway shows.
And rising gusts and darkening sky
Tell of 'the night that cometh' nigh
The brief day's close.

Litell's Living Age.

ANONYMOUS.

(Ascribed by the N.Y. Evening Post
To General John C. Fremont.)
REST.

Love, give me one of thy dear hands to hold,
Take thou my tired head upon thy breast,
Then sing me that sweet song we loved of old,
The dear, soft song about our little nest.
We knew the song before the nest was ours;
We sang the song when first the nest was found;
We loved the song in happy after-hours
When peace came to us and content profound.
Then sing that olden song to me to-night,
While I, reclining on thy faithful breast,
See happy visions in the frail fireside,
And my whole soul is satisfied with rest.
Better than all our bygone dreams of bliss
Are deep content and rest secure as this.

What though we missed love's golden summer-time,
His autumn fruits were ripe when we had leave
To enter joy's wide vineyard in our prime.
Good guerdon for our waiting to receive.
Love gave us no frail pledge of summer flowers,
But side by side we reaped the harvest field;
Now side by side we pass the winter hours,
And day by day new blessings are revealed.
The heyday of our youth, its rosyate glow,
Its high desires and cravings manifold.
The raptures and delights of long ago,
Have passed; but we have truer joys to hold.
Sing me the dear old song about the nest,
Our blessed home, our little ark of rest.

—

THE LOST BABIES.

Come, my wife, put down the Bible,
Lay your glasses on the book;
Both of us are bent and aged.
Backward, mother, let us look.
This is still the same old homestead
Where I thought you long ago,
When the hair was bright with sunshine
That is now like winter's snow.
Let us talk about the babies,
As we sit here all alone;
Such a merry troop of youngsters,
How we lost them one by one.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

Jack, the first of all our party,
Came to us one winter's night.
Jack, you said, should be a priest,
Long before he saw the light.
Do you see the great cathedral,
Filled the transept and the nave,
Hear the organ gladly pealing,
Watch the silken hangings wave?
See the priest in robes of office,
With the altar at his back,—
Would you think that gifted preacher
Could be our own little Jack?

Then, a girl with curly tresses
Used to climb upon my knee.
Like a little fairy princess,
Ruling at the age of three.
With the years there came a wedding—
How your fond heart swelled with pride
When the lord of all the country
Chose your baby for his bride?
Watch that stately carriage coming,
And the bridegroom sitting there—
Would you think that brilliant lady
Could be our own little Clare?

Then, the last, a blue-eyed youngster—
I can hear him prattling now—
Such a strong and sturdy fellow,
With his broad and honest brow.
How he used to love his mother!
Ah! I see your trembling lip!
He is far off on the water,
Captain of a royal ship.
See the bronze upon his forehead,
Hear the voice of stern command—
That's the boy who chanced so fondly
To his mother's gentle hand.

Ah! my wife, we've lost the babies,
Ours so long and ours alone.
What are we to those great people,
Stately men and women grown?
Seldom do we even see them;
Yes, a bitter tear-drop starts
As we sit here in the fireside,
Lonely heareth and lonely hearts.
All their lives are full without us;
They'll stop long enough one day
Just to lay us in the churchyard,
Then they'll each go on his way.
GONE.

When the morning fair and sweet
Glimmers through the dusky pane,
For the tread of pattering feet,
Ah! I list in vain.
Not an echo haunts the hall—
Oh, each gladsome, light footfall;
Not an echo wakes the stair—
Silence, silence everywhere;
They are gone!

When I leave my sleepless bed,
Passing from the chambered gloom,
No red cheek and flower-like head
Lift to me their bloom;
Only darkness in the hall,
Lingers like a clouded pall;
Round the threshold, o'er the stair—
 Darkness, darkness everywhere;
They are gone!

When from out the toilsome mart,
Hopeless, weary, I return,
Oh, these wasting fires at heart—
How they burn—they burn!
Passionate grief tempest sunk in death,
But beside my ruined hearth
All the anguish, all the pain,
Bursts in flaming woe again—
They are gone!

When the twilight hour comes down,
Of all hours the calmest, best,
Hovering like an angel's crown
'Er the day's unrest,
Whence this alien, brooding air?
Whence this whisper of despair?
"Tis but Heartbreak's hollow tone
Muttering, "Canst thou live alone?
They are gone!"

Gone! In silences of night
Helpless hands I stretch to find
Vacant spaces left and right,
Vacant as the wind.
While a mother's moan is heard,
Low, as if some wounded bird
Sore of wing and love of breast,
Wailed above her shattered nest:
All are gone!

MOTHER.

When she undid her hair at night,
About the time for lying down,
She came and knelt. I was so small,
There in my bed, her curls did fall
All over me, light gold and brown.

I felt asleep amid her prayers,
Her fair young face (far off it seems),
Her girlish voice, her kisses sweet,
The patter of her busy feet,
Passed with me into charming dreams.

And when I woke at merry morn,
Through her golden hair I saw the sun
Flame strong, shine glad, and glorify
The great, good world. Oh, never can I
Forget her words, "My darling one!"

Ah! checkered years since then have crept
Past her and me, and we have known
Some sorrow and much tempered joy
Far into manhood stands her boy.
And her golden hair snow-white is blown.

The world has changed by slow degrees,
And as old days recede, alas!
So much of trouble have the new,
Those rare, far joys grow dim seen through
Sad times as through a darkened glass.

But just this morning when I woke,
How lovingly my lips were kissed!
How chaste and clear the sunlight shone
On mother's hair, like gold-dust sown
Atwary thin clouds of silver mist!

AT SEA.

Worn voyagers, who watch for land
Across the endless wastes of sea,
Who gaze before and on each hand,
Why look ye not to what ye see?

The stars by which the sailors steer
Not always rise before the prow;
Though forward sought but clouds appear,
Behind, they may be breaking now.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

What though we may not turn again
To shores of childhood that we leave,
Are those old signs we followed vain?
Can guides so oft found true survive?

Oh, sail we to the south or north,
Oh, sail we to the east or west,
The port from which we first set forth
Is our heart's home, is our life's best.

F. W. BROOKS.

MY LOST LOVE.

When the silence of the midnight
Closes round my lonely room,
And faery straggling through the curtains
Mystic moonbeams light the gloom;
When above the fevered fancies
Of the weary heart and brain
Kindly slumber, creeping near me,
Reasserts her welcome reign;
In the seeming
Of my dreaming,
All the glow that used to be,
My lost love comes back to me.

When the fair, delusive phantom
Fades before the wakening dawn,
And the rosy smile of sunrise
Gleams athwart the dew-drenched lawn;
Gazing from the open lattice,
Yearning memory pictures there,
Shadowed by silencing branches,
Sweet blue eyes and golden hair;
And the sunlight
Takes the one light
That it had for me erewhile
In my lost love's happy smile.

In the glory of the moonlight,
Her love-tinging laugh I hear;
In the whispering of the leaflets,
Her light footsteps springing near;
In each snow-white lily's swaying
Is reflection of her grace;
In each rose's opening beauty
Shines for me her fair young face;
Till through the falling
Shadows calling,
As even darkness hush and plain,
I hear my lost love's voice again.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

So the hours are peopled for me
Through the haunted days and nights;
While fancy mocks my lovely vigils
With the ghost of dead delights;
And I let loud life sweep by me,
Dreaming by the silent hearth,
Where the vision of my darling
Gives old gladness back to earth:
While through each gloaming
Softly coming,
In sweet, false lights of joy and truth,
My lost love gives me back my youth.

All the Year Round.

RETROSPECTION.

When we see our dream-ships slipping
From the verge of youth's green slope—
Loosening from the transient moorings
At the golden shore of hope—
Vanishing, like airy bubbles,
On the rough, tried sea of care,
Then the soul grows sick with longing
That is almost wild despair.

Far behind lies sunny childhood—
Fields of flowers our feet have trod
When our vision-bounded Eden
Held no mystery but God;
When in dreams we spoke with angels,
When awake, with brooks and birds,
Reading in the breeze and sunshine
Love's unspoken, tender words.

When the stars were lighted candles
Shining through God's temple blue,
And the moon was but a window
For the angels to look through;
Clouds took shape of wondrous seeming,
Fairies hid themselves in flowers;
Morning's and sunset glories
Were but doors to heaven's bowers.

Ah! the sweet conceits and fancies
With which sunny childhood teems!
'Tis not strange the sickened spirit
Chaps the shadows of such dreams;
That, when life is stern and real,
Hope is crowded out by fears,
Love grown wearied of her vigils,
Back we look with bitter tears.
Life is but a rugged hillside
When cool science puts to flight
Childhood's treasured love of dreaming
Tinted all with rosy light.
For though years may bring us wisdom,
Distract poisons holy truth;
So we turn, soul-sick with yearning,
To the sweet beliefs of youth!
And sometimes we question sadly,
Wherefore all life's bitter pain?
Are our dreams of hope and gladness—
Are our strivings all in vain?
Shall we find the scattered roses
That our careless hands have lost?
Wander to the flowerless pathways
That our feet so thoughtless crossed?
And the answer, deep and solemn,
Seems to vibrate through all space:
Life is but a course of trial,
Childhood starts and ends the race.
For the harvests faithful gathered
Through the strife of toil and tears,
For the burdens borne in patience,
Joy will crown the endless years.

THE PASTOR'S REVERIE.

Till the pastor sits in his easy-chair,
With the Bible upon his knee;
From gold to purple the clouds in the west
Are changing moment by moment;
The shadows lie in the valleys below,
And hide in the curtain's fold;
And the page grows dim whereon he reads,
"I remember the days of old."
"Not clear nor dark," as the Scripture saith,
The pastor's memories are;
No day that is gone is shadowless,
No night was without its star;
But mingled bitter and sweet hath been
The portion of his cup;
"The hand that in love hath smitten," he saith,
"In love hath bound us up."
Fleet flies his thought over many a field
Of stubble and snow and blossom,
And now it trips through a festival,
And now it halts at a tomb;

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

Young faces smile in his reverie
Of those that are young no more,
And voices are heard that only come
With the winds from a far-off shore.

He thinks of the day when first, with fear
And faltering lips, he stood
To speak in the sacred place the Word
To the waiting multitude;
He walks again to the house of God,
With the voice of joy and praise,
With many whose feet long time have pressed
Heaven's safe and blessed ways.

He enters again the homes of toil,
And joins in the homely chat;
He stands in the shop of the artisan;
He sits where the Master sat.
At the poor man's fire and the rich man's feast.
But who to-day are the poor,
And who are the rich? Ask Him who keeps
The treasures that ever endure.

Once more the green and grove resound
With the merry children's din;
He hears their shout at the Christmas Tide,
When Santa Claus stalks in.
Once more he lists while the camp-fires roar;
On the distant mountain-side,
Or, proving apostleship, piles the brook
Where the fierce young troutlings hide.

And now he beholds the wedding train
To the altar slowly move,
And the solemn words are said that seal
The sacrament of love.
Aton at the font he meets once more
The tremulous youthful pair,
With a white-robed cherub crowing response
To the consecrating prayer.

By the couch of pain he kneels again;
Again the thin hand lies
Cold in his palm, while the last far look
Steals into the steadfast eyes;
And now the burdens of hearts that break
Lie heavy upon his own,
The widow's woe, and the orphan's cry,
And the desolate mother's woe.

So blest and glad, so heavy and sad,
Are the days that are no more;
So mournfully sweet are the sounds that float
With the winds from a far-off shore.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

For the pastor has learned what meaneth the word
That is given him to keep,—
"Rejoice with them that do rejoice,
And weep with them that weep."*

It is not in vain that he has trod
This lonely and toilsome way,
It is not in vain that he has wrought
In the vineyard all the day;
For the soul that gives is the soul that lives,
And bearing another's load;
Doth lighten year own, and shorten the way,
And brighten the homeward road.

HAWTHORN.

I saw her where the budding May
 Throws shadows on the grassy way
 And flecks her robe of white;
 Unseen I watch her as she stands,
 With fragrant hawthorn in her hands,
 A vision of delight.

She stays, but will not tarry long
To hear the thrush's vernal song
In blossom boughs above;
And in my sheltered garden-seat
I too can hear the carol sweet
Of songster's happy love.

From out the leaves that shade my face
I watch her in her girlish grace,
The daughter of my friend,
On whose sweet life, for whose sweet sake,
Love hath such precious things at stake,
In whom such heart tea blend.

My May-day maiden, thought runs back
O'er that long-trodden, sunlit track,
My own vanished youth,
When I, like her, was young and fair,
Like her, untouched by worldly care,
Unscarred by broken truth.

Like her, with sunshine on my way,
With scented blossoms of life's May
Plucked ready for my hand;
Like her, embarked on life's full tide
For joy's glad port, and by my side
True love at my command.

ECHOS OF THE PAST.

But shadows dimmed my summer day,
The blossoms of my early May
Lie buried in a grave.
Hope's tide ebbed out afar from port,
And left me little bark the sport
Of fortune's wind and wave.

Ah, well! the thrush's song is done,
And she steps forward in the sun,
She comes toward my bower,
To glad my weary, tear-dimmed eyes,
To lay before me as a prize
Her spray of hawthorn flower.

Dear heart! she brings me more than May;
The sunlight of a fair-off day
Shines on me from her face.
Her heart renews for mine the truth,
The hope and springtide of its youth
In all their early grace.

She looks at me with eyes of love
Like those the turf has lain above
For many a weary day;
God bless her! for she brings again,
Across a lifetime's silent pain,
My unforgotten May.

All the Year Round.

THE ORCHARD-LANDS OF LONG AGO.

The orchard-lands of Long Ago!
O drowsy winds, awake and blow
The snowy blossoms back to me,
And all the buds that used to be!
Blow back along the grassy ways
Of tuant feet, and lift the haze
Of happy summer from the trees
That roll their treasures in the seas
Of grain that float and overflow
The orchard-lands of Long Ago!

Blow back the melody that slips
In lazy laughter from the lips
That marvel much if any kiss
Is sweeter than the apple's is.
Blow back the twitter of the birds —
The hop, the titter, and the words
Of merriment that found the shine
Of summertime a glorious wine
That drenched the leaves that loved it so
In orchard-lands of Long Ago!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

O memory! alight and sing
Where rosy-bellied pippins sling,
And golden russets glist and gleam
As in the old Arabian dream.
The fruits of that enchanted tree
The glad Aladdin robbed for me!
And, drowsy winds, awake and fan
My blood as when it overran.
A heart rise as the apples grow
In orchard-lands of Long Ago.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

Dew-wet and fresh we gathered them,
These fragrant flowers; now every stem
Is bare of all its bloom:
Tear-wet and sweet we strewn them here
To lend our relics, sacred, dear,
Their beautiful perfume.

The scent abides on book and lute,
On curl and flower, and with its mute
But eloquent appeal
It wins from us a deeper sob
For our lost dead, a sharper throb
Than we are wont to feel.

It whispers of the "long ago;"
Its love, its loss, its aching woe,
And buried sorrows stir;
And tears like those we shed of old
Roll down our cheeks as we behold
Our faded lavender.

WHILE WE MAY.

THE hands are such dear hands;
They are so full; they turn at our demands
So often, they reach out,
With trifles scarcely thought about,
So many times; they do
So many things for me, for you —
If their food wills mistake,
We well may bend, not break.

They are such fond, frail lips
That speak to us. Pray, if love strips
Them of discretion many times,
Or if they speak too slow, or quick, such crimes
We may pass by; for we may see
Days not far off when those small words may be Heard not at so slow, or quick, or out of place, but dear,
Because the lips are no more here.

They are such dear, familiar feet that go
Along the path with ours, — feet fast or slow,
And trying to keep pace, — if they mistake,
Or tread upon some flower that we would take
Upon our breast, or bruise some reed,
Or crush poor Hope until it bleed,
We may be mute,
Not turning quickly to impute
Grave fault;—for they and we
Have such a little way to go,—can be
Together such a little while along the way,
We will be patient while we may.

So many little faults we find,
We see them; for not blind
In Love. We see them, but if you and I
Perhaps remember them some by and by,
They will not be
Faults then,—grave faults to you and me,
But just odd ways,—mistakes, or even less,—
Remembrances to bless.
Days change so many things,—yes, hours,
We see so differently in sun and showers.
Mistaken words to-night
May be so cherished by to-morrow's light.
We may be patient; for we know
There's such a little way to go.

THE BOTTOM DRAWER.

In the best chamber of the house,
Shut up in dim, uncertain light,
There stood an antique chest of drawers,
Of foreign wood, with brasses bright.
One day a woman, frail and gray,
Stepped totteringly across the floor—
"Let in," said she, "the light of day,
Then, Jean, unlock the bottom drawer."

The girl, in all youth's loveliness,
Kneel down with eager, curious face;
Perchance she dreamt of Indian silks,
Of jewels, and of rare old lace.
But when the summer sunshine fell
Upon the treasures hoarded there,
The tears rushed to her tender eyes,
Her heart was solemn as a prayer.

"Dear Grandmamma," she softly sighed,
Lifting a withered rose and palm;
But on the elder face was sought
But sweet content and peaceful calm.
Leaning upon her staff, she gazed
Upon a lady's half-worn shoe;
A little frock of finest lawn;
A hat with tiny bows of blue;
PART VII.

In the Twilight.
PART VII.

In the Twilight.

TWILIGHT'S HOUR.

The sunlight on a waveless sea—
The softened radiance fadeth slowly;
The folded flower, the mist-crowned tree,
Proclaim the gathering twilight holy.

It is the hour when passion bows;
A solemn stillness round usingers;
And on our wildly throbbing brows
We feel the touch of angel fingers.

It is the hour when lovers fond
(For love its native air is breathing)
Drape with fair hopes life's drear beyond,
Gay garlands for the future wreathing.

It is the hour when in far land
The wanderer, tired of ceaseless roaming,
Longs for the clasp of kindred hand,
And the dear home enwraps in glounding.

It is the hour when mankind hears,
Amid earth's mingled moans and laughter,
Chords which will swell when unborn years
Are buried in the great hereafter.

Chambers's Journal.

THE AFTERMATH.

The glamour of the after-light
Lay clear and fair along the sky,
And made the pathway eerie bright
As home we wandered—thou and I.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

The meadow mists were lying low,
A shadow held the river-side,
The water took the western glow,
And peace, gray peace, spread far and wide.

A sober-heartedness was ours —
So still the earth, the sky so strange;
And we had given in sunny hours
Our youthful hearts their widest range.

We lingered in the meadow path,
Touched by the twilight's silent spell,
While from the sun's feet aftermath
A subtle glory rose and fell.

Dim, wistful thoughts within us grew,
Forebodings of the life to be,
Till with a sudden thrill we knew
Time's touch of immortality.

For all the wonder and the awe,
Far-widening within the west,
Seemed with a mystic power to draw
Our hearts into its kindly rest.

Yet still it faded, faded fast,
And night crept up the eastern slope;
But o'er our lives a strength had passed,
And left us with a larger hope.

So home we wandered — thou and I—
That night, sweet wife, so long ago,
And still we watch the western sky,
And strengthen in its mystic glow.

Good Words.
JAMES HENDEY.

TWILIGHT DREAMS.

They come in the quiet twilight hour,
When the weary day is done,
And the quick light leaps from the glowing heaps
Of wood on the warm hearthstone.

When the household sounds have died away,
And the rooms are silent all,
Save the clock's brief tick, and the sudden click
Of the embers as they fall;

IN THE TWILIGHT.

They come, those dreams of the twilight hour,
To me with their noiseless tread,
A tearful bower by the guiding hand
Of a grave-eyed spirit led.

There is no voice within the hall,
No footstep on the floor;
The children's laughter is hushed, there is
No hand at the parlor door.

Like flags, tapping eagerly
Against the shuttered frame,
Where the trailing rose its long branch throws,
Beat the great drops of rain.

But my heart heeds not the rustling leaves,
Nor the rain-fall's fitful beat,
Nor the wind's low sigh as it hurries by
On its pauseless path and flight;

For now in the dusk they gather round,
The visions of the past,
Arising slow in the dim red glow
By the burning pine-branches cast.

My brow is calm as with the touch
Of an angel's passing wing;
They breathe no word, yet my soul is stirred
By the messages they bring.

Some in their grasp impalpable
Bear Eden's cultured flowers,
That spring in gloom from the tear-bathed tomb
Of hope's long-buried hours.

Some from the font of memory,
Lasting, and pure, and deep,
Bring waters clear, though many a year
Has saddened their first fresh sweep;

And some in their hands of shadow bear,
From the shrine of prayerful thought,
A fragrance blest to the stricken breast,
With balm and healing fraught.

The night wears on, the hearth burns low,
The dreams have passed away;
But the heart and brow are strengthened now
For the toil of coming day.

Chambers's Journal.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

YEARNING.

Over the west the glory dies away,
Faint rose-flecks gleaming in the darkening sky;
And the low sounds that mark the close of day
Rise up from wood and upland—rise and die;
Soft silence falls o'er meadow, hill, and grove,
And in the hush I want you, oh, my love.

In the gay radiance of the morning hour,
In the warm brooding glory of the noon,
When man and Nature, in their prime of power,
With the day's fulness blend in eager tune,
The rush of life forbids the pulse to move
That now, in yearning passion, wants you, love.

Wants you to watch the crimson glow and fade
Through the great branches of the broadening lime;
Wants you to feel the soft, gray, quiet shade
Lap the tired world in blessed eventime;
Wants you to whisper: "Come, your power to prove,
The gloaming needs its angel; come, my love."

All the Year Round.

THE MOTHER'S BLESSING.

There in her high-backed chair she sits,
Sad-eyed dame with the silver hair;
The shadows lengthen, the daylight flits,
And she seems to listen, as still she knits,
For the sound of the step on the silent stair.

The lamps flash out in the twilight street,
And many a neighboring casement gleams,
But the white-haired dame in the high-backed seat
Heeds them not, as she knits and dreams—
Dreams of a boy, long years ago,
Clasped her neck on a summer day,
Begged her blessing, kissed her, and so
Fled with the speed of a hunted doe
Down to the sea and sailed away

A boy with an eye as blue and bright
As the cloudless noon of a tropic sky;
A fair-haired lad, and his heart was right—
Was it ten? Yes, ten long years too long!
Shall I bless him again before I die?

ELSWITHA.

Elswitha knitteth the stocking blue
In the flickering firelight's glow;
Dyed are her hands in its ruddy hue,
And it glints on the shining needles too,
And flushes her cap of snow.

Elswitha dreameth a waking dream,
As busy her fingers ply;
And it lights her eye with its golden gleam.
For the world seems now as it used to seem,
And the things far off are nigh!

The things far off in the lapse of years,
Dead faces and loves outgrown;
Oh, many a form at her side appears,
And many a voice in her ear she hears,
And many a long-hushed tone.

For Memory walks through her halls to-night,
A torch in her lifted hand;
And lo! at the sound of her footsteps light
They shake them free from the dust and blight,
And trooping around her stand.
And Fades and Fades and By which beloved the

Gone They Gone Gone Back these up the

Ay, with almost early somewhere forehead the Memory of sun light and weight and furrows the is known from the power of the head. But the res' dey's all brung in.

faded long ago. From sepulchres old and dim and vast, They come with their grave-clothes from them cast. To stand in the firelight glow.

And weird is the charm they weave, I trow —

Elswitha is young and fair,

Gone are the furious and tears of now, Gone are the wrinkles but silent and brown,

The silver from shining hair.

Gone are the years with their heavy weight (And heavy the years to grow),

For Love hath entered the lists with Fate, And Memory needeth not name nor date,

For Memory knoweth her own.

Now haste thee, Dame, for the fire is low,

And the good man waits his tea;

Back to the tombs do the phantoms go, And dark and deep do the shades grow,

But Elswitha smilith — her dream to know,

Not a dream — but a prophecy.

— MARY BARRY.

Maritime Monthly.

TIRED.

When the day with all its splendor, all its beauty, all its light,
Fades away, and leaves us standing in the shadow of the night,
And we turn with wistful longing to the purple fields that lie
Where the sunlight in departing leaves its glory in the sky;
Piling up the clouds like bastions full of fire along the west,
And the early star of evening gleams upon their fading crest,—
Then we feel that something brighter, fairer still lies out of sight,
Where the beauty and the glory will not fade away in night;
And that somewhere in the distance, in the beautiful beyond,
Our beloved and departed hold us still by some sweet bond;
And across the gold and crimson of the evening's changeful track
We can almost hear the music of their voices floating back.

Tell me, dreamers, say, what is it that we feel but cannot know?
Why these cravings, half of rapture, half of sorrow, haunt us so?
What these pictures half immortal, ne'er described by brush or word,
By which all the human spirit of a mortal soul is stirred?

IN THE TWILIGHT.

Tell me, prophet, do they lead us to the looked-for "by-and-by,"
Where no mortal eye has parted back the shades of prophecy?
Oh, ye dreamers! oh, ye prophets! what your dreams and prophethyes,
What to me the light and fading of the ever-changing skies,
What to me the glorious beauty in the cloudland in the west,
While with every heart-beat meaning for the priceless boon of Rest!

THE LOST SHEEP.

DE MASSA OB DE SHEEPFOL,

Dat guard de sheepfol' bin,

Look out in de gloomerin' meadows

Whar de long night rain begin —

So he call to de hirelin' sheep'd,

"Is my sheep, is dey all come in?"

Oh, den says de hirelin' sheep'd,

"Dey's some, dey's black and thin,

And some, dey's po' ol' wedda's,

But de res' dey's all brung in.

But de res' dey's all brung in,"

Dey de massa ob de sheepfol',

Dat guard de sheepfol' bin,

Goes down in de gloomerin' meadows

Whar de long night rain begin —

So he le' down de la's ob de sheepfol',

Callin' so', "Come in, come in!"

Callin' so', "Come in, come in!"

Dey up tro' de gloomerin' meadows,

Tro' de col' night rain and win',

And up tro' de gloomerin' rain-paf,

Whar de sleet fa' pie'cin' thin,

De po' los' sheep ob de sheepfol',

Dey all comes gadderin' in.

De po' los' sheep ob de sheepfol',

Dey all comes gadderin' in.

— SALLY FRAY MCLEAN.

WHEN THE COWS COME HOME.

I.

With klingling, klingling, klingling,
Way down the dusty dingle,
The cows are coming home;
Now sweet and clear, and faint and low,
The airy tinklings come and go.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Like chirings from some far-off tower,
Or patterings of an April shower
That makes the daisies grow
Ko-ling, ko-lang, kolinglelingle,
Way down the darkening dingle
The cows come slowly home.

II.

With jingle, jangle, jingle,
Soft sounds that sweetly mingle,
The cows are coming home;
Malime, and Pearl, and Phoebe
DeKamp, Redrose, and Gretchen Schell,
Queen Bess, and Sylph, and Spangled Sue—
Across the fields I hear moo-oo,
And clang her silver bell.
Goling, go-lang, golinglelingle,
With faint far sounds that mingle,
The cows come slowly home;
And mother-songs of long-gone years,
And baby joys, and childish tears,
And youthful hopes, and youthful fears,
When the cows come home.

III.

With ringle, rangle, ringle,
By twos and threes and single,
The cows are coming home.
Through the violet air we see the town,
And the summer sun is slipping down;
The maple in the hazel glade
Throws down the path a longer shade,
And the hills are growing brown.
To-ring, to-rang, totingingleingle,
By threes and fours and single,
The cows come slowly home.
The same sweet sound of wordless palm,
The same sweet June-Day rest and calm,
The same sweet scent of bud and balm,
When the cows come home.

IV.

With a tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
Through fern and periwinkle,
The cows are coming home.
A-loitering in the checkered stream,
Where the sun-rays glance and gleam,
Starine, Peachbloom, and Phoebe Phyllis
Stand knee deep in the creamy sites,
In a drowsy dream.

IN THE TWILIGHT.

To-link, to-lank, tolinglelingle,
O'er banks with buttercups awinkle
The cows come slowly home;
And up through memory's deep ravin
Come the brook's old song and its old-time sheen,
And the crescent of the silver queen,
When the cows come home.

V.

With a kling, a klang, a kling,
With a loo-oo, and moo-oo, and jingle,
The cows are coming home;
And over there on Merlin hill,
Hear the plaintive cry of the whippoorwill;
The dew-drops lie on the tangled vines,
And over the poplars Venus shines;
And over the silent mill,
Ko-lang, ko-lang, kolinglelingle,
With a ting-a-ling and jingle,
The cows come slowly home.
Let down the bars; let in the train
Of long-gone songs, and flowers, and rain;
For dear old times come back again
When the cows come home.

MRS. AGNES E. MITCHELL.

IF WE KNEW; OR, BLESSINGS OF TO-DAY.

If we knew the woe and heart-ache
That await us on the road;
If our lips could taste the wormwood,
If our backs could feel the load;
Would we waste to-day in wailing
For a time that never may be?
Would we wait in such impatience
For our ships to come from sea?
If we knew the baby fingers
Pressed against the window-pane
Would be cold and stiff to-morrow,—
Never trouble us again;
Would the bright eyes of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of baby fingers
Vex us then as they do now?

Ah! those little ice-cold fingers,
How they point our memories back
To the bysy words and actions
Strewn along the backward track!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

How those little hands remind us,
As in snowy grace they lie,
Not to scatter thorns, but roses,
For the reaping by and by.

Strange, we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced birds have flown;
Strange, that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone;
Strange, that summer skies and sunshine
Never seem one half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake the white down in the air.

Lips from which the seal of silence
None but God can roll away
Never blossomed in such beauty
As adorns the mouth to-day;
And sweet words that freight our memory
With their beautiful perfume
Come to us in sweeter accents
Through the portals of the tomb.

Let us gather up the sunbeams
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses,
Casting out the thorns and chaff;
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessings of to-day,
With a patient hand removing
All the briers from the way.

The Hearthstone. MRS. MAY RILEY SMITH.

GROWING OLD.

Is it parting with the roundness
Of the smoothly moulded cheek?
Is it losing from the dimples
Half the flashing joy they speak?
Is it failing of the lustre
From the wavy, golden hair?
Is it finding on the forehead
Graven lines of thought and care?

Is it dropping, as the rose leaves
Drop their sweetness overlawn,
Household names that once were dearer,
More familiar than our own?

IN THE TWILIGHT.

Is it meeting on the pathway
FACES strange and glances cold,
While the soul with moan and shiver
Whispers sadly, "Growing old"?

Is it frowning at the folly
Of the ardent hopes of youth?
Is it cynic melancholy
At the rarity of truth?
Is it disbelief in loving?
Selfish hate, or miser's greed?
Then such blight of Nature's noblest
Is a "growing old" indeed.

But the silver thread that shineth
Whitely in the thinning tress,
And the pallor where the bloom was,
Need not tell of bitterness:
And the brow's more earnest writing
Where it once was marble fair,
May be but the spirit's tracing
Of the peace of answered prayer.

If the smile has gone in deeper,
And the tears more quickly start,
Both together meet in music
Low and tender in the heart;
And in others' joy and gladness,
When the life can find its own,
Surely angels learn to listen
To the sweetness of the tone.

Nothing lost of all we planted
In the time of budding leaves;
Only some things bound in bundles
And set by—our precious sheaves;
Only treasure kept in safety,
Out of reach and out of rust,
Till we clasp it grown the richer
Through the glory of our trust.

On the gradual sloping pathway,
As the passing years decline,
Gleams a golden lowly light falling
Far from upper heights divine.
And the shadows from that brightness
Wrap them softly in their fold,
Who unto celestial whiteness
Walks, by way of growing old.
A WOMAN'S COMPLAINT.

I know that deep within your heart of hearts
You hold me shrined apart from common things,
And that my step, my voice, can bring to you
A gladness that no other presence brings.

And yet, dear love, through all the weary days
You never speak one word of tenderness,
Nor stroke my hair, nor softly clasp my hand
Within your own in loving, mute care.

You think, perhaps, I should be all content
To know so well the loving place I hold
Within your life, and so you do not dream
How much I long to hear the story told.

You cannot know, when we two sit alone,
And tranquil thoughts within your mind are stirred,
My heart is crying like a tired child
For one fond look, one gentle, loving word.

It may be when your eyes look into mine
You only say, "How dear she is to me!"
Oh, could I read it in your softened glance,
How radiant this plain old world would be!

Perhaps, sometimes, you breathe a secret prayer
That choicest blessings unto me be given;
But if you said aloud, "God bless thee, dear!"
I should not ask a greater boon from Heaven.

I weary sometimes of the rugged way;
But should you say, "Through thee my life is sweet,"
The dreariest desert that our path could cross
Would suddenly grow green beneath my feet.

'T is not the boundless waters ocean holds
That give refreshment to the thirsty flowers,
But just the drops that, rising to the skies,
From thence descend in softling falling showers.

What matter that our granaries are filled
With all the richest harvests' golden stores,
If we who own them cannot enter in,
But famished stand before the close-barred doors?

And so 't is sad that those who should be rich
In that true love which crowns our earthly lot,
Go praying with white lips from day to day
For love's sweet tokens, and receive them not.

The Advance.

SONGS IN SLEEP.

If I could frame for you in cunning words
The songs my heart in sleep is often singing,
You'd fancy, love, an orchestra of birds
Upon their quivering throats the dawn were bringing.

Now in some wild, weird flush of melody
I'd feign the skylark, with his music sifting
The final films of nightshade from the sea,
And all the waking world to heaven uplifting.

Then, ere the lengthening liquid solo went—
In skylark fashion — out of hearing o'er us,
I'd mock with skill, as sweet as my intent,
Thrustle and blackbird coming in for chorus.

There's not a strain of joy the birds could sing,
I could not set to words that I've been dreaming;
But when I wake, alas! they all take wing,
And leave of music but the empty seeming.

Believe me, love, I sing to you in sleep,
Songs that if voiced would wake you to pleasure;
Would you could hear them in your dreams, and keep
Their inner meaning, though you missed the measure.

FIFTY YEARS APART.

They sit in the winter gloaming,
And the fire burns bright between;
One has passed seventy summers,
And the other just seventeen.

They rest in a happy silence
As the shadows deepen fast;
One lives in a coming future,
And one in a long, long past.

Each dreams of a rush of music,
And a question whispered low;
One will hear it this evening,
One heard it long ago.

Each dreams of a loving husband
Whose brave heart is hers alone;
For one the joy is coming,
For one the joy has flown.
Each dreams of a life of gladness
Spent under the sunny skies;
And both the hope and the memory
Shine in the happy eyes.

Who knows which dream is the brightest?
And who knows which is the best?
The sorrow and joy are mingled,
But only the end is rest.

A WOMAN'S WISH.

Would I were lying in a field of clover,
Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet,
With dusky clouds in deep skies hanging over,
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of worry
In eager haste from Thought's impatient neck,
And watch it coursing— in its heartless hurry
Disdaining Wisdom's whistles, Duty's beck.

Ah, it were sweet where clover clumps are meeting,
And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest;
No sound except my own heart's steady beating,
Rocking itself to sleep within my breast. —

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing
That comes of listening to a bird's song!
Our souls require at times this fall unheathing —
All swords will rust if scabbard-kept too long.

And I am tired — so tired of rigid duty,
So tired of all my tired hands find to do!
I yearn, I yearn, for some of life's free beauty,
Its loose beads with no straight string running through.

Ay, laugh, if laugh you will, at my crude speech,
But women sometimes die of such a greed,—
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach,
And the assurance they have all they need.

MARY A. TOWNSEND.

AT THE PIANO.

Play on! play on! As softly glides
The low refrain, I seem, I seem
To float, to float, to golden tides
By sunlit isles, where life and dream

THE HUMBLER POETS.

The fire in the west burns low;
A fading gleam of light
Only remains of the crimson glow
That made half heaven so bright;
And the weary day, in her shroud of gray,
Sighs out her life on the breast of night.

The fire on my hearth burns low;
Beside the glimmering light
I dream of that sunset long ago
When all my heaven seemed bright.
But since that day, with each sunset ray
I've longed to die in the gloom of night.

The fire of my life burns low;
And through the darkening night
Strange, shadowy shapes flit to and fro,
Awaiting my spirit's flight.
And these shadowy things show glistening wings
To bear me away on the morning light.

MY CIGARETTE.

My cigarette! The amulet
That charms afar unrest and sorrow;
The magic wand that far beyond
Today can conjure up to-morrow.
Like love's desire, thy crown of fire
So softly with the twilight blending,
And ah! meseems, a poet's dreams
Are in thy wreaths of smoke ascending.

My cigarette! Can I forget
How Kate and I, in sunny weather,
Sat in the shade the elm-tree made
And rolled the fragrant weed together?
I at her side beatified,
To hold and guide her fingers willing;
She rolling slow the paper's snow,
Putting my heart in with the filling.

My cigarette! I see her yet,
The white smoke from her red lips curling,
Her dreaming eyes, her soft replies,
Her gentle sighs, her laughter parted!
Ah, dainty roll, whose parting soul
Ebbs out in many a snowy billow,
I, too, would burn if I might earn
Upon her lips so soft a pillow!

Ah, cigarette! The gay coquette
Has long forgot the flames she lighted,
And you and I unthinking by
Alike are thrown, alike are slighted.
The darkness gathers fast without,
A rain-drop on my window plashes;
My cigarette and heart are out,
And nought is left me but the ashes.

PART VIII.

Home and Fireside.
PART VIII.

Home and Fireside.

AT HOME.

Where burns the fireside brightest,
Cheering the social breast?
Where beats the fond heart lightest,
Its humblest hopes possessed?
Where is the hour of sadness,
With meek-eyed patience borne,
Worth more than those of gladness,
Which mirth's gay checks adorn?
Pleasure is marked by fleeting,
To those who ever roam;
While grief itself has sweetness
At home — sweet home.

BRET Harte.

FORTUNE MY FOE.

"Aim not too high at things beyond thy reach,"
Nor give the rein to reckless thought or speech.
Is it not better all thy life to hide
Lord of thyself, than all the earth beside?

Then if high Fortune far from thee take wing,
Why shouldst thou envy counsellor or king?
Purple or homespun, — wherefore make ado
What coat may cover, if the heart be true?

Then, if at last thou gather wealth at will,
Thou most shalt honor Him who grants it still;
Since he who best doth poverty endure,
Should prove, when rich, best brother to the poor.

The Spectator.

ALFRED PERCIVAL GRAVES.
HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS.

'Tis home where'er the heart is,
Where'er its loved ones dwell,
In cities or in cottages,
Thronged haunts or mossy dell.
The heart's a rover ever,
And thus, on wave and wild,
The maiden with her lover walks,
The mother with her child.

'Tis bright where'er the heart is;
Its fairy spell can bring
Fresh fountains to the wilderness,
And to the desert spring.

Green isles are in the ocean,
O'er which affection glides,
A haven on each sunny shore,
When love's the sun that guides.

'Tis free where'er the heart is;
Nor chains nor dungeons dim
May check the mind's aspiring thought,
The spirit's pealing hymn.

The heart gives life its beauty,
Its glory, and its powers;
'Tis sunlight to its rippling stream,
And soft dew to its flowers.

HOME-COMING.

When brothers leave the old hearthstone
And go, each one, a separate way,
We think, as we go on alone
Along our pathway, day by day,
Of olden scenes and faces dear,
Of voices that we miss so much;
And memory brings the absent near,
Until we almost feel the touch
Of loving hands, and hear once more
The dear old voices ringing out.
As in that happy time of yore,
Ere life had caught a shade of doubt.

If you should place against your ear
The shell you plundered from the sea,
Down in its hidden heart you'd hear
A low and tender melody.

A MURMUR OF THE RESTLESS TIDE.

A yearning born of memory;
And though its yearnings be denied,
The shell keeps singing of the sea,
And sometimes when old memories throb
Like ghosts the memories of our soul.
We feel the yearning, deep and strong,
A longing we cannot control.

To lay our care and business by,
And seek the old familiar ways,
And cross home's threshold, and sit down
With comrades of our earlier days.

For though our paths are sullered wide,
We feel that we are brothers yet,
And by and by we turn aside
From hurrying care and worldly fret,
And each one wanders back to meet
His brother by the hearth of home;
I think the meeting is more sweet
Because so far and wide we roam.

We cross the lengthening bridge of years,
Meet outstretched hands and faces true;
The silent eloquence of tears
Speaks welcome that no words can do.

But ah, the meeting holds regret!
The sad, sad story, often told,
Of hands that ours have often met,
Close folded under churchyard mould;
Of eyes that smiled into our own,
Closed in the dreamless sleep of God;
A sweeter rest was never known
Than theirs, beneath the grave's white sod.

A tender thought for them to-night,
A tribute tear from memory;
Beneath their covering of white
Sweet may their dreamless slumber be.

A SONG FOR THE HOT WINDS.

Oh for a breath 'o' the moorlands,
A whisper 'o' the caller air!
For the smell 'o' the flowerin' heather
My very heart is ar

Oh for the sound 'o' the burnies
That whistle to the sea;
For the sight 'o' the browning bracken
On the hillside waving free!
Oh for the blue locks cradled
In the arms o' mountains gray,
That smile as they shadow the drifting clouds
A' the bonny summer day!

Oh for the tops o' mountains
White wi' eternal snow;
For the mists that drift across the lift;
For the strong east winds that blow!

I am sick o' the blazing sunshine
That burns through the weary hours,
O' the gaudy birds singing never a song,
O' beautiful scentless flowers.

I wud gie a' the southern glory
For a taste o' a good saut wind,
Wi' a road o'er the bonny sea before,
And a track o' foam behind.

Auld Scotland may be rugged,
Her mountains stern and bare;
But, oh for a breath o' her moorlands,
A whiff o' her caller air!

Harriet Miller Davidson.

THE SERMON IN A STOCKING.

The supper is over, the hearth is swept,
And in the wood fire's glow
The children cluster to hear a tale
Of that time so long ago,

When grandmamma's hair was golden brown,
And the warm blood came and went
O'er the face that could scarce have been sweeter then
Than now in its rich content.

The face is wrinkled and careworn now,
And the golden hair is gray;
But the light that shone in the young girl's eyes
Has never gone away.

And her needles catch the fire's light
As in and out they go,
With the clicking music that grandma loves,
Shaping the stocking's toe.

HOME AND FIRESIDE.

And the waking children love it too,
For they know the stocking song
Brings many a tale to grandma's mind
Which they shall hear ere long.

But it brings no story of olden time
To grandma's heart to-night,—
Only a ditty quaint and short
Is sung by the needle's bright.

"Life is a stocking," grandma says,
"And yours is just begun;
But I am knitting the toe of mine,
And my work is almost done.

"With merry hearts we begin to knit,
And the ribbing is almost play;
Some are gay-colored, and some are white,
And some are ashen gray.

"But most are made of many a hue,
With many a stitch set wrong,
And many a row to be sadly ripped
Ere the whole is fair and strong.

"There are long plain stretches without a break,
That in youth are hard to bear;
And many a weary tear is dropped
As we fashion the heel with care.

"But the saddest, happiest time is that,
We count and yet would shun,
When our Heavenly Father breaks the thread,
And says our work is done."

And the children come to say good-night,
With tears in their bright young eyes;
While in grandma's lap, with broken thread,
The finished stocking lies.

MY MOTHER'S HANDS.

Sueet beautiful, beautiful hands!
They're neither white nor small;
And you, I know, would scarcely think
That they were fair at all.
I've looked on hands whose form and hue
A sculptor's dream might be;
Yet are those wrinkled, aged hands
Most beautiful to me.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
Though heart were weary and sad,
These patient hands kept toiling on,
That the children might be glad;
I always weep, as looking back
To childhood's distant day,
I think how those hands rested not,
When mine were at their play.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They're growing fleshy now,
For time and pain have left their mark
On hands, and heart, and brow.
Ah, alas! the evening's calm,
And the sad, sad day to me,
When 'neath the daisies, out of sight,
These hands will folded be.

But oh, beyond this shadow land,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know not well these dear old hands
Will palms of victory bear;
Where crystal streams through endless years
Flow over golden sands,
And where the old grow young again,
I'll clasp my mother's hands.

THE EXILES.

The sea at the song's base brightens,
And shivers in waves of gold;
And overhead, in its vastness,
The fathomless blue is rolled.
There comes no wind from the water,
There shines no sail on the main,
And not a cloudlet to shadow
The earth with its fleecy grain.
Oh, give in return for this glory,
So passionate, warm, and still,
The mist of a highland valley —
The breeze from a Scottish hill!

Day after day glides slowly,
Ever and ever the same,—
Seas of intensest splendor,
Air which smite hot as a flame;
Birds of imperial plumage,
Palms straight as columns of fire,
Flutter and glitter around me,
But not so my soul's desire.

HOME AND FIRESIDE.

I long for the song of the laverock,
The cataract's leap and flash,
The sweep of the red deer's antlers,
The gleam of the mountain ash.

Only when night's quiescent,
And peopled with alien stars,
Old faces come to the casement
And peer through the vine-leaved bars.
No words, but I guess their fancies —
Their dreamings are also mine —
Of the land of the cloud and heather,
The region of "Auld Lang Syne."

Again we are treading the mountains,
Below us broaden the Firth,
And billows of light keep rolling
Down leagues of emerald heath.

Speed swift through the glowing tropics,
Stout ship which shall bear me home;
Oh, pass as a God-seat arrow
Through tempest, darkness, and foam.
Bear up through the silent girdle
That circles the flying earth,
Till there shall blaze on thy compass
The loadstar over the north;
That the winds of the hills may greet us,
That our footsteps again may be
In the land of our hearts' traditions,
And close to the storied sea.

Chambers's Journal.

OUR OWN.

If I had known in the morning
How wearily all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble my mind
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex our own
With look and tone
We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening
You may give me the kiss of peace,
Yet it might be
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go forth in the morning
THE HUMBLER POETS.

That never come home at night;
And hearts have broken
For harsh words spoken
That sorrow can never set right.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest;
But oft for "our own."
The bitter tone,
Though we love "our own" the best.
Ah, lips with the curve impatient,
Ah, brow with that look of scorn,
"T were a cruel fate
Were the night too late
To undo the work of morn!"

DAN'S WIFE.

Up in early morning light,
Sweeping, dusting, "setting right,"
Oiling all the household things,
Sewing buttons, twanging strings,
Telling Bridget what to do,
Mending rips in Johnny's shoe,
Running up and down the stair,
Tying baby in her chair,
Getting meat and spreading bread,
Dishing out so much per head,
Eating as she can by chance,
Giving husband kindly glance;
Teiling, working, busy life,—
Smart woman,
Dan's wife.

Dan comes home at fall of night,
Home so cheerful, neat, and bright;
Children meet him at the door,
Pull him in and look him over;
Wife asks how the work has gone.
"Busy times with us at home!"
Supper done, Dan reads with ease,—
Happy Dan, but one to please!
Children must be put to bed—
All the little prayers are said;
Little shoes are placed in rows,
Bedclothes tucked o'er little toes;
Busy, noisy, weary life,—
Tired woman,
Dan's wife.

TIED MOTHERS.

A little elbow leans upon your knee,
Your tired knee, that has so much to bear;
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly
From underneath a thatch of tangled hair.
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch
Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours so tight;—
You do not prize this blessing overmuch;
You almost are too tired to pray to-night.

But it is blessedness! A year ago
I did not see it as I do to-day,—
We were so dull and thankless; and too slow
To catch the sunshine till it slips away.
And now it seems surpassing strange to me
That, while I wore the badge of motherhood,
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly
The little child that brought me only good.
And if, some night, when you sit down to rest,
You miss this elbow from your tired knee,
This restless, curling head from off your breast,
This loitering tongue that chatters constantly;
If from your own the dimpled hands had slipped,
And reer would nestle in your palm again;
If the white feet into their grave had tripped,
I could not blame you for your heartache then!

I wonder so that mothers ever feet
At little children clinging to their gown,
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them frown.
If I could find a little muddy boot,
Or cap, or jacket, on my chamber floor;
If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot,
And hear its patter in my home once more;

If I could mead a broken cart today,
To-morrow make a kite to reach the sky,—
There is no woman in God's world could say
She was more blissfully content than I.
But ah! the dainty pillow next my own
Is never rumpled by a shining head;
My singing birdling from its nest has flown,
The little boy I used to kiss is dead!

MRS. MAY RILEY SMITH.

LITTLE STITCHES.

Oft, thoughts that go in with the stitches
That women quietly take,
While caskets are built with the needle,
And babblies are rounded to break.

You see in your kerchief-beam, Freshman,
A dotted line fairy and fine;
But see you the prayers low and tender
Pricked in with the lengthening line?

Betrothed, as you bend o'er the trousseau,
Absorbed in rose-tinted dream,
Speak low as you censure the seamstress
For waver and knot in the seam.

In broderie dainty and foreign,
That falls at your waist, you can see
How trembled the hand of a novice,
In spite of the vigi taught knee.

LIKE HIS MOTHER USED TO MAKE.

"I was born in Indiana," says a stranger lank and slim,
As us sellers in the restaurant was kind o' guvn' him,
And Uncle Jake was slidin' him another pump'kin pie
And an extra cup o' coffee, with a twinkle in his eye—
"I was born in Indiana — more is forty year ago,
And I haint been back in twenty — and I'm workin' back'ards slow.
But I've et in every restaurant 'twixt here and Santa Fe,
And I want to state, this coffee tastes like gittin' home to me!

"Pour us out another, daddy," says the seller, warmin' up,
A speakin' cross a sauceful, as uncle took his cup —
"When I seed your sign out yonder," he went on to Uncle Jake —
"Come in and git some coffee like your mother used to make! —
I thought of my old mother and the Posey County farm,
And me a little kid ag'in, a hangin' in her arm
As she set the pot a bellin' — broke the eggs an' poured 'em in —
And the seller kind o' held it, with a trimble in his chin.

HOME AND FIRESIDE.

For throbs of a woman heart smothered,
And cries that no patience can still,
Are lifting the wreathes and the roses,
Are echoing from girdle and frill:

Oh, terrible, blood-reddened ladder
Of hoops hang on poverty's hands,
Up which goes the foot of Oppression
To gather gold out of its strands!

Waits yonder no echoing thunder,
No lightnings to smite from the cloud,
When falling tears rust the swift needle,
And threads tie the neck of a shroud?

Ah, beautiful stitches so tiny,
Where brooding love waits in the nest,
In shadow of motherhood coming,
Half fearful, yet consciously blest!

What happy hopes lie in the gatherings,
Or lurk in the robe soft and fine!
What buds underneath the leaves silvery,
What day-dreams run with the vines?

No tale can you tell, little stitches —
Such tales as you might if you could!
From flounces that cover a ball dress,
To seams in a holy monk's hood.
ROCKING THE BABY.

I HEAR her rocking the baby —
Her room is next to mine —
And one day I feel the dimpled arms
That round her neck entwine,
As she rocks and rocks the baby,
In the room just next to mine.

I hear her rocking the baby
Each day when the twilight comes,
And I know there's a world of blessing and love
In the "baby-by" she sings.

I can see the restless fingers
Playing with "mamma's rings,"
The sweet little smiling, pouting mouth
That to hers in kissing clings,
As she rocks and sings to the baby,
And dreams as she rocks and sings.

I hear her rocking the baby,
Slower and slower now,
And I hear she is leaving her good-night kiss
On its eyes, and cheek, and brow.

From her rocking, rocking, rocking,
I wonder would she start
Could she know, through the wall between us,
She is rocking on a heart?
While my empty arms are aching
For a form they may not press, —
And my empty heart is breaking
In its desolate loneliness.

I list to the rocking, rocking,
In the room just next to mine,
And breathe a prayer in silence,
At a mother's broken shrine,
For the woman who rocks the baby
In the room just next to mine.

THE HUMBLER POETS.

And Uncle Jake he fetched the feller's coffee back, and stood
As solemn, fer a minute, as an undertaker would;
Then he sort 'er turned an' tiptoed to 'ts the kitchen door, and next —
Here comes his old wife out with him a rubbin' of her specs —
And she rushes for the stranger, and she hollers out, "It's him!
Thank God, we've met him comin'! Don't you know your mother, Jim?"

And the feller as he grabbed her says: "You bet I I ain't forgot" —
But, wipin' of his eyes, says he, "Your coffee's mighty hot!"

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

ENCORE.

The singer stood in a blaze of light,
And fronted the flowery throat;
Her lips apart with her greeting smile,
Her soul soared out in her song.
Now hovering like an imprisoned bird
With its plaintings thrilling high,
Then faintly sweet, as the reapers hear
A lark afar in the sky;
And forth like thunder the praises broke,
And the singer bowed and smiled,
And flowers fell fast in a scented storm —
But she was not to be wiled.
"Shall I throw my gifts to this fickle throng?"
She thought with a bitter sigh.
"What do they care for my simple song?"
As she courtesied a glad good-by.

The singer sat in her lonely room,
As the stars peeped out of the haze,
And her voice poured forth in its sweetest blast,
Though none was beside to praise —
Till she saw a form to her window creep
And crouch by its misty pane,
An old dame wept at the wondrous song
That gave back her youth again!

The singer stirred not, nor made a sign
That she saw where the listener stood,
But once and again she raised her voice
And poured out its golden flood,
And only ceased when the minster bells
Shook out their evening chime —
Then one thanked God for the song she heard,
And one for the song she sang.
PART IX.

Hope, Encouragement, and Contentment.
PART IX.

Hope, Encouragement, and Contentment.

THE CHEERFUL HEART.

"The world is ever as we take it, And life, dear child, is what we make it."

Thus spoke a grandam, bent with care, To little Mabel, flushed and fair. But Mabel took no heed that day Of what she heard her grandam say. Years after, when no more a child, Her path in life seemed dark and wild. Back to her heart the memory came Of a quaint utterance of the dame:

"The world, dear child, is as we take it, And life, be sure, is what we make it."

She cleared her brow, and smiling thought, "Tis even as the good soul taught! "And half my woes thus quickly cured, The other half may be endured." No more her heart its shadows wore; She grew a little child once more. A little child in love and trust, She took the world (as we, too, must)
THE HUMBLER POETS.

In happy mood; and lo! it grew
Brighter and brighter to her view.
She made of life (as we, too, should)
A joy; and lo! all things were good
And fair to her as in God's sight
When first he said, "Let there be light!"

SOMETIMES.

Sometimes, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgments here have spurned.
The thing o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frowned and sighed,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, he heeded not our cry
Because his wisdom to the end could see.
And o'er all prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood.
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things because it seemed good.

And if, sometimes, commingled with life's wine
We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out the potion for our lips to drink.
And if some friend we love is being low,
Where human kisses cannot reach his face,
Oh, do not blame the loving Father so,
But bear your sorrow with obedient grace!

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friends,
And that, sometimes, the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send.
If we could push afar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's working see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

But not today; then be content, poor hearts;
God's plans like lilies pure and white unfold.
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart—
Time will reveal the calyces of gold.
And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall know and clearly understand,
I think that we shall say that "God knows best."

MRS. MAY RILEY SMITH.

WHAT LIFE HATH.

Life hath its barren years,
When blossoms fall untimely down,
When ripened fruitage fails to crown
The summer toil, when Nature's crown
Looks only on our tears.

Life hath its faithless days—
The golden promise of the morn
That seemed for light and gladness born,
Mean only moody wreck and scorn,
Hushed harp instead of praise.

Life hath its valleys too—
Where we must walk with keen regret,
With mourning clothed, with wild rain wet—
Towards sunlit hopes that soon must set,
All quenched in pitying dew.

Life hath its harvest moons,
In tasselled corn, and purple-weighted vine,
Its gathered sheaves of grain, the blessed sign
Of plentiful ripening, bread, and pure, rich wine:
Full hearts for harvest tunes.

Life hath its hopes fulfilled,
Its glad fruitions, its blessed answered prayers,
Sweter for waiting long whose holy air,
In drawn to silent sooth, breathes forth its rare,
Grand speech by joy distilled.

Life hath its Tabor heights,
Its lofty mounts of heavenly recognition,
Whose unveiled glories flash to earth, munition
Of love and truth and clear intuition.
Half mount of all delights.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

LOVE AND LABOR.

We die not all, for our deeds remain
To crown with honor or may with stain;
Through endless sequence of years to come
Our lives shall speak when our lips are dumb.

What though we perish, unknown to fame,
Our tomb forgotten and lost our name,
Since morn is wasted in heaven or earth,
And nothing dies to which God gives birth!

Though life be joyless and death be cold,
And pleasures pall as the world grows old,
Yet God has granted our hearts relief,
For Love and Labor can conquer grief.

Love sheds a light on the gloomy way,
And Labor hurls the weary day;
Though death be fearful and life be hard,
Yet Love and Labor shall win reward.

If Love can dry up a single tear,
If life-long Labor avail to clear
A single web from before the sun,
Then Love and Labor have won their due.

What though we mourn, we can comfort pain;
What if we die, so the truth be plain!
A little spark from a high desire
Shall kindle others, and grow a fire.

We are not worthy to work the whole,
We have no strength which may have a soul;
Enough for us if our life begin
Successful struggles with grief and sin.

Labor is mortal and fades away,
But Love shall triumph in perfect day;
Labor may wither beneath the sod,
But Love lives ever, for Love is God.

LIFE'S TRIUMPH.

Each life has one grand day: the clouds may lie
Along the hills, and storm-winds fiercely blow—
The great red sun shine like a thing of woe,
And death’s sad skeleton stalk grimly by,
Yet none of these, no matter how they try,
Can shroud the perfect triumph we shall know,
Or dim the glory that some star will show
Set far away in depths of purple sky.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT. 237

Sweet love may bring to us this day supreme,
Or it may thrill our souls through art or song.
Or meet us where red battle-sorges foam;
Hope’s stranded wrecks, the barren coasts may glean,
And weeks and months rush by, a sombre throng.
But sometime, somewhere, it will surely come.

THOMAS S. COLLIER.

WHEN MY SHIP COMES IN.

Somewhere, out on the blue seas sailing,
Where the winds dance and spin;
Beyond the reach of my eager hailing,
Over the breakers’ din;
Out where the dark storm-clouds are lifting,
Out where the blowing fog is drifting,
Out where the treacherous sand is shifting,
My ship is coming in.

Oh, I have watched till my eyes were aching,
Day after weary day;
Oh, I have hoped till my heart was breaking,
While the long nights ebbed away;
Could I but know where the waves had tossed her,
Could I but know what storms had crossed her,
Could I but know where the winds had lost her,
Out in the twilight gray!

But though the storms her course have altered,
Surely the port she’ll win;
Never my faith in my ship has faltered,
I know she is coming in.

For through the restless ways of her roaming,
Through the mad rush of the wild waves foaming,
Through the white crest of the billows combing,
My ship is coming in.

Breasting the tides where the gulls are flying,
Swiftly she’s coming in;
Shallows and deeps and rocks defying,
Bravely she’s coming in;
Precious the love she will bring to bless me,
Stow her arms she will bring to caress me,
In the proud purple of kings she will dress me,
My ship that is coming in.

White in the sunshine her sails will be gleaming,
See, where my ship comes in;
At mast-head and peak her colors streaming,
Proudly she’s sailing in;
THE HUMBLER POSTS.

Love, hope, and joy on her decks are cheering,
Music will welcome her glad appearing,
And my heart will sing at her stately bearing,
When my ship comes in.

ROBERT J. BURDETT.

SILENCE.

In silence mighty things are wrought,—
Silently built, thought on thought,
Truth's temple greets the sky;
And like a citadel with towers,
The soul with her subterranean powers
Is strengthened silently.

— LYNCH.

OUTWARDS OR HOMEWARDS.

Still are the ships that in haven ride,
Waiting fair winds or a turn of the tide;
Nothing they fret, though they do not get
Out on the glorious ocean wide.
Oh, wild hearts, that yearn to be free,
Look, and learn from the ships of the sea!
Bravely the ships, in the tempest tossed,
Buffet the waves till the sea be crossed;
Not in despair of the haven fair,
Though winds blow backward, and leagues be lost;
Oh, weary hearts, that yearn for sleep,
Look, and learn from the ships of the deep!

— F. W. BOURDILLON.

THE JOY OF INCOMPLETENESS.

If all our life were one broad glare
Of sunlight, clear, unclouded;
If all our paths were smooth and fair,
By no soft gloom ensnared;
If all life's flowers were fully blown
Without the sweet unfolding,
And happiness were rudely thrown
On hands too weak for holding—
Should we not miss the twilight hours,
The gentle lute and sadness?
Should we not long for storms and showers
To break the constant gladness?

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

If none were sick and none were sad,
What service could we render?
I think if we were always glad,
We scarcely could be tender.
Did our beloved never need
Our patient ministration,
Earth would grow cold and miss indeed
Its sweetest consolation:
If sorrow never claimed our heart,
And every wish were granted,
Patience would die, and hope depart—
Life would be disenchanted.

And yet in heaven is no more night,
In heaven is no more sorrow!
Such unimagined new delight
Fresh grace from pain will borrow.
As the poor seed that underground
Seeks its true life above it,
Not knowing what will there be found
When sunbeams kiss and love it,
So we in darkness upward grow,
And look and long for heaven,
But cannot picture it below
Till more of light be given.

NOTE.—A more complete version of this anonymous poem than that found in Harper's Encyclopedia of Poetry, in which the last eight lines given here are missing.

—

A PLEA FOR "CASTLES IN THE AIR."

Amid the myriad troubles that meet us day by day,
Who would not from the conflict a moment turn away,
And in a fair fairy land, where men no burdens bear,
Forget awhile our tears and toil in "castles in the air"?

When many a bright-hued prospect fades fast beyond our view,
And hopes which seemed fruition prove shadowy and untrue;
May we not in that dreamland, beyond all clouds and care,
Behold our Paradise restored in "castles in the air"?

Oh, there are lovely chambers in every home and heart
—
And in life's song of sorrow each one must hear a part.
But hark! what mystic melodies soon hush the voice of care,
As parted hands are clasped once more in "castles in the air."

Then never grow discouraged though fortune favors not,
And we pursue life's pilgrimage unnoticed or forgot;
We have no hour of victory and bounteous laurels wear
For all are kings and conquerors in "castles in the air."

JACOB GOUGH.
LEARN TO WAIT.

Learn to wait — life's hardest lesson,
Learn to wait — hope's slow fruition;
Faint not, though the way seem long;
There is joy in each condition;
Hearts, through suffering, may grow strong.

Constant sampaning, how'er welcome,
N' er would ripen fruit or flower;
Giant oaks owe half their greatness
To the scathing tempest's power.

Thus a soul untouched by sorrow
Aims not at a higher stage;
Joy seeks not a brighter morrow,
Only sad hearts learn to wait.

Human strength and human greatness
Spring not from life's sunny side;
Heroes must be more than driftwood
Floating on a waveless tide.

BETTER TO CLimb AND 'FALL.

Give me a man with an aim,
Whatever that aim may be,
Whether it's wealth, or whether it's fame,
It matters not to me.
Let him walk in the path of right,
And keep his aim in sight,
And work and pray in faith alway,
With his eye on the glittering height.

Give me a man who says —
"I will do something well,
And make the fleeting days
A story of labor tell."
Though the aim he has be small,
It is better than none at all;
With something to do the whole year through
He will not stumble or fall.

But Satan weaves a snare
For the feet of those who stray
With never a thought or care
Where the path may lead away.
The man who has no aim.
Not only leaves no name
When this life is done, but ten to one
He leaves a record of shame.

Give me a man whose heart
Is filled with ambition's fire;
Who sets his mark in the start,
And keeps moving it higher and higher.
Better to die in the strife,
The hands with labor rise,
Than to glide with the stream in an idle dream,
And lead a purposeless life.

Better to strive and climb,
And never reach the goal,
Than to drift along with time,
An aimless, worthless soul.
Ay, better to climb and fail,
Or sow, though the yield be small,
Than to throw away day after day,
And never to strive at all.

BY AND BY.

Was the parting very bitter?
Was the hand clasped very tight?
Is a storm of tear-drops falling
From a face all sad and white?
Think not of it, in the future,
Calmer, fairer days are nigh —
Gaze not backward, but look onward
For a sunny "by and by."

Was the priceless love you lavished,
Sought for, played with, and then staid?
Were its crushed and quivering remants
Calmly thrown back again?
Calmly, too, those remants gather,
Bring them home without a sigh;
Sweet returns they yet shall bring you
In the coming "by and by."

Are the eyelids very heavy?
Does the tired head long for rest?
Are the temples hot and throbbing,
And the hands together pressed?

16
Hope shall lay you on her bosom,
Cool the poor lips parched and dry,
And shall whisper, "Rest is coming —
Rest forever, 'by and by.'"

And when calmed and cheered and freshened
By her soul-inspiring voice,
Then look up, the heavens are brightening —
Cease your wailing and rejoice.
Cry not for the days departed,
None will hear you, none reply;
But look up where light is breaking
O'er a brighter 'by and by.'

FAILURE.
The Lord, who fashioned my hands for working,
Set me a task and it is not done;
I have tried and tried since the early morning,
And now to the westward sinketh the sun.

Noble the task that was kindly given
To one so little and weak as I;
Somehow my strength would never grasp it,
Never as days and years flew by.

Others found me cheerfully telling,
Showed me their work as they passed away;
Filled were their hands to overflowing,
Proud were their hearts, and glad and gay.

Laden with harvest spoils they entered
In at the golden gate of their rest;
Laid their sheaves at the feet of the Master,
Found their places among the blest.

Happy are those who strove to help me —
Failing ever in spite of their aid;
Pain would their love have borne me with them,
But I was unready and sore afraid.

Now I know my task will never be finished,
And when the Master calleth my name,
His voice will find me still at my labor,
Weeping beside it in weary shame.

With empty hands I shall rise to meet him,
And when he looks for the fruit of years,
Nothing have I to lay before him,
But broken efforts and bitter tears.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.
Yet when he calls I rain would hasten —
Mine eyes are dim and their light is gone;
And I am weary as though I carried
A burden of beautiful work well done.
I will fold my empty hands on my bosom —
Mekly thus, in the shape of a cross;
And the Lord, who made me so frail and feeble,
Maybe will pity their stroke and loss.

NEAR THE DAWN.
When life's troubles gather darkly
Round the way we follow here,
When no hope the sad heart lightens,
No voice speaks a word of cheer;
Then the thought the shadow scatters,
Giving us a cheering ray —
When the night appears the darkest,
Morning is not far away.

When adversity surrounds us,
And our sunshine friends pass by,
And the dreams so fondly cherished
With our shattered treasures lie;
Then amid such gloomy seasons
This sweet thought can yet be drawn, —
When the darkest hour is present,
It is always near the dawn.

When the spirit fluttering lingers
On the confines of this life,
Parting from all joyful memories,
And from every scene of strife,
Though the scene is sad and gloomy,
And the body shrinks in fear,
These dark hours will soon be vanished,
And the glorious morrow be here.

Pain cannot affect us always,
Brighter days will soon be here;
Sorrow may oppress us often,
Yet a happier time is near;
All along our earthly journey
This reflection lights the way —
Nature's darkest hour is always
Just before the break of day.
MAGDALENA.

Magdalena's robes are trailling through the highway's soiling dust,
Spotless hem and seam are glazing over with apparent rust;
Hooded cloak conceals the contour of her drooping head and face.

Hiding outline and proportion of her form whose step is grace.
Small her feet and arched her instep gliding onward travel-stained —
Feet whose wealth and pride of birthright have the common earth disdained.

Who can prove that Magdalena walks alone in strange disguise?
Who unclasp the hooded mantle hiding face and veiling eyes?

Magdalena lives in grandeur, and the nobles round her wait,
And her chariot on the highway bears armorial gauds of state;
Fair and proud is Magdalena, pride of birth and pride of scorn;
Fairer, earth ne'er gave existence since the day that Eve was born.

Form as stately, mould as perfect, eyes of blue and forehead fair,
Crowned with woman's crown of glory — wondrous waves of golden hair.

Magdalena loves in secret, loves the lowliest fisher's son;
She can never wed the Gentile who her faith and soul has won;
He is brave and tall and graceful, fair as any son of earth,
But his grace is all of nature, not from gentle blood and birth.

Yesterday the highest ruler in the land of Judah came,
Kneeling at her feet in splendor, offering her his hand and name;
But he tarried not till evening, whispering love vows 'neath the moon,
Rode away in crimson anger, anger o'er his slighted boon.

Magdalena, pale with passion, struggling in her bonds of love,
Envyng every manner thing from mated man to mated dove,
Spurns the laws of men and birthright, spurns the laws of maiden shame,
Scorns the ruler and his greatness, scorns alike her wealth and fame;
Heeding but the charm which draws her towards the fisher's manly grace,
Parting with the hopes of woman for his ardent love embrace.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

Magdalena's cheeks are glowing with her lover's kisses warm,
And his manly arms close folding round her little and yielding form;
Nature owns no paltry barrier, love has conquered pride of birth,
And their wedded souls in spirit know no other bonds on earth.

Wreath in bliss of love's elysium, answering pulse and beating heart,
Fame and name and life forgotten, e'en the law that bids them part.

Magdalena's fame is sullied, like her robes with highway dust;
Scribes and Pharisees proclaim her sin and shame before the just;
Fair and high-born Magdalena, drooping form and head low-bowed, Guilty captive at the mercy of a coarse, vindictive crowd.

Crowning for the law of Moses, so to stone her till she dies,
Waiting judgment from the Master, life or death as he replies.
Spies have proved that Magdalena walks alone in strange disguise,
Torn away the hooded mantle hiding face and veiling eyes.

Magdalena scorned the ruler; he it was who hired the spies,
Into all her secrets prying, forcing off her strange disguise.
Tearing from the fond embraces of her lover's folding arms.
Forcing her from love's protection, rudely railing at her charms.

Bringing her within the temple with her head and bosom bare,
No disguise to hide her blushing, save her veil of golden hair.

Magdalena stands in terror, with her small hands tightly pressed,
Hiding with those waves of glory half the beauty of her breast.

Torn her robes and lost her sandals, vain she hides her gleaming feet,
Guilt ne'er brought so fair a captive pleading at a mercy seat;
He who never knew the passion of the sinner's throbbing soul,
Bows his spotless head in pity as her tears of anguish roll.

Magdalena's eyes are heavy with their penitential tears,
As she gazes on the Master and his words of mercy bear;
See the hideous crowd before her, dropping each his vengeful stone.

Gleaming out with guilty faces, leaving her with him alone.
Jesus, when the last had left her, gazed in pity on her face,
Gave assurance of his pardon by his looks and words of grace,
Gave his strength to Magdalena, strength to walk without disguise;

His large soul of purest love-light dried her penitential eyes.
Magdalena's robes are floating in the pathway of the just,
Spotless feet and hem protected from the earth's corrosive
Pride of wealth and pride of nature made subservient to the Thousands bless the unknown giver for the boon of daily food;
And the manly fisher, leaving tent, and net, and fisher's rod,
Follows as a meek disciple worshipping the Son of God;
In his strength walks Magdalena evermore without disgrace,
Faithful to the hand that saved her and his love-light in her eyes.

WAITING.

LISTENING, yearning.
While the lingering, lengthening shadows
Link the twilight to the day,
While the dewy breath of evening,
Sweet with balm from far away,
Sways the drooping passion-flower
Clinging to my lovely bower
Where I sit, heart-broke and weary,
Facing the sad sight so dreary;
Listening, yearning
For a step that's never returning.

Listening, yearning—
Oh, sad heart, be still'd thy moaning,—
Sun's may wane and months may roll,
Years may glide in silent sorrow
'Er the hope that mocks my soul,
Hush thy wail—let no sharp crying
Strike upon the dumb hours, dying,
While I sit, mid shadows falling,
Hoping, heart-sore, watching, calling,
Listening, yearning
For a wanderer's step returning.

Listening, yearning—
Oh, the night grows cold and dreary,
Loud the chill wind moons and sighs—
Ghostly faces, wan and eerie,
Haunt me with their pitying eyes;
Ghosts of dead hopes yet remaining—
With their sad eyes still complaining
Though their mute lips make no wailing,
Ah, lose watch so unwavailing!
Listening, yearning
For a dear one's step returning.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

Listening, yearning—
Break the night, and storm-clouds gather,
Light grows dim, and hope grows cold;
Closer press the pitying spectres
Ah! they clasp me in their fold.
Life was mournful—death is sweeter—
Memory maketh love completer.
Dear, through evening shadows falling,
Nevermore I wait thee, calling.
Listening, yearning
For thy step too late returning.

Listening, yearning—
O'er the battlements celestial,
See the purch-rowed seraphs lean
Earthward, keeping calms of silence,
Waves of pulsing songs between.
Oh, by Love Divine once yearning
O'er a world, Love's call proud spurning,
Love for love full compensating,—
I adjure thee, seek me, calling.
Listening, yearning,
Down from heaven for thy returning.

HEADS, HEARTS, AND HANDS.

Heads that think and hearts that feel,
Hands that turn the busy wheel,
Make our life worth living here,
In this mundane hemisphere:
Heads to plan what hearts shall do,
Hearts to bear us bravely through—
Thinking head and toiling hand
Are the masters of the land.

When a thought becomes a thing,
Busy hands make hammer's ring
Until honest work has wrought
Into shape the thinker's thought;
Which will aid to civilize,
And make nations great and wise,
Lifting to a lofty height
In this age of thought and light.

Miracles of science show
With their light the way to go;
Touch a tube of gas, and light
Blossoms like the stars of night;
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Touch another tube, and lo!
Streams of crystal water flow;
Touch a telegraphic wire,
And your thought has wings of fire.

Hail to honest hearts and hands,
And to the head that understands;
Hands that dare to truth subscribe,
Hearts that hate a deed unjust;
Hearts that other hearts can trust;
Heads that plan for others' weal;
Heads poised over hearts that feel.

GEORGE W. BUNGEY.

THROUGH TOIL.

I hold it better far that one should rule
Imperious temper with a sinewy will,
Than, amiable and passionless of soul,
With folded hands amid life's din sit still.
Since, though oft-times the battle goeth hard,
Strength comes with struggle, and wild olive leaves
Twined round a brow begrimed and battle-scarred
Mean more to noble men and nobler gods
Than costliest purples of inglorious ease.

Though tried men through toil-encumbered years
Seek restful havens, lotus-lands of dreams,
Who that hath seen doth evermore forget
What glory o'er his burnish'd armor gleams
Who fights with grosser self, or crushes down
With stiwart blows the vices of his age,
Thrilling the austere heights of chaste renown?
The victor's joy Fate nevermore reveals
To sluggish souls,—nor his transcendent peace.

A. L. HINES.

"TIME TO ME."

Time to me this truth hath taught,
'T is a truth that's worth revealing:
More offend from want of thought
Than from want of feeling.

If advice we would convey,
There's a time we should convey it;
If we've but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

Many a beautiful flower decays,
Though we tend it e'er so much;
Something secret on it preys,
Which no human aid can touch.

So in many a loving breast
Lies some cancer-wound concealed,
That, if touched, is more oppressed,
Left unto itself—is healed!

Oft, unknowingly, the tongue
Toucheth on a chord so aching
That a word or accent wrong
Pains the heart almost to breaking,

Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Has been grieved or turned aside
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Time to me this truth hath taught,
'T is a truth that's worth revealing:
More offend from want of thought
Than from want of feeling.

SOMEHOW OR OTHER.

Life is a burden to every one's shoulder;
None may escape from its troubles and care;
Miss it in youth and 't will come when we're older,
And fit us as close as the garments we wear.
Sorrow comes into our house uninvited,
Robbing our heart of its treasures of song;
Lovers grow cold and our friendships are slighted,
Yet somehow or other we worry along.

Midst the sweet blossoms that smile on our faces
Grew the rank weeds that would poison and blight;
And even in the midst of earth's beautiful places
There's always something that is not just right.
Yet off from the rock we may pick a gay flower,
And drink from a spring in a deadly waste;
They come to the heart as a heavenly dower,
And nought is so sweet to the eye or the taste.

Everyday toil is an every-day blessing,
Though poverty's cottage and crust we may share;
Weak is the back on which burdens are pressing,
But stout is the heart which is strengthened by prayer.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Somehow or other the pathway grows brighter
Just when we mourned there was none to befriend;
Hope in the heart makes the burden seem lighter,
And somehow or other we get to the end.

FALLEN.

Here is my hand,
0 weary one —
A smile for love defiled,
A tear for hope reviled,
A brother's faith for her whom men are taught to shun.

What men may do or say
I can not now;
To me thou art a ray
Of sunlight — borne away
By too sweet dreams of earth, whose shadows haunt thy brow.

The visions I recall —
Thy girlish face,
Thy voice like music's fall,
Thy tender glances, all
Thy nature like the heart of life's impassioned grace.

And now thine eyes are filled
With tears of shame!
Where passion burned and thrilled,
Death's angels have instilled
The anguish and remorse that lips with horror frame.

The world's taunts hotly burn
Upon thy cheek;
Thy piteous sisters turn
From thy sad eyes, and spurn
Thy prayers — like cries of sin unworthy to bespeak.

Yet art thou lost indeed?
O stricken soul!
Must life forever bleed
For one embittered deed?
Shall all the golden days be useless to console?

Is charity then dead,
And pity blind?
O child! but few have read
Thy heart. Yet I have shed
Tears scorching as thine own for Christ's love undivined.

GEO. EDWARD MONTGOMERY.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT. 251

PESSIMISM.

"Is life worth living? — talk, to tell you true,
It shallow is, if all men were like you.

Bright-faced maiden, bright-faced maiden,
What is this that I must bear?
Is thy heart with sorrow laden,
Is thine eye dimmed with a tear?
Can it be that lips so sweetly
Rounded to be kindly kissed
Could be twisted indiscreetly
To the vile word Pessimist?
Not for thine own ills thou weepest;
Softly feathered is thy nest;
When thou waketh, when thou sleepest,
Thou art fraught with the best.
But thy sisters and thy brothers
Pierced with many a woful smart,
Dying children, wailing mothers,
Pret thy nerves and stab thy heart.
In the country, in the city,
Godless deeds, a loveless list,
Stir thy blood and move thy pity,
And thou art a Pessimist.

Storms and wars and tribulations,
Fevered passions' restless tide,
With insane hallucinations,
Mingled, travel far and wide.
Can there be an eye inspecting
Things so tumbling in pell-mell,
With a cool control directing
Such a horde, such a hell?
Nay, sweet maid, but think more slowly;
Though this thing and that be sad,
'Tis a logic most unholy
That the gross of things is bad;
'Tis a trick of melancholy,
Tainting life with death's alloy;
Or in wisdom, or in folly,
Nature still delights in joy.
Dost thou hear of starving sinners,—
Nine and ten, or ninety-nine?
Many thousands eat good dinners,
Many hundreds quaff good wine.
Hast thou seen a score of cripples?
Equal legs are not uncommon;
If you know one foot that tipples,
Thousands drink not — man and woman.
Tell me if you know how many
Murders happen in the town?
One a year, perhaps, if any;
Should that weigh your heart quite down?
No doubt, if you read the papers,
You will find a strange botch-potch —
Daring dreams, delusive capers.
Many a blunder, blot, and blotch;
Bags of shrewd speculation,
Rabblement of small and great,
Cheating, swindling, speculation,
Squabblement of Church and State;
Miners blown up, hangings shown up,
Beaten wives, insulted bridgers,
Raving preachers, witless teachers,
Lunatics and suicides;
Drains and cesspools, filthings, fevers,
Poisoned cats and stolen collies,
Simple women, gay deceivers,
Every sort and size of fallacies;
Wandering M. P.'s blindless babble,
Deputations, meetings, dinners,
Roots of the lawless rabble,
Purple sins of West End sinners;
Driving, dicing, drinking, dancing,
Spirit rapping, ghostly stuff;
Bubble schemes and debt financing,
When the shares are blown enough.
All this is true; when men cut capers
That make the people talk or starve,
To-morrow when you ope the papers
You're sure to find their antics there.
But you and I and all our neighbors
Meanwhile, in pure and peaceful ways,
With link on link of fruitful labors,
Draw out our chain of happy days:
See things as they are; be sober;
Balance well life's loss and gain.
If to-day be chill October,
Summer suns will come again.
Are bleak winds forever sighing?
Do dark clouds forever lower?
Are your friends all dead and dying?
All your sweetness turned to sour?
Great men, no doubt, have sometimes small ways,
But a horse is not an ass.
And a black snake is not always
Lurking in the soft green grass.
Don't be hasty, gentle lady,
In this whirl of diverse things
Keep your footing, and with steady
Poise control your equal wings.

All things can't to all be pleasant;
I love bitter, you love sweet;
Some faint when a cut is present;
Rats and babies' cheeks a treat.
If all tiny things were tall things,
If all petty things were grand,
Where would greatness be, when all things
On one common level stand?
Do you think the winged breezes
Fraught with healthy ventilation,
When a tender infant sneezes
Should retreat with trepidation?
When dry Earth to Heaven is calling
For soft rain and freshening dew,
Shall the rain refrain from falling
Lest my lady wet her shoes?
Fools still rush to rash conclusions,
And the mole-eyed minion, man,
Talks of troubles and confusions,
When he sees not half the plan.
Spare to blame and fear to cavil,
With short leave dismiss your pain,
Let no fretful fancies revel
In the sanctum of your brain.
Use no magnifying-glasses
To change molehills into mountains,
Nor on every ill that passes
Poor hot tears from bitter fountains.
Trust in God and know your duty;
Some good things are in your power;
Every day will bring its booty
From the labor of the hour.
Never reck what fools are prating,
Work and wait, let sorrow lie;
"Love and love; have done with hating,"
Goethe says — and so say I.

DO SOMETHING.
If the world seems cool to you,
Kindle fires to warm it;
Let their comfort hide from you
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to mean,
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"
THE HUMBLER POETS.

If the world's a "vale of tears,"
Smile till rainbows span it;
Breathe the love that life endears—
Clear from clouds to sun it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark sorrow's stream
Blends with hope's bright river.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

There's many a rest on the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it.
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Nor an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, the peal of gongs,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jewelled crown
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or the mother's prayer to Heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate silver threads
Of our curious lives asunder.
And then Heav'n blame for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

MAXIMUS.

I hold him great who for love's sake
Can give with generous, earnest will;
Yet he who takes for love's sweet sake,
I think I hold more generous still.

I bow before the noble mind
That freely some great wrong forgives;
Yet soldier is the one forgiven,
Who bears that burden well and lives.

It may be hard to gain and still
To keep a lowly, steadfast heart;
Yet he who loves has to fill
A harder and a truer part.

Glorious it is to wear the crown
Of a deserved and pure success;
He who knows how to fail has won
A crown whose lustre is no less.

Great may he be who can command
And rule with just and tender sway;
Yet is diviner wisdom taught
Better by him who can obey.

Blessed are those who die for God,
And earn the martyr's crown of light;
Yet he who lives for God may be
A greater conqueror in his sight.

THE GREEN GRASS UNDER THE SNOW.

The work of the sun is slow,
But as sure as heaven, we know;
So we'll not forget,
When the skies are wet,
There's green grass under the snow.

When the winds of winter blow,
Waiting like voices of woe,
There are April showers,
And buds and flowers,
And green grass under the snow.
RAIN IN THE HEART.

"Into each life some rain must fall."

If this were all — oh! if this were all,
That into each life some rain must fall,
There were fewer sobs in the poet's rhyme;
There were fewer wrecks on the shores of time.

But tempests of woe dash over the soul —
Since winds of anguish we cannot control;
And shock after shock are called to bear,
Till the lips are white with the heart's despair.

The shores of time with wrecks are strewn,
Unto the ear comes ever a mon —
Wrecks of hope that sea sail with glee,
Wrecks of love fading silently.

Many are hid from the human eye;
Only God knoweth how deep they lie;
Only God heard when arose the prayer,
"Help me to bear — oh! help me to bear."

"Into each life some rain must fall."

If this were all — oh! if this were all;
Yet there's a refuge from storm and blast —
Gloria Patri — we'll reach at last.

Be strong, be strong, to my heart I cry,
The pearl in the wounded shell did lie;
Days of sunshine are given to all,
Though "into each life some rain must fall."

"GIVE THANKS FOR WHAT?"

"Let earth give thanks," the deacon said,
And then the Proclamation read.

"Give thanks for what, an' what about?" asked Simon Soggs when church was out;
"Give thanks for what? I don't see why,
The rain got in an' splashed my eye,

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT. 257

And hay wasn't half a crop, and corn
All wilted down and looked forlorn.
The bugs just gobbled up my pertaters
The what you call 'em — liecaters.
And gracious! when you come to wheat,
There's more than all the world can eat;
Unless a war should interfere,
Crops won't bring half a price this year;
I'llhev to give 'em away, I reckon!"

"Good for the poor!" exclaimed the deacon.

"Give thanks for what?" asked Simon Soggs:
"Fer th' freshest carryin' off my logs?
Fer Dobbins goin' blind? Fer five
Uv my best cows, that was alive
Afore the smashin' railroad come
And made it awful troublesome?
Fer that haystack the lightnin' struck
And burnt to ashes — thunderin' luck! —
Fer ten dead sheep!" sighed Simon Soggs.

The deacon said, "You've got yer hogs!"

"Give thanks? And Jane and baby sick?
I'm most wonder if Ole Nick
Ain't running things!"

The deacon said,
"Simon, your people might be dead!"

"Give thanks!" said Simon Soggs again.
"Jest look at what a fix we're in!" the country's rushin' to the dogs
At race-horse speed!" said Simon Soggs.
"Rotten all through, In every State;
Why, if we don't repudiate,
We'll have to build, for big and small,
A po'house that'll hold us all!
Down South the crooked whiskey-still
Is running like the Devil's mill.
The nigger slays in night's disguise,
And stooks a chicken as he flee.
Up North there's murder everywhere,
And awful doings, I declare.
Give thanks? How mad it makes me feel
To think how office-holders steal!
The taxes paid by you and me
Is four times bigger 'n they should be.
The Federal Government's all asker;
The ballot's sech a mockery, too!
Some votes too little, some too much,
Some not at all — it beats the Dutch!
The Humbler Poets.

COMPENSATION.

Suz folded up the worn and mended frock,
And smoothed it tenderly upon her knee,
Then through the soft web of a wee red sock
She wove the bright wool, musing thoughtfully:
"Can this be all? The outside world so fair,
I hunger for its green and pleasant ways;
A cripple penned in her restless chair.
Looks from her window with a wistful gaze.

"The fruits I cannot reach are red and sweet,
The paths forbidden are both green and wide;
O God! there is no boon to helpless feet.
So altogether sweet as paths denied.
Home is most fair; bright all my household fires,
And children are a gift without alloy;
But who would bound the field of their desires
By the prim hedges of mere fireside joy?

"I can but weave a faint thread to and fro,
Making a frail woof in my baby's sock;
Into the world's sweet tumult I would go,
At its strong gates my trembling hand would knock."
Just then the children came, the father too;
Their eager faces lit the twilight gloom;
"Dear heart," he whispered, as he nearer drew,
"How sweet it is within this little room!

"God puts my strongest comfort here to draw
When thirst is great and common wells are dry.
Your pure desire is my unerring law,
Tell me, dear one, who is so safe as I?
Home is the pasture where my soul may feed,
This room a paradise has grown to be;
And only where these patient feet shall lead
Can it be home to these dear ones and me."

He touched with reverent hand the helpless feet,
The children crowded close and kissed her hair.
"Our mother is so good, and kind, and sweet,
There's not another like her anywhere!"
The baby in her low bed opened wide.
The soft blue flowers of her timid eyes,
And viewed the group about the cradle-side
With smiles of glad and innocent surprise.

The mother drew the baby to her knee
And, smiling, said: "The stars shine soft tonight;
My world is fair; its edges sweet to me,
And whatsoever is, dear Lord, is right."

The Saddest Fate.

To touch a broken lute,
To strike a jangled string,
To strive with tones forever mute
The dear old tunes to sing —
What sadder fate could any heart befall?
Alas! dear child, never to sing at all.

To sigh for pleasures flown,
To weep for withered flowers,
To count the blessings we have known,
Lost with the vanished hours
What sadder fate could any heart befall?
Alas! dear child, ne'er to have known them all.

To dream of love and rest,
To know the dream has past,
To bear within an aching breast
Only a void at last —
What sadder fate could any heart befall?
Alas! dear child, ne'er to have loved at all.

To trust an unknown good,
To hope, but all in vain,
Over a far-off bliss to brood,
Only to find it pain —
What sadder fate could any soul befall?
Alas! dear child, never to hope at all.
RIGHT AND WRONG.

Alas! how hardly things go right!
'Tis hard to watch on a summer's night;
For the sigh will come, and the kiss will stay,
And the summer's night is a winter's day.

Alas! how easily things go wrong!
A sigh too much or a kiss too long,
And there comes a mist and a weeping rain,
And life is never the same again.

And yet how easily things go right,
If the sigh and the kiss of the summer's night
Come deep from the soul in the stronger ray
That is born in the light of the winter's day.

And things can never go badly wrong
If the heart be true and the love be strong;
For the mist, if it comes, and the weeping rain,
Will be changed by the love into sunshine again.

WHAT OF THAT?

Tired! Well, what of that?
Didst fondly dream the sun would never set?
Dost fear to lose thy way? Take courage yet;
Learn them to walk by faith, and not by sight;
Thy steps will guided be, and guided right.

Hard! Well, and what of that?
Didst fancy life one summer holiday,
With lessons none to learn, and night but play?
Go, get thee to thy task! Compose or die!
It must be learned! Learn it then patiently.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

No help! Nay, it's not so!
Though human help be far, thy God is nigh,
Who feeds the ravens, hears his children's cry.
He's near thee, wherefore in thy footsteps roam,
And he will guide thee, light thee, help thee home.

"BIDE A WEE, AND DINNA FRET."

Is the road very dreary?
Patience yet!
Rest will be sweeter if thou art awearry,
And after the night cometh the morning cheery;
Then bide a wee, and dinna fret.

The clouds have silver lining,
Don't forget;
And though he's hidden, still the sun is shining.
Courage! instead of tears in vain repeating,
Just bide a wee, and dinna fret.

With toll and cares unending
Art heart?
Bethink thee how the storms from heaven descending
Snap the stiff oak, but spare the willow bending,
And bide a wee, and dinna fret.

Grief sharper still doth borrow
From regret;
But yesterday is gone, and shall its sorrow
Unfit us for the present and to-morrow?
Nay; bide a wee, and dinna fret.

An over-anxious brooding
Doth begot
A host of fears and fantasies deluding;
Then, brother, lest the torrents be intruding,
Just bide a wee, and dinna fret.

Leisure Hour.

Work.

In some great angel spoke to me to-night,
In awful language of the unknown land,
Bidding me choose from treasure infinite,
From goodly gifts and glories in his hand,
THE HUMBLER POETS.

The thing I coveted, what should I take?
Fame’s wreath of bays? The fickle world’s esteem?
Nay, greenest bays may wave on brows that ache,
And world’s applauding possess as a dream.
Should I choose love to fill my empty heart?
With soft, strong sweetness, as in days of old?
Nay, for love’s rapture hath an after smart.
And on love’s rose the thorns are manifold.
Should I choose life with long succeeding years?
Nay, earth’s long life is longer time for tears.
I would choose work, and never-failing power,
To work without weak hindrance by the way,
Without recurrence of the weary hour.
When tired tyrant Nature holds its sway
Over the busy brain and toiling hand.
Ah! if an angel came to me to-night,
Speaking in language of the unknown land,
So would I choose from treasures infinite.
But well I know the blessed gift I crave,
The tireless strength for never-ending task,
Is not for this life. But beyond the grave
It may be I shall find the thing I ask;
For I believe there is a better land,
Where will and work and strength go hand in hand.

All the Year Round.

THE HARDEST TIME OF ALL.

There are days of silent sorrow
In the seasons of our life;
There are wild, despairing moments,
There are hours of mental strife;
There are times of stony anguish,
When the tears refuse to fall;
But the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

Youth and love are oft impatient,
Seeking things beyond their reach;
But the heart grows sick of hoping
Ere it learns what life can teach;
For before the fruit be gathered
We must see the blossoms fall;
And the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

We can bear the heat of conflict,
Though the sudden, crushing blow,
Beating back our gathered forces,
For a moment lay us low;

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

We may rise again beneath it
None the weaker for the fall;
But the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

For it wears the eager spirit.
As the salt waves wear the stone,
And the garb of hope grows threadbare
Till the brightest tints are flown;
Then amid youth’s radiant tresses
Silent snows begin to fall;
Oh! the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

But at last we learn the lesson
That God knoweth what is best;
For with wisdom cometh patience,
And with patience cometh rest.
Yes, a golden thread is shining
Through the tangled web of fate;
And our hearts shall thank him meekly,
That he taught us how to wait.

SARAH DOUDNEY CLARK.

AS PEBBLES IN THE SEA.

Who shall judge man from his manner,
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for palaces,
Princes fit for nothing else.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May becothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vest can do no more.

There are streams of crystal nectar
Ever flowing out of stone;
There are purple beds and golden
Hidden, crushed, and overthrown;
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man upraised above his fellows
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters—rulers—lords, remember
That your minuter kind are men!
Men of labor, men of feeling,
Men of thought and men of fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine
In a man’s ennobling name.
There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little wood-clad rills;
There are feeble inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills.

God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prosper you and me;
For to him all vague distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Tolling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifts its feeble voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny light!

God, whose world-wide voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression, with its tides,
But as pebbles in the sea.

FALSE AND TRUE.

We grasp a hand, we think it true and strong,
We look in eyes where love-light seems to play;
The light within the eyes gleams to betray.

We feel a heart beat near our own, close pressed,
We think it echoes back love's secret love,
But find't is but a fool — within the breast —
Of curious mechanism, nothing more.

We listen to soft tones from lips which seem
Too regal even a foe's name to belic;
We drink their freshness, and we fondly dream
That nought can mar our soul's sweet harmony.

E'en as we dream — forth from the heart's fair gate
Issue barred words which pierce us through and through:
Whilst we, bewildered, find, even though too late,
This seal of royalty is earthly too.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT; CONTENTMENT.

We place our heart's best treasure, trustingly,
In the safe keeping of a thing of clay;
The trust is broken. Though we do not die,
Our faith in human love shows slow decay.

We tread the earth to find, where'er we roam,
Lips fair but subtle, heart-beats quick but cold;
Lightnings in eyes which only seem love's home,
And treachery even in the hand we hold.

But is this all of friendship, love? Ah, no!
These well-wrought counterfeits from Satan's hand
To me conclusive evidence do show
That the pure coin is still in good demand.

And if we seal our hearts, rolling the stone
Of cold distrust firmly against the door,
The whitest angel near love's pearly throne
Can roll that stone away, ah! nevermore.

So, after all, 'tis better that we err
In loving overmuch, though oft deceived,
Than make our heart a sealed sepulchre
From which the angel turns away aggrieved.

PATIENT.

I was not patient in that olden time
When my unchastened heart began to long
For bliss that lay beyond its reach; my prime
Was wild, impulsive, passionate, and strong.

I could not wait for happiness and love,
Heaven-sent, to come and nestle in my breast;
I could not realize that time might prove
That patient waiting would avail me less.

I let me be happy now,' my heart cried out,
In mine own way, and with my chosen lot;
The future is too dark and full of doubt
For me to tarry, and I trust it not.

Take all my blessings, all I am and have,
But give that glimpse of heaven before the grave.'

"Ah me!" God heard my wayward, selfish cry,
And, taking pity on my blinded heart,
He bade the angel of strong grief draw nigh,
Who pierced my bosom in its tenderest part.

I drank wrath's wine-cup to the bitter lees,
With strong amazement and a broken will;
Then, humbled, straightway fell upon my knees,
And God doth know my heart is kneeling still;
I have grown patient, seeking not to choose.
Mine own blind lot, but take that God shall send,
In which, if what I long for I should lose,
I know the loss will work some blessed end,—
Some better fate for mine and me than I
Could ever compass underneath the sky.

---

CONTENTMENT.

He that holds fast the golden mean,
And lives contentedly between
The little and the great,
Feels not the wants that pinch the poor,
Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door,
Emblazing all his state.

---

BEYOND THE HAZE.

A Winter Ramble Reverie.

The road was straight, the afternoon was gray,
The frost hung listening in the silent air;
On either hand the rinky fields were bare;
Beneath my feet rolled out the long white way,
Drear as my heart, and brightened by no ray.

From the wide winter sun, whose disk reclined
In distant, copper solemnness, behind
The broken network of the western hedge—
A crimson blot upon the fading day.

Three travellers went before me,—one alone,
Then two together, who their fingers nursed
Deep in their pockets, and I watched the first
Lapse in the curtain the slow haze had thrown
Across the vista which had been my own;
Next vanished the chill comrades, blotted out
Like him they followed; but I did not doubt
That there beyond the haze the travellers
Walked in the fashion that my sight had known.

Only "beyond the haze;" oh, sweet belief!
That this is also death; that those we kissed
Between our sobs are just "beyond the mist;"
An easy thought to juggle with to grief!

The gulf seems measureless, and Death a thief.
Can we, who were so high and are so low,
So cloathed in love, who now in tatters go,
Echo serenely, "Just beyond the haze,"
And of a sudden find a trite relief?

Cornhill Magazine.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT. 267

CONTENT.

My heart and I but lately were at strife.
She felt a long-ing for a certain thing
The which I could not give her, and my life
Grew sick and weary with her clamoring.

God knows I would have given my youth's wide scope
To buy my heart but one brief, blessed day
Of the blind bliss she coveted; but hope,
When I appealed to it, turned, dumb, away.

Until hope failed, I did not chide my heart,
But was full tender to her misery,—
I knew how hard and bitter was her part;
But when she saw that good was not for me,
I felt that time and tears were vainly spent;
"Heart," said I, "hope is silent; be content."

Poor heart! She fiscened, earnest, humble-wise,
While my good angel gave her counsel strong,
Then from the dust and ashes did arise,
And through her trembling lips broke forth a song;
A soothing song, that grew into a strain
Of praise for bliss denied as well as given:
She sang it then to charm a lingering pain,
She sings it now for gladness, morn and even.
She sings it, seeing on life's garden wall
Love's deep red roses in the sunshine stir,
And singing, pause, crying not at all,
Content to feel that love is not for her.
The roses are another's, bloom and scent,
My heart and I have "heart's-ease"—and content.

---

CONTENTMENT.

This banks are all a bustin', Nancy, an' things is goin' to smash;
The people sold fur credit what they'd oughter sell fur cash,
An' winter's brings' poverty to everybody's door;
The rich can stand it pretty well—lil's orful on the poor.

The workin'man's the sufferer, Nancy, he's got no work to do
An' folks are goin' to suffer what sufferin' never knew;
An' them that's always "showin' off" to poor folks what they've got,
You'll find, perhaps, that they'll turn out the poorest of the lot.

I've just been thinkin', Nancy Jane, about the awful muss
How folks had better live an' raise that children jist like us;
For as I told old Deacon Smith, he seed it all was true:
He never in his life had seed two folks like me an' you.
Our home's an old log cabin, Nance, half hidden in the woods;
Our family's rich in life an' health, but poor in this "world's goods."
We haven't fine lace curtains, or no carpet on the floor;
But the sun is always shinin' through the window an' the door.
Our farm is small—we've got a spring, an' horses, hogs, an' cows;
We've gals to milk, an' cook, an' sew, an' boys to tend the ploughs,
We've got no gold in banks that burst, nor owe no man a cent;
I tell you, Nance, the Lord is good, an' we should feel content.

We're plain an' honest country folks, an' know no "city airs;"
We read the Bible every night before we kneel in prayers;
We go to church on Sunday, Nance, an' walk just like the rest,
An' live like Christian people ought—we try to do what's best.

Our boys are not like city boys, who from their duty shirk,
Whose parents raise 'em up to think 'tis a disgrace to work;
Oar gals ain't like them city gals you will so often meet,
Who ought to help their mothers more, an' run less on the street.

You don't see Thomas Henry pushin' billiards every night,
Or losin' 'bout the tavern gittin' treated till he's tight;
You don't find him a runnin' round to catch some damsel's eye,
Or courtin' of some gal that's rich, whose daddy's about to die.

Ah, Nance, the time has come at last when pride must have a fall,
The folks will find the workin' man's the life an' prop of all;
The farmer's independent, Nance, his trade will never spoil
So long as he is able with his sons to till the soil.

The proud aristocratic folks, who sit in fortune's door,
Who thought they'd never come to want, are busted up an' poor;
Their servants gone, their horses sold, their houses an' their lands,
An' everything, except their lives, is in the sheriff's hands.

Old woman, put your knittin' up; it's gittin' perty late,
I'll read about two chapters in the Bible if you'll wait;
We'll pray to God before we sleep, as every Christian ought;
An' think him not for what we want, but what we've had an' got.

THE WORLD AND I.

Whether my heart be glad or no,
The summers come, the summers go,
The lasses grow dark with dying leaves,
Tresses hang beneath the eaves,
The aster wither to the snow;
Thus doth the summer end and go,
Whether my life be glad or no.

— Will S. Havens.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

Whether my life be sad or no,
The winters come, the winters go,
The sunshine plays with lathy leaves,
Swallows build about the eaves,
The lovely wild flowers bend and blow;
Thus doth the winter end and go,
Whether my life be sad or no.

Yet Mother Nature gives to me
A fond and patient sympathy;
In my own heart I find the charm
To make her tender, near, and warm;
Through summer sunshine, winter snow,
She clasps me, sad or glad or no.

SATISFIED.

Where moss-made beds are brightest by the river,
And crackled round with wondrous-woven vines,
I lie and watch the water-lilies quiver;
In the soft shadow of the haunted pines,—
Lie, as in dreams, amidst the languid laughter
Of waves at play upon the harbor bar,
And hear the sound of wings that follow after
The wind who knowseth where the birdnestis are.

So sweet the hour, I cannot well remember
If care has been, or wearying toil or pain,
Or life worn leaning to a drear December,
Or vision tortured by a teary rain;
The eyes of sorrow have been kissed to sleeping
By lips where many a tender mystery hides,
Like music in the merry waters, keeping
My feet from climbing up the mountain sides.

Upon my book uncreed a bee sits sipping
Wild honey from the fragrant wild-rose mark,
And, listening, I can hear the dipping, dipping
Of light airs piloting a home-bound bark.
A new life flows through all the aisles of being;
I seem a pulsing portion of the haze
That floats and floats where maidens sing softerly, seeing
The dawn of heaven's own Indian summer days.

And once again, oh, once again is lying
Upon my heart a dainty, dimpled cheek,
For whose young bloom my lips were ever crying
In the old time of which I cannot speak.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

One little word—the first that babies mangle—
I hear, and flash with mother-love and pride,
Feeling my fingers in a golden tangle
Of locks long longed for—and am satisfied.

Home journal.

HESTER A. BENEDICT.

RETROSPECTION.

I note this morning how the sunshine falleth,
Just as it fell one morning long ago;
A white dove walks the window-ledge, soft cooing;
The waters murmur in their ebb and flow.
The aspen whispers to the autumn breezes,
I see the goldenwood on sloping hills;
I catch the odors of the brown leaves dying,
And hear the babble of the shrunken rills.

I listen to some notes of children’s laughter,
Smiling to think how late I was a child—
A happy elf with checks of sun-kissed crimson,
And curls of tawny gold, wind-tossed and wild.

The very winds stir memories with their wailing,
The very clouds that dot the azure sky,
The heliotrope within my window blooming,
Even the swallow swiftly skimming by.

On a dead oak that lifts its leafless branches
A raven sits, and crows with fretful tone,
Like some old prophet who with mystic lore foresees
The evil that he sees with sob and moan.

A sense of pain, half hidden, half defined,
Stirs in my heart an unloosed babe of sorrow
Whose birth, unwelcome and unasked, with wail
Shall usher in a darker, sadder morrow.

And I shall meet it as I meet the day departed,
With pride unbending and an iron will,
That holds me steadfast in the path I chose, but hated,
Yet hating, love, and loving, loathe it still.

I see and hear; I know I am not dreaming;
And still somehow I cannot make it seem
But that I sleep, and hear and see things dimly,
As one does often in a troubled dream.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

Ah, well! what matter, since so soon for all
Our struggles and our dreams will have an ending,
And our tired hearts and brains shall rest for aye
In that best land to which our feet are tending?

—GARNET B. FREEMAN.

GOING SOFTLY.

She makes no moon above her faded flowers,
She will not vainly strive against her lot,
Patient she bears away the slow, sad hours,
As if the ray they had were quite forgot;
While stronger fingers snatch away the sword,
And lighter footsteps pass her on the ways,
Yielding submissive to the stern award
That said she must go softly all her days.

She knows the pulse is beating quickly yet,
She knows the dream is sweet and subtle still,
That, struggling from the cloud of past regret,
Ready for conflict, like Hope, Joy, and Will;
So soon, so soon to veil the eager eyes,
To dull the throbbing ear to blame or praise,
So soon to crush re-awakening sympathies,
And teach them she goes softly all her days.

She will not speak or move beneath the doon,
She knows she had her day and flung her cast,
The loser scarce the laurel may assume,
Nor evening think the noonday glow can last.
Only, oh youth and love, as in your pride,
Of joyous triumph your gay notes you raise,
Throw one kind glance and word, where, at your side,
She creeps, who must go softly all her days.

“EN VOYAGE.”

Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then, blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
What blows for one a favoring breeze
Might dash another with the shock
Of doom upon some hidden rock.
The Humbler Poets:

And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft me on my way,
But leave it to a higher Will
To stay or speed me, trusting still
That all is well, and sure that He
Who launched my bark will sail with me.
Through storm and calm, and will not fail.
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me, every peril past.
Within the sheltered haven at last.
Then, whatsoever wind doth blow,
My heart is glad to have it so;
And, blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

Caroline A. Mason.

What House to Like.

Some love the glow of outward show,
Some love mere wealth and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
If I but like the people in it.
What's all the gold that glitters cold,
When linked to hard or haughty feeling?
What'er we're told, the noble gold
Is truth of heart and manly dealing.
Then let them seek, whose minds are weak,
Mere fashion's smile and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
If I but like the people in it.

A lowly roof may give us proof
That lowly flowers are often fairest;
And trees whose bark is hard and dark
May yield us fruit and bloom the rarest.
There's worth as sure as reed garments poor
As e'er adorned a lovelier station;
And minds as just as those, we trust.
Whose claim is but of wealth's creation.
Then let them seek, whose minds are weak,
Mere fashion's smile, and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
If I but like the people in it.

Tired Out.

He does well who does his best;
Is he weary? let him rest.
Brothers! I have done my best,
I am weary — let me rest.

HOPE, ENCOURAGEMENT, CONTENTMENT.

After toiling oft in vain,
Baffled, yet to struggle vain,
After toiling long, to gain
Little good with mingle pain.
Let me rest. But lay me low
Where the hedge-side roses blow,
Where the little daisies grow,
Where the winds a-maying go,
Where the footsteps rustic plod,
Where the breeze-bowed poplars nod,
Where the old woods worship God,
Where his pencil paints the sod,
Where the woful throstle sings,
Where the young bird tries his wings,
Where the waiting plover swings,
Near the rustic's rushing springs!
Where, at times, the tempests roar,
Shaking distant sea and shore,
Still will rave old Barnesdale o'er,
To be heard by me no more!
There, beneath the breezy west,
Tired and thankful, let me rest,
Like a child that sleeps and best,
On its mother's gentle breast.
PART X.

Life, Religion, and Death’s Mystery.
PART X.

Life, Religion, and Death's Mystery.

WHAT IS LIFE?

What is life?
'Tis a beautiful shell
Thrown up by eternity's flow
On time's bank of quicksands to dwell,
And a moment its loneliness show;
Gone back to its element grand
Is the bellow that washed it ashore.
See! another now washes the strand!
And the beautiful shell is no more.

MY AIM.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the heavens that bend above me,
And the good that I can do;
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrongs that lack resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

THOMAS GUTHRIE

THE BRIDGE OF LIFE.

Across the rapid stream of seventy years
The slender bridge of human life is thrown;
The past and future form its mouldering piers,
The present moment is its frail keystone.
From "dust thou art," the arch begins to rise,
"To dust" the fashion of its form descends,
"Shall thou return," the higher curve implies,
In which the first to the last lowness beeds.

Seen by youth's magic light upon that arch,
How lovely does each far-off scene appear!
But ah! how changed when on the onward march
Our weary footsteps bring the vision near!

'T was fabled that beneath the rainbow's foot
A treasure lay, the dreamer to bewitch;
And many wasted in the vain pursuit
The golden years that would have made them rich.

So where life's arch of many colors leads,
The heart expects rich wealth of joy to find;
But in the distance the bright hope recedes,
And leaves a cold, gray waste of care behind.

A sunlit stream upon its bosom takes
The inverted shadow of a bridge on high.
And thus the arch in air and water makes
One perfect circle to the gazer's eye.

So 'tis with life; the things that do appear
Are fleeting shadows on time's passing tide,
Crest by the sunshine of a larger sphere
From viewless things that changelessly abide.

The real is but the half of life; it needs
The ideal to make a perfect whole;
The sphere of sense is incomplete, and pleads
For closer union with the sphere of soul.

All things of use are bridges that conduct
To things of faith, which give them truest worth;
And Christ's own parables do us instruct
That heaven is but a counterpart of earth.

The pler that rests upon this shore's the same
As that which stands upon the farther bank;
And fitness for our duties here will frame
A fitness for the joys of higher rank.

Oh! dark were life without heaven's sun to show
The likeness of the other world in this;
And bare and poor would be our lot below
Without the shadow of a world of bliss.

Then let us, passing o'er life's fragile arch,
Regard it as a means, and not an end;
As but the path of faith on which we march
To where all glories of our being tend.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Alike the river's lordly tide,
Alike the humble rivulet's glide,
To that sad wave;
Death leveles poverty and pride,
And rich and poor sleep side by side
Within the grave.
Our birth is but the starting-place,
Life is the running of the race,
And death the goal;
There all those glittering toys are brought:
The path alone of all unsought
Is found of all.
Say, then, how poor and little worth
Are all those glittering toys of earth
That lure us here!
Dreams of a sleep that death must break:
Alas! before it bids us wake,
Ye disappear!

Edinburgh Review.

NOTE.—Compare with Longfellow's translation of 'Coplas de Manrique'
by Don Jorge Manrique.

THROUGH LIFE.

We slight the gifts that every season bears,
And let them fall unheeded from our grasp,
In our great eagerness to reach and clasp
The promised treasure of the coming years;
Or else we mourn some great good passed away,
And, in the shadow of our grief shut in,
Refuse the lesser good we yet might win,
The offered peace and gladness of to-day.
So through the chambers of our life we pass,
And leave them one by one and never stay,
Not knowing how much pleasantness there was
In each, until the closing of the door
Has sounded through the house and died away,
And in our hearts we sigh, "Forevermore!"

Chamber's Journal.

A CHARACTER AND A QUESTION.

A curious, strange, uncomprehended life,
A roll of riddles with no answer found;
A sea-like soul which plumes cannot sound,
Torn with belligerent winds at mutual strife.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

The god in him hath taken unto wife
A daughter of the pit, and, strongly bound,
In coils of snake-like hair about him wound,
Dies, straining hard to raise the severing knife.
For such a sunken soul, what room in heaven?
For such a soaring soul, what place in hell?
Can those desires be damned, those doings shivered,
Or in some lone mid-region must he dwell
Forever?—Lo! God siteth with the seven
Stars in his hand, and shall not he judge well?

The Spectator.

WITH THE TIDE.

Wave by wave o'er the sandy bar,
Up to the coast lights, glimmering wan,
Out of the darkness deep and far,
Slowly the tide came creeping on.
Through the clamor of billowy strife
Another voice went wailing thin;
The first faint cry of a new-born life
Broke on the night—and the tide was in.

Wave by wave o'er the sandy bar,
Back again from the sleeping town,
Back to the darkness deep and far,
Slowly the tide went dropping down.
Silence lay on the chamber of death;
Silence lay on the land about;
The last low flutter of weary breath
Fell on the night—and the tide was out.

TWO PICTURES.

Somebody's heart is gay,
And somebody's heart is sad;
For lights shine out across the way,
And a door with eave is clad.
Sadness and gladness alike
Are dwelling side by side.
Perhaps the death of an early one,
And the crowning of a bride.

Bright eyes are filled with mirth,
Fate faces head in prayer,
And hearts beside the household hearth
Are crushed by stout despair;
Ah, sorrow and hope and joy
Are parted by thinnest walls;
But on the hearts of the thoughtless ones
No shadow of sorrow falls!

No thoughts of the funeral train
Come to the festive throng:
No hopes that the past will come again
To the anguished hearts belong;
The future's a stormy sea
To the lovers of joy and mirth;
But the past alone to those who weep
For the sullied tides of earth.

Somebody's heart is gay,
And somebody's heart is sad;
For the lights are bright across the way,
And a door with a crash is clad.

Sadness and gladness alike
Confront us on every side;
A wealth of smiles and a flood of tears.
With hope and sorrow allied!

WHY IS IT SO?

Some find work where some find rest,
And so the weary world goes on;
I sometimes wonder which is best:
The answer comes when life is gone.

Some eyes sleep where some eyes wake,
And so the dreamy night hours go;
Some hearts beat where some hearts break:
I often wonder why 'tis so.

Some wills faint where some wills fight,—
Some love the tent and some the field;
I often wonder who are right,
The ones who strive or the ones who yield.

Some hands fold where other hands
Are lifted bravely in the strife;
And so through ages and through hands
Move on the two extremes of life.

Some feet halt where some feet tread
In tireless march a thorny way;
Some struggle on where some have fled;
Some seek where others shun the fray.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

Some swords rust where others clash,
Some fall back where others move on,
Some flags fall where others flash,
Until the battle has been won.

Some sleep on while others keep
The vigils of the true and brave;
They will not rest till roses creep
Around their names above a grave.

WHAT HAVE I DONE?

I lay my finger on Time's wrist to score
The forward-surging moments as they roll;
Each pulse seems quicker than the one before;
And lo! my days pile up against my soul
As clouds pile up against the golden sun;
Alas! What have I done? What have I done?
I never steep the rosy hours in sleep,
Or hide my soul, as in a gloomy crypt;
No idle hands into my bosom creep;
And yet, as water-drops from house-eaves drip,
So, views, melt my days, and from me run;
Alas! What have I done? What have I done?
I have not missed the fragrance of the flowers,
Or scorned the music of the flowing rills,
Whose numerous liquid tongues sing to the hours;
Yet rise my days behind me, like the hills,
Unstarred by light of mighty triumphs won;
Alas! What have I done? What have I done?
Be still, my soul; restrain thy lips from woe!
Cease thy lament! for life is but the flower;
The fruit comes after death; how canst thou know
The roundness of its form, its depth of power?
Death is life's morning. When thy work's begun,
Then ask thyself—What yet is to be done?

LILIAN BLANCHE FEARING.

LIFE.

(A LITERARY CURiosity.)

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
Life's a short summer—man is but a flower.
By turns we catch the fatal breath and die;
The cradle and the tomb, alas! how nigh!—

[Young.
[Dr. Johnson.
[ Pope.
[ Prior.
To be better far than not to be,
Though all man's life may seem a tragedy;
But light cares speak, when mighty griefs are dumb —
The bottom is but shallow whence they come.

Thy fate is the common fate of all;
Unmingled joys here no man batall;
Nature to each allot's his proper sphere.
Fortune makes folly her peculiar care.
Custom does often reason override,
And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool.
Live well; how long or short permit to Heaven.
They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face —
Vile intercourse where virtue has no place;
Then keep each passion down, however dear,
Thou pendulum bewirks a smile and tear.
Her sensual amuse let faithless pleasure lay,
With craft and skill to ruin and betray;
Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise;
We masters grow of all that we despise.
Oh, then, renounce that impious self-esteem,
Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream.
Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave,

The paths of glory lead but to the grave;
What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat,
Only destructive to the brave and great.
What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown?
The way to bliss lies not on beds of down.
How long we live, not years, but actions tell;
That man lives twice who lives the first life well.
Make, then, while yet ye may, your God your friend.

Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend.
The trust that's given guard, and to yourself be just.
For live we how we may, yet die we must.

MRS. H. A. DEMING.

---

SHADOWS.

SOMETIMES I smile, sometimes I sigh,
But mostly sorrow fills my heart;
The present and the future lie,
Like two grim shadows, just apart.
I change as often as the clouds,
That on a guilty morning run
In cold and sad and solemn crowds
To bar and blind the faithful sun.

---

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

Why come these thoughts in baleful forms
To darken life's too fleeting hours,
Even as the summer's sullen storms
That sob their gloom away in showers?
I cannot smile as others smile,
Nor yet be merry half so long;
For sorrow fills me even while
I yearn to sing a joyous song.
The knowledge that my youth is gone
Broods ever darkly on the mind;
I look, as some poor hapless one,
For what he needs but cannot find.
I long in vain for peace or rest,
And mourn each lost and faded scene,
Like some poor bird that finds his nest
All vacant where its young had been.
Pain waits on pleasure evermore,
To blanch its blush, to dim its light;
To mock it when its dreams are o'er,
When all its charms have taken flight.
And thus it is we cannot sing,
Or long be joyous, when we're old;
When summer hours have taken wing.
The flowers must perish in the cold.

AT THE LOOM.

She stood at the clumsy loom,
And wove with a careless song;
For her task would soon be done
And the day was bright and long.
So she worked at her pattern, roses red
And trailing vines; but she thought instead
Where the swarming bees in the distant wood,
And of pleasant shade where the old oak stood.
She stood at the stately loom,
And wove with a girlish grace;
And her eyes grew tender and sweet
As she wove in the web apace.
Strong men mounted with lance and spear.
Then a chase with hounds and a frightened deer;
But she thought the while of her lover knight,
And whispered softly, "He comes to-night."
She stood at the tireless loom,
And wove with a steady hand;
And a watchful eye on the twain
Without, at play in the sand.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Stripes of warm, dark colors she wrought,
And every thread with a hope was fraught;
Some day, she thought, my lad will be great,
And my bonnie lass a nobleman's mate.

She stood at the bystry loom,
Best, and wrinkle, and old,
But the shuttle she feebly plied
Dropped from her careless hold.
"Ah, well! whom have I to work for now?"
The old dame said, with shaded brow,
"But I've seen the time when I worked with the best;"
And she dropped her chin on her wrinkled breast.

At a silent, invisible loom,
Always, morning and night,
With tender care wrought one
Who was hidden from human sight.
Tangled and broken threads wrought he,
And his finished web was fair to see;
For he gathered the hopes that were broken in twain,
And wrought them into his web again.

Public Opinion.

? —

This mortal body that I wear
Will soon return to whence it came,
Resolved into the earth and air
By foul decay or purer flame.
The elements again will take
The atoms that they have bestowed,
And give them in their turn to make
Some other thinking soul's abode.

To die — is it another birth?
Or is it but an endless swoon?
Will we still roam the plains of earth,
or climb the mountains of the moon?
Will memory still retain its hold
Upon the sad and sunny past, or in the eternal future's mould
Are all the precious metals cast?

Will love and truth and honor live,
And hate and wrong and falsehood die?
Will only grace and beauty give
Their glory to the by and by?

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

Or will the fruits and flowers and weeds
Still rankly flourish side by side,—
The laurels of heroic deeds
Twined with the poisonous vine of pride?
The child I danced upon my knee,
The sunlight hair and heavenly-hued eyes,
Whose laughter filled my heart with glee,
My sweetest joy, my dearest prize,—
The years of grief have reached a term,
Yet still her soft embrace I miss,—
Will she upon the other shore
Welcome me with a spirit-kiss?

My boy grown near to man's estate,
My wife whose smile had blest the years,
Victims of a relentless fate,—
I yielded to the grave with tears.
And like a scared and blasted tree,
Alone I stand where tempests lower;
The joys of earth have fled from me,
But yet I fear the parting hour.

Great Lord of Life, Creative Power.
If thou canst hear thy creatures' call,
Before that dark impending hour
Disclose to me the mighty Art
Unlock the volume sealed so long,
The mystery of death and pain,
The cause and final doom of wrong,
That all the race have sought in vain.

Yet stay; I would not read the book;
Too awful might its secret be
For mortal eyes to rashly look
Upon the dreadful mystery.
Let me grope on through life's dark maze,
And blindly bow before thy will,
That o'er my few remaining days
The light of hope may linger still.

New York Commercial Advertiser. F. A. Le H.

A QUERY.

On the wonder of our life,
Pain and pleasure, rest and strife,
Mystery of mysteries,
Set twist two eternities!
Lo, the moments come and go,
E'en as sparks, and vanish so;
Flash from darkness into light,
Quick as thought are quenched in night.

With an import grand and strange
Are they fraught in ceaseless change
As they pass away; each one
Stands eternally alone.

The scene more fair than words can say,
I gaze upon and go my way;
I turn, another glance to claim —
Something is changed, 'tis not the same.

The purple flush on yonder fell,
The tinkle of that cattle-bell,
Came, and have never come before,
Go, and are gone forevermore.

Our life is held as with a vice,
We cannot do the same thing twice;
Once we may, but not again;
Only memories remain.

What if memories vanish too,
And the past be lost to view;
Is it all for nought that I
Heard and saw and hurried by?

Where are childhood's merry hours,
Bright with sunshine, crossed with showers?
Are they dead, and can they never
Come again to life forever?

No — 'tis false, I surely trow;
Though awhile they vanish now;
Every passion, deed, and thought
Was not born to come to nought!

Will the past then come again,
Rest and pleasure, strife and pain,
All the heaven and all the hell?
Ah, we know not: God can tell.

G O O D W O R D S.

LIFE AND DEATH.

What is the life of man? A passing shade
Upon the changeful mirror of old Time;
A leaf, long ere autumn comes decayed;
A plant or tree that scantily reaches prime;

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

A dew-drop of the morning gone ere noon;
A meteor expiring in its fall;
A blade of grass that springs to wither soon;
A dying taper on a darksome pall;
The foam upon the torrent's whirling wave;
A bird that flutters on a drooping wing;
A shadowy spectre o'er an open grave;
A morning glory's moments in the spring;
A breaking bubble on a rushing stream;
A sunset after storm, an erring angel's dream.

What is this death we fear? The peaceful close
Of stormy life — of reckless passion's sway;
The veil that mantles all our cares and woes;
The heavenly ending of an earthly day;
The crown of time well spent; the portal fair
Which opens the way to never-ending joy;
It sets the captive spirit free as air,
From all the fetters which on earth annoy.
What is this death? The sleep the pilgrim takes
After much weary trave'll he has known,
And whence with renovate power he wakes,
His soul more high for its slumber grown;
The glorious conquest over human ill;
A spirit's joy which death can never kill.

L I V I N G.

We can only live once; and death's terrora
With life's bower and roses curtains,
And our lives would be darkened by errors
Did we even, like cats, possess nine!
They would be, perhaps, all of them wasted,
And recklessly squandered away,
And not half of the joys would be tasted
That one life can embrace in a day.

Let the lives that we live be worth living;
Let the days that we spend be well spent;
Let us save for the pleasure of giving,
And not borrow at fifty per cent;
Let us never cease loving and learning,
And use life for its noblest ends;
Then when dust to its dust is returning,
We shall live in the hearts of our friends.

LONDON FAN.

19
MIDGES IN THE SUNSHINE.

If I could see with a midge's eye,
Or think with a midge's brain,
I wonder what I'd say of the world,
With all its joy and pain.
Would my seven brief hours of mortal life
Seem long as seventy years,
As I danced in the flickering sunshine
Amid my tiny peers?
Should I feel the slightest hope or care
For the midges yet to be;
Or think I died before my time,
If I died at half-past three
Instead of living till set of sun
On the breath of the summer wind;
Or deem that the world was made for me
And all my little kind?
Perhaps if I'd known as much
Of Nature's mighty plan,
And what it meant for good or ill,
As that larger midge, a man!

---

WELCOME GATHER GOLD.

They soon grow old who grope for gold
In marts where all is bought and sold;
Who live for self and on some shelf
In darkened vaults hoard up their self;
Canker'd and crusted o'er with mould—
For them their youth itself is old.

They never grow old who gather gold
Where spring awakes and flowers unfold;
Where suns arise in joyous skies,
And fill the soul within their eyes.
For them the immortal hours have sung;
For them old age itself is young.

---

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The sea crashed over the grim gray rocks,
It thundered beneath the height,
It swept by reef and sandy dune,
It glittered beneath the harvest moon
That bathed it in yellow light.

---

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

Shell and seaweed and sparkling stone
It flung on the golden sand.
Strange relics torn from its deepest caves—
And trophies of wild victorious waves—
It scattered upon the strand.

Spars that had looked so strong and true
When the gallant ship was launched,
Shattered and broken, flung to the shore,
While the tide in its deep, triumphant roar,
Rang the dirge for old wounds long stanch'd.

Pretty trifles that love had brought
From many a foreign clime,
Snatched by the storm from the clinging clasp
Of hands that the lonely will never grasp,
While the world yet counteth time.

Back, back to its depths went the ebbing tide,
Leaving its stores to rest
Unsought and unseen in the silent bay,
To be gathered again, ere close of day,
To the ocean's mighty breast.

Kinder than man art thou, O sea;
Frankly we give our best,—
Truth, and hope, and love, and faith,
Devotion that challenges time and death,—
Its sterling worth to test.

We fling them down at our darling's feet,
Indifference leaves them there;
The careless footstep turns aside,
Wearness, changefulness, scorn, or pride,
Brings little of thought or care.

No tide of human feeling turns;
Once ebbed, love never flows;
The pitiful wreckage of time and strife,
The flotsam and jetsam of human life,
No saving relax knows.

---

BY THE SEA.

Slowly, steadily, under the moon,
Swings the tide in its old-time way;
Never too late and never too soon,
And the evening and morning make up the day.
Slowly, steadily, over the sands,
And over the rocks they fall and flow;
And this wave has touched a dead man's hands,
And that one has seen a face we know.

They have borne the good ship on her way,
Or buried her deep from love and light;
And yet, as they sink at our feet to-day,
Ah, who shall interpret their message right?

For their separate voices of grief and cheer
Are blended at last in one solemn tone;
And only this song of the waves I hear,—
"Forever and ever His will be done!"

Slowly, steadily, and end, end,
Swings our life in its weary way;
Now at its ebb and now at its flow,
And the evening and morning make up the day.

Sorrow and happiness, peace and strife,
Fear and rejoicing, its moments know;
How from the discords of such a life
Can the clear music of heaven flow?

Yet to the ear of God it swells,
And to the blessed round the throne,
Sweter than chime of silver bells,—
"Forever and ever His will be done!"

---

ELIAB ELIEZER.

The Reverend Eliab Eliezer
Sat toasting his shiues by the grate;
His ponderous brain busy museing
On man's most pitiable state.

Abroad the storm-king was raging,
And the snow was fast whitening the ground;
But its fury disturbed not Eliab,
In his reverie so deep and profound.

For he thought how wicked and sinful
Was poor fallen man at the best;
And even Eliab Eliezer
Was almost as bad as the rest!

And he piously groaned in the spirit,
At the flesh which so leads us astray;
"There's nothing that's good," said Eliab,
"In these weak, worthless vessels of clay.

"Yes; man is a poor, sinful creature
Even when he tries to do right;
But when he does not, and to ruin
Willing rashes, how dreadful the sight!

"Now, there's a swearing Meg, at the corner,
Her case shows plainly, I think.
How wicked our natural hearts are—
How much lower than brutes we can sink.

"I will preach to my people a sermon,
And take old Meg for my text;
And show them how narrow the safe road
That leads from this world to the next."

So he sat himself down at the table,
And began with "Original Sin;"
And by and by Meg and her swearing
Were dethly dovetailed therein.

With "thirdly" and "fourthly" he finished;
Then turned to his grate nice and warm,
When he thought of Widow Moruy, and wondered
If she was prepared for the storm.

"I'll call around soon in the morning,
And be sure that all is quite right."
He did; and found food in abundance,
And the grate with a fire glowing bright.

And the widow, with joy fairly weeping,
Told how she was caught by the storm;
Not a morsel of food for her children —
Not a coal her poor hovel to warm!

And that they would surely have perished,—
Too cold to go out and beg,—
When pitying Heaven sent succor
By such a strange angel — Old Meg!

Than a light slowly dawned on Eliab —
I can't say what conclusion he reached;
But I know, stowed away 'mong his sermons,
Lies one that never was preached!

JAMES ROANN REED.
JUDGE NOT.

How do we know what hearts have vilest sin?
How do we know?
Many, like sepulchres, are foul within,
Whose outward garb is spotless as the snow,
And many may be pure we think not so.
How near to God the souls of such have been,
What mercy secret penitence may win—
How do we know?

How can we tell who sinned more than we?
How can we tell?
We think our brother walked guiltily,
Judging him in self-righteousness. Ah, well!
Perhaps had we been driven through the hell
Of his untold temptations, we might be Less upright in our daily walk than he—
How can we tell?

Dare we condemn the ills that others do?
Dare we condemn?
Their strength is small, their trials not a few,
The tide of wrong is difficult to stem.
And if to us more clearly than to them
Is given knowledge of the great and true,
More do they need our help and pity too—
Dare we condemn?

God help us all, and lead us day by day,—
God help us all!
We cannot walk alone the perfect way,
Evil allure us, tempts us, and we fall.
We are but human, and our power is small;
Not one of us may boast, and not a day
Rolls o'er our heads but each hath need to say,
God bless us all!

THE CHIMES OF OLD ENGLAND.

The chimes, the chimes of Motherland,
Of England green and old,
That out from fane and ivied tower
A thousand years have tolled:
How glorious sounds their music,
As breaks the hallowed day,
And calleth with a saint's voice
A nation up to pray!

Those chimes, those chimes of Motherland,
Upon a Christmas morn,
Outbreaking as the angels,
For a Redeemer born!
How merrily they call afar,
To old and baron's hall,
With holy decked and mistletoe,
To keep the festival!

Those chimes of England, how they peal
From tower and Gothic pile,
Where hymn and swelling anthem fill
The dim cathedral aisles;
Where windows bath the holy light
On priestly heads that falls,
And stain the florid tracery
Of hammer-lighted walls!

And then, those Easter bells in spring,
Those glorious Easter chimes,
How loyally they tell the round,
Old Queen of holy times!
From hill to hill, like sentinels,
Responsively they cry,
And sing the rising of the Lord
From vale to mountain high.

I love ye, chimes of Motherland,
With all this soul of mine,
And bless the Lord that I am sprung
Of good old English line:
And like a son I sing the lay
That England's glory tells;
For she is lovely to the Lord,
For you, ye Christian bells.

And, heir of her ancestral fame,
Though far away my birth,
Thee, too, I love, my Forest home,
The joy of all the earth;
For thine thy mother's voice shall be,
And here, where God is King,
With English chimes, from Christian spires,
The wilderness shall ring.

BISHOP COXE.
THE SABBATH BELLS.

The old man sits in his easy-chair,
And his ear has caught the ringing
Of many a church-bell far and near,
Their own sweet music singing.
And his head sinks low on the aged breast,
While his thoughts far back are reaching
To the Sabbath morns of his boyish days
And a mother's sacred teaching.

A few years later, and lo! the bells
A merrier strain were pealing,
And heavenward bore the marriage vows
Which his manhood's joys were scaling.
But the old man's eyes are dimming now,
As memory holds before him
The sad, sad picture of later years,
When the tide of grief rolled over him;

When the bells were tolling for loved ones gone,—
For the wife, the sons and daughters,
Who, one by one, from his home went out,
And down into death's dark waters.
But the aged heart has still one joy
Which his old life dully blesses,
And his eyes grow bright and his pulses warm
Neath a grandchild's sweet caresses.

But the old man wakes from his reverie,
And his dear old face is smiling,
While the child with her serious eyes reads on,
The Sabbath hymns beguiling.
Ah! bells, once more we will ring for him,
When the heavenly hand shall sever
The cord of life, and his freed soul flies
To dwell with his own forever.

NO SESIT IN HEAVEN.

Talking of sects till late one eve,
Of the various doctrines the saints believe,
That night I stood in a troubled dream
By the side of a darkly flowing stream;

And a Churchman down to the river came,
When I heard a strange voice call his name;
"Good father, stop, when you cross this tide,
You must leave your robes on the other side."

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

But the aged father did not mind,
And his long gown floated out behind,
As down to the stream his way he took,
His pale hands clasping a gilt-edged book.

"I am bound for heaven, and when I'm there
I shall want my Book of Common Pray'r;
And though I put on a stary crown,
I should feel quite lost without my gown."

Then he fixed his eye on the shining track,
But his gown was heavy and held him back;
And the poor old father tried in vain
A single step in the flood to gain.

I saw him again on the other side,
But his silk gown floated on the tide,
And no one asked, in that blissful spot,
Whether he belonged to "The Church" or not.

Then down to the river a Quaker strayed;
His dress of a sombre hue was made.
"My coat and hat must all be of gray,
I cannot go any other way."

Then he buttoned his coat straight up to his chin,
And slowly, solemnly waded in.
And his broad-brimmed hat he pulled down tight
Over his forehead so cold and white.

But a strong wind carried away his hat;
A moment he silently sighed over that,
And then, as he gazed to the father shore,
His coat slipped off and was seen no more.

As he entered heaven his suit of gray
Went quietly sailing away, away;
And none of the angels questioned him
About the width of his beaver's brim.

Next came Dr. Watts with a bundle of psalms
Tied nicely up in his aged arms,
And hymns as many, a very nice thing,
That the people in heaven, all round, might sing.

But I thought that he heaved an anxious sigh
As he saw that the river ran broad and high,
And looked rather surprised as, one by one,
The psalms and the hymns in the waves went down.

After him, with his MSS.,
Came Wesley, the pattern of godliness;
But he cried, "Dear man, what shall I do,
The water has soaked them through and through?"
And there on the river far and wide
Away they went down the swollen tide,
While the saint astonished passed through alone,
Without his manuscript, up to the throne.

Then, gravely walking, two saints by name
Down to the stream together came;
But as they stopped at the river’s brink,
I saw one saint from the other shrink.

"Sprinkled or plunged, may I ask you, friend,
How you attained to life’s great end?"
"Thus, with a few drops on my brow "—
"But I’ve been dipped, as you’ll see now,
"And I really think it will hardly do,
As I’m ‘close communion,’ to cross with you.
You’re bound, I know, to the realms of bliss,
But you must go that way, and I’ll go this."

Then straightway plunging with all his might,
Away to the left, his friend to the right,
Apart they went from this world of sin,
But at last together they entered in.

And now, when the river was rolling on,
A Presbyterian Church went down;
Of women there seemed an innumerable throng.
But the men I could count as they passed along.

And concerning the road they could never agree,
The old or the new way, which it could be,
Nor ever for a moment paused to think
That both would lead to the river’s brink.

And a constant murmuring, long and loud,
Came ever up from the moving crowd;
"You’re in the old way, and I’m in the new,
That is the false and this is the true."

Or, "I’m in the old way, and you’re in the new,
That is the false and this is the true."
But the brethren only seemed to speak;
Modest the sisters walked, and meek.

But if ever one of them chance to say
What troubles she met with on the way,
How she longed to be on the other side,
Nor feared to cross o’er the swollen tide,

A voice arose from the brethren then:
"Let no one speak but the holy men;
For have ye not heard the words of Paul,
Oh! let the women keep silence all?"
THE PREACHER.

The sermon was not flowery; it was simple gospel truth;
It suited poor old men like me, it suited hopeful youth;
"I was full of invitations to Christ, and not to creed,
And bade us copy Him in thought and word and deed.

The preacher made sin hideous in Gentiles and in Jews;
He shot the golden sentences down into the finest pews;
And — though I can scarce see very well — I saw the falling tear
That told me hell was some ways off and heaven very near.

How swiftly the golden moments fled within that holy place;
How brightly beamed the light of heaven from every happy face!
Again I longed for that sweet time when friend shall meet with friend,
"When congregations ne'er break up and Sabbaths have no end."

I hope to meet that minister — that congregation too —
In the dear home beyond the stars that shine from heaven's blue;
I doubt not 'I'll remember, beyond life's evening gray,
The happy hours of worship in that model church today.

Dear wife, the fight will soon be fought, the victory be won;
The shifty goal is just ahead, the race is nearly run;
O'er the river we are nearin' they are throngin' to the shore,
To shout our safe arrival where the weary weep no more.

Now — the liberty has been taken to fill out the last line of the seventh verse in the above, as it was missing in the clipping.

THE FOOL'S PRAYER.

The royal feast was done; the king
Sought some new sport to banish care,
And to his jester cried, "Sir Fool,
Kneel now for us and make a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the mocking court before;
They could not see the bitter smile
Behind the painted grins he wore.

He bowed his head, and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose: "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"No pity, Lord, could change the heart
From red with wrong to white as wool;
The rod must heal the sin; but, Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"Tis by our guilt the outward sweep
Of truth and light, O Lord, we stay;
'Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away.

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire,
Go crushing blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust
Among the heart-strings of a friend.

"The ill-time truth that we have kept —
We know how sharp it pierced and stung!
The word we had not sense to say —
Who knows how kindly it bled rung?

"Our faults no tenderness should ask,
The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;
But for our blunders — oh, in shame
Before the eyes of Heaven we fall.

"Earth bears no blossoms for mistakes;
Men crown the knave, and scourge the fool.
That did his will; but thou, O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed. In silence rose
The king, and sought his garden cool,
And walked apart, and murmured low,
"Be merciful to me, a fool!"

WHAT IS HIS CREED?

He left a load of anthracite
In front of a poor widow's door
When the deep snow, frozen and white,
Wrapped street and square, mountain and moor.
That was his deed!
He did it well!
"What was his creed?"
I cannot tell!
Blessed "in his basket and his store,"
In sitting down and rising up;
When more he got, he gave the more—
Withholding not the crust and cup.
He took the lead
In each good task.
"What was his creed?"
I did not ask.

His charity was like the snow—
Soft, white, and silent in its fall;
Not like the noisy winds that blow
From shivering trees the leaves—a pall
For flower and weed,
Dropping below!
"What was his creed?"
The poor may know.

He had great faith in loaves of bread
For hungry people, young and old;
And hope-inspired, kind words he said
To those he sheltered from the cold.
For we must feed
As well as pray.
"What was his creed?"
I cannot say.

In works he did not put his trust;
His faith in words he never wriit;
He loved to share his cup and crust
With all mankind who needed it.
In time of need
A friend was he.
"What was his creed?"
He told not me.

He put his trust in Heaven, and he Worked well with hand and head;
And what he gave in charity
Sweetened his sleep and daily bread.
Let us take heed,
For life is brief;
"What was his creed,
What his belief?"

—TO THINE OWN SELF BE TRUE.

By thine own soul's law learn to live,
And if men thwart thee take no heed,
And if men hate thee have no care;
Sing thou thy song and do thy deed.

Hope thou thy hope and pray thy prayer,
And claim no crown they will not give,
Nor have they grudge thee for thy hair.

Keep thou thy soul-swn steadfast still,
And to thy heart be true thy heart;
What thy soul teaches learn to know,
And play out thine appointed part;
And thou shalt reap as thou shalt sow,
Nor helped nor hindered in thy growth,
To thy full stature thou shalt grow.

Fix on the future's goal thy face,
And let thy feet be lurid to stray
Nowhither, but be swift to run,
And nowhere tardy by the way,
Until at last the end is won,
And thou mayst look back from thy place
And see thy long day's journey done.

The Spectator.

Pakenham Beatty.

THE HINDOO SCEPTIC.

I think till I weary with thinking,
Said the saucy Hindoo king;
And I see but shadows around me,
Illusion in everything.

How knowest thou aught of God,
Of his favor or his wrath?
Can the little fish tell what the lion thinks,
Or map out the eagle's path?

Can the finite the Infinite search?
Did the blind discover the stars?
Is the thought that I think a thought,
Or a throb of the brain in its bars?

For aught that my eye can discern,
Your God is what you think good,—
Youself flashed back from the glass,
When the light pours on it in flood.

You preach to me to be just,
And this is his realm, you say;
And the good are dying of hunger,
And the bad gorge every day.

You say that he loveth mercy.
And the famine is not yet gone;
That he hatest the shelter of blood,
And he slayeth as every one.

THE HUMBLER POETS.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.
THE HUMBLER POEMS.

You say that my soul shall live,
That the spirit can never die—
If he were content when I was not,
Why not when I have passed by?

You say I must have a meaning,
So must dung, and its meaning is flowers;
What if our souls are but nurture
For lives that are greater than ours?

When the fish swims out of the water,
When the birds soar out of the blue,
Man's thought may transcend man's knowledge,
And your God be no reflex of you.

The Spectator.

DECREED.

Into all lives some rain must fall,
Into all eyes some tear-drops start,
Whether they fall as gentle shower,
Or fall like fire from an aching heart.
Into all hearts some sorrow must creep,
Into all souls some doubtings come,
Lashing the waves of life's great deep
From dimpling waters to scething foam.

Over all paths some clouds must lower,
Under all feet some sharp thorns spring,
Tearing the flesh to bitter wounds,
Or entering the heart with their bitter sting.
Upon all brows rough winds must blow,
Over all shoulders a cross be laid,
Bowing the form in its lofty height
Down to the dust in bitter pain.

Into all hands some duty's thrust;
Unite all arms some burden's given,
Crushing the heart with its weary weight,
Or lifting the soul from earth to heaven.
Into all hearts and homes and lives,
God's dear sunlight comes streaming down,
Gliding the ruins of life's great plain—
Weaving for all a golden crown.

The Presbyterian.

THE LITTLE CHURCH ROUND THE CORNER.

"Bring him not here, where our sainted feet
Are treading the path to glory;
Bring him not here, where our Saviour sweet
Repeats for us his story.
Go, take him where such things are done
(For he sat in the seat of the scorners),
To where they have room, for we have none,—
To the little church round the corner."

So spake the holy man of God,
Of another man, his brother,
Whose cold remains, ere they sought the sod,
Had only asked that a Christian rite
Might be read above them by one whose light
Was, "Brethren, love one another;"
Had only asked that a prayer be recited
 Ere his flesh went down to join the dead,
While his spirit looked with suppliant eyes,
Searching for God throughout the skies.
But the priest frowned "No," and his brow was bare
Of love in the sight of the mourner,
And they looked for Christ and found him—where?
In that little church round the corner.

Ah! well, God grant when, with aching feet,
We tread life's last few paces,
That we may hear some accents sweet,
And kiss, to the end, fond faces.
God grant that this tired flesh may rest
(Mid many a mourning mourner),
While the sermon is preached and the rites are read
In no church where the heart of love is dead,
And the pastor's a pious prig at best,
But in some small nook where God's confessed,—
Some little church round the corner.

A. E. LANCASTER.

ROCK OF AGES.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,"
Thoughtlessly the maiden sung,
Fell the words unconsciously
From her girlish, gleeful tongue;
Sang as little children sing;
Sang as sing the birds in June;
Fell the words like light leaves down
On the current of the stream.—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."
"Let me hide myself in thee,"—
Felt her soul no need to hide;
Sweet the song as song could be,
And she had no thought beside;
All the words unheedingly
Fell from lips untouched by care,
Dreaming not they each might be
On some other lips a prayer—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me—"
"Was a woman sung them now,
Pleadingly and prayerfully;
Every word her heart did know.
Rose the song as storm-tossed bird
Beats with weary wing the air;
Every note with sorrow stirred—
Every syllable a prayer—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me—"
Lips grown aged sung the hymn
Trustingly and tenderly—
Voice grown weak and eyes grown dim.
"Let me hide myself in thee—"
Trembling though the voice and low,
Ran the sweet strain peacefully,
Like a river in its flow.
Sung as only they can sing
Who life's thorny paths have pressed;
Sung as only they can sing
Who beheld the promised rest—
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me—"
Sung above a coffin-lid;
Underneath all restfully
All life's joys and sorrows hid.
Nevermore, O storm-tossed soul,
Nevermore from wind or tide,
Nevermore from hillow's roll,
Wilt thou need thyself to hide.
Could the sightless, sunken eyes,
Closed beneath the soft gray hair,
Could the mute and stiffened lips
Move again in pleading prayer;
Still, ay, still the words would be,
"Let me hide myself in thee."

WAS IT A LIE THAT THEY TOLD ME,
Was it a lie that they told me,
A sop for my soul and its longing
Only to cozen and coax?
And a voice came down through the night and rain—
"They lied; thou hast trusted in vain."

MUST I VANISH OFF-HAND INTO DARKNESS,
Blown out with a breath like a lamp?
Have I sought in the future to look to
Save rotting in darkness and damp?
And the answer came with a mocking hiss:
"Thou hast nothing to look to save this."

WHAT OF THE GRAVE AND ITS CONQUEST,
Of death and the loss of life's sting?
Was it only the brag of a madman
Who believed an impossible thing?
And the voice returned, as the voice of a ghost :
"It was but a madman's boast."

AM I THE SERF OF MY SENSES?
Am I the serf of my senses?
Is my soul a slave Without rights?
Are feeding and breeding and sleeping
My first and truest delights?
And the cruel answer cut me asunder:
"Thou art but the serf of thy flesh."

IS IT ALL FOR NUGHT THAT I TRAVAIL,
That I long for leisure from sin,
That I thirst for the pure and the perfect,
And feel like a god within?
The voice replied to my passionate thought:
"Thy longing and travail is nought."

THEN I BOWED MY HEAD IN MY ANGUISH,
Folding my face in my hands,
And I shuddered as one that sinketh
In the slough of quaking sands.
And I shuddered, as I clinched my fingers tight,
Out through the black, black night.

FOR LIFE WAS SHORN OF ITS MEANING,
And I cried: "O God, is it so?
Utter the truth though it slay me,
Utter it, yes or no!"
But I heard no answer to heal my pain,
Save the bluster of wind and rain.
And behold, as I sat in my sorrow,
A quick ray shot from the east;
Another and then another,
And I knew that the night had ceased.
And the dark clouds rolled away to the west
As the great sun rose from his rest.
And now, as the fair dawn broadened,
Strong and joyous and bright,
My whole soul swept to meet it,
Rapt with a deep delight;
And a new voice rang down the radiant skies:
"Rejoice; I have heard thee. Arise."

---

THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

Death sent his messengers before,
"Our master comes apace," they cried;
"Ere night he will be at the door.
To claim thy darling from thy side."
I drove them forth with curses fed;
I drove them forth with jeer and scoff;
Not all the powers of heaven or hell
Combined should bear my darling off.
I armed me madly for the fight;
My gates I bolted, barred, and locked;
At sunset came a noble knight,
Dismounted at my doors, and knocked.
I answered not; he knocked again;
I braved him sore, I braved his hand;
He knocked once more—in vain, in vain;
My barriers crumbled 'neath his hand.
I rushed into the breach; I stood
Dazed with the flood of ebbing light;
"A victory over senseless wood,
Adds scanty glory to thy might!
A stronger champion guards these walls—
A human love, a living heart;
And while each earthly bulwark falls,
It stays thee, awful as thou art!"

My sabre sheathed on his mail,
My lance dropped headless at his feet;
I saw my darling's cheek grow pale,
I saw her turn, my foe to meet.
He passed,—my lips alone could move;
Mad words of passion forth I hurled;
"They lied who said that God was love,
Who lets a tyrant rule the world."

---

IF I SHOULD DIE TO-NIGHT.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting-place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And, laying snow-white flowers against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tearful tenderness,
And fold my hands with lingering caress,—
Poor hands, so empty and so cold to-night!
If Ishould dietoonight,
Myfriends would call to mind, with loving thought,
Somekindly deed the icy hands had wrought;
Somegentle word the frozen lips had said;
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selflessh and pride,
Myhasty words, would all be put aside,
Andso Ishould be loved and mourned to-night.

If Ishould dietoonight,
Evenhearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully;
The eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me as of yore, perchance,
Andsetten, in the old familiar way;
Forwho could war with dumb, unconscious clay!
SoI might rest, forgiven of all, to-night.

Oh,friends, Ipray to-night,
Keepnot your kisses for my dead, cold brow —
The way is lonely, let me feel them now.
Thinkgently of me; Iam travel-worn;
Myfaltering feet are pierced with many a thorn.
Forgive, oh, hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When dreamless rest is mine Ishall not need
The tenderness for which Ilong to-night.

THE BURIAL OF MOSES.

ByNeb'slonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab
There lies a lonely grave;
And nomandug that sepulchre,
Andnomansaw it e'er;
For the "Sons of God" upturned the sod
And laid the dead man there.

Thatwasthe grandest funeral
Thateverpassed on earth;
But.nomanhauled the trampling,
Orsaw the train go forth.
Noiselessly as the daylight
Comescowhen thenight is done,
Andthecrimson streak on ocean's cheek
Growsin the great sun;
Noiselessly as the springtime
Her crown of verdure weaves,
And all the trees on all the hills
Put forth their thousand leaves:

So, without sound of music,
Or voice of them that wept,
Silently down from the mountain's crown
Thegreat procession swept.
Perchance the haid old eagle,
On gray Beth-peor's height,
Out of his rocky eyrie
Looked on the wondrous sight;
Perchance the lion stalking
Still slum that hallowed spot;
Forbeast and bird have seen and heard
That which man knoweth not.

Butwhen the warrior dieth,
Hisconrados in the war,
With arms reversed and muffled drums,
Follow the funeral car;
Theyshow the banners taken,
They tell his victories won,
Andafter him lead his masterless steed,
Whilepeals the minute-gun.

Amanda noblest of the land
Men lay the sage to rest,
Andgivethebard an honored place,
Withcostymarble dress.
In the great minster transept,
Where lights like glories fall,
And the sweet choir sings, and the organ rings,
Along the embrazored wall.

This was the bravest warrior
That ever buckled sword;
This the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word;
Andnever earth's philosopher
Traced with his golden pen,
On the deathless page, truths half so sage
As he wrote down for men.

And had he not his honor? —
The hills for his pall,
To lie in state while angels wait,
The stars for tapers tall;
And the great rock-pines, like tossing plumes,
Over his bier to wave,
AndGod's own hand, in that lonely land,
To lay him in his grave, —

In that deep grave without a name,
Whence his unconfined clay
Shall break again (most wondrous thought!) Before the judgment-day,
THE HUMBLER POETS.

And stand, with glory wrapped around,
On the hills he never trod,
And speak of the strife that won our life
With the Incarnate God.

O lonely tomb in Moab's land!
O dark Beth-peor's hill!
Speak to these anxious hearts of ours,
And teach them to be still.

God hath his mysteries of grace,
Ways that we cannot tell;
He hides them deep, like the secret sleep
Of him he loved so well.

MRS. C. F. ALEXANDER.

REST AT EVENTIDE.

"The night cometh, when no man can work."

Fold ye the ice-cold hands
Calm on the pulseless breast;
The toll of the summer day is o'er,
Now cometh the evening rest;
And the folded hands have nobly wrought
Through noontide's din and strife,
And the dauntless heart hath bravely fought
In the ceaseless war of life.

Smooth ye the time-browned hair
Still on the marble brow;
No earthly cloud doth linger there
To mar its beauty now,
But brow and lip and darkened eye
Bear a shade of deep repose,
As twilight shadows softly lie
On the wide-spread winter snows.

No voice of discord wakes
The silence still and deep,
And the far-off sounds of worldly strife
Cannot break the dreamless sleep.
Oh, welcome rest to a heart long tossed
On the tide of hopes and fears,—
To the feet that have wandered far and wide
O'er the weary waste of years.

From the gorgeous glare of day,
Welcome the gentle night,
Fading the tranquil laces away,
Solene and calm and bright.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

Then tenderly, tenderly fold the hands
In peace on the pulseless breast.
For the evening shadows come quickly on,
And sweet is the Christian's rest.

THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE.

TWO ROBBERS.

When Death from some fair face
Is stealing life away,
All weep, save she, the grace
That earth shall lose today.

When Time from some fair face
Seals beauty year by year,
For her slow-fading grace
Who slumbers, save she, a tear?

And Death not often dares
To wake the world's distress;
While Time, the cunning, mars
Surely all loveliness.

Yet though by breath and breath
Fades all thy fairest prime,
Men shrink from cruel Death,
But honor crafty Time.

The Spectator.

LAY ME LOW.

Lay me low, my work is done;
I am weary. Lay me low,
Where the wild flowers woo the sun,
Where the balmy breeze blow,
Where the butterfly takes wing,
Where the aspens drooping grow,
Where the young birds chirp and sing;
I am weary, let me go.

I have striven hard and long,
In the world's unequal fight,
Always to resist the wrong,
Always to maintain the right;
Always with a stubborn heart,
Taking, giving blow for blow,
Brother, I have played my part,
And am weary, let me go.

F. W. BOURDILLON.
Stern the world, and bitter cold,
Irksome, painful to endure;
Everywhere a love of gold,
Nowhere pity for the poor.
Everywhere mistrust, disguise,
Pride, hypocrisy, and show;
Draw the curtain, close mine eyes,
I am weary, let me go.

Others, chance, when I am gone,
May restore the battle call;
Bravely lend a good cause on,
Fighting in which I fail.
God may quicken some true soul
Here to take my place below
In the hero's muster-roll;
I am weary, let me go.

Shield and buckler, hang them up,
Drape the standard on the wall,
I have drained the mortal cup
To the finish, drops and all.
When our work is done, it is best,
Brother, best that we should go.
I am weary, let me rest;
I am weary, lay me low.

LIFE OR DEATH.

Dare Life survive the touch of Death?
Death's hand alone the secret holds,
Which, as to each one he unfolds,
We press to know with bated breath.

A whisper there, a whisper here,
Confirms the hope to which we cling;
But still we grasp at anything,
And sometimes hope and sometimes fear.

Some whisper that the dead we knew
Hover around us while we pray.
Anxious to speak. We cannot say;
We only wish it may be true.

I knew a Stoic, who has thought,
As healthy blood flows through his veins,
And joy his present life sustains,
And all this good has come unsought,

For more he cannot rightly pray;
Life may extend, or life may cease,—
He bonus the issue, sure of peace,
Sure of the best in God's own way.

Perfection waits the race of man;
If, working out this great design,
God cuts us off, we must resign
To be the refuse of his plan.

But I, for one, feel no such peace;
I dare to think I have in me
That which had better never be,
If lost before it can increase.

And oh! the ruined piles of mind,
Daily discovered everywhere,
Built but to crumble in despair;
I dare not think him so unkind.

The rudest workman would not fling
The fragments of his work away,
If every useless bit of clay
He trow on were a sentient thing.

And does the Wiser Worker take
Quick human hearts, instead of stone,
And how and carve them, one by one,
Nor heed the pangs with which they break?

And more: if but creation's waste,
Would he have given us sense to yearn
For the perfection none can earn,
And hope the fuller life to taste?

I think, if we must cease to be,
It is a cragly refined
To make the instincts of our mind
Stretch out toward eternity.

Wherefore I welcome Nature's cry
As earnest of a life again,
Where thought shall never be in vain,
And doubt before the light shall fly.

Macmillan's Magazine.  E. B.

REST IN THE GRAVE.

Rest in the grave! but rest is for the weary,
And her slight limbs were hardly gift for toil;
Rest for lives worn out, deserted, dreary,
Which have no brightness left for death to spoil.
Temple

THE HUMBLER POETS.

We yearn for rest when power and passion wasted
Have left to memory nothing but regret;
She sleeps, while life's best pleasures, all untasted,
Had scarce approached her rosy lips as yet.
Her childlike eyes still lacked their crowning sweetness,
Her form was ripening to more perfect grace;
She died with the pathetic incompleteness
Of beauty's promise on her pallid face.

What undeveloped gifts, what powers untested,
Perchance with her have passed away from earth;
What germs of thought in that young brain arrested
May never grow and quicken and have birth!
She knew not love, who might have loved so dearly,
Though love-dreams stilled her fancy, faint and fleet;
Her soul's ethereal wings were budding newly,
Her woman's heart had scarcely begun to beat.

We drink the sweets of life, and drink the bitter,
And death to us would almost seem a boon;
But why to her, for whom glad life were fitter,
Should darkness come ere day had reached its noon?
No answer,—save the echo of our weeping
Which from the woodland and the moor is heard,
Where, in the springtime, ruthless storm-winds, sweeping,
Have slain the unborn flower and new-fledged bird.

Temple Bar.

THE NARROW HOUSE.

A narrow home, but very still it seemeth;
A silent home, no stir of tumult here;
Who wisa that pillow of no sorrow dreameth,
No whisper echoes jar his scaled ear.
The tired hands lie very calm and quiet;
The weary feet no more hard paths will tread;
The great world may revolve in clash and riot,
To its loud summons leaps nor heart nor head.

The violets bloom above the tranquil sleeper,
The morning dew falls gently on the grass;
Amid the daisies kneels the only weeper,
He knows not where her lingering footsteps pass.
The autumn winds sigh softly o'er his slumber,
The winter piles the snow-drifts o'er his rest;
He does not care the flying years to number—
The narrow home contains its silent guest.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

No baffled hopes can haunt, no doubt perplexes,
No parted love the deep repose can chase,
No petty care can kill, no trouble vexes.

From misconception his hushed heart is safe.
Freed from the weakness of worldly fretting,
From pain and failure, rootless toil and strife,
From the dull wretchedness of vain regretting,
He lies, whose course has passed away from life.

A narrow home; and far beyond it lieth
The land where no mortal lips can tell
We strain our sad eyes as the spirit fleeth;
Our fancy loves on heaven's bright hills to dwell.
God shuts the door no angel tip uncloses,
They whom Christ raised no word of guidance said;
Only the cross speaks where our dust repose:
"Trust Him who calls unto His rest our dead."

AN IDEAL FUTURE.

I Seldom ponder the "future life,"
I hold it a waste of thought, you see,
For the most that a man may know is this:
That which is coming will surely be.
To those who find comfort in baseless faith
I leave the old myth in its newest dress.
For I can't cry "credo" while the creed
Is at most but a clumsy guess.

Yet I've often thought, if one had his choice
Of all the heavens man has made,
Which would he choose for his dwelling-place?
When his soul (myth again) from his body stray'd?
I've thought them over from first to last,—
Scarce one, I'm sure, did my fancy miss,
And I found that while all contained much good,
Still not one offered perfect bliss.

There's Nirvana, the region of "blowing out,"
Where the Buddhist's soul in a stupor lies,
Pain enters not on that endless rest,
Yet who could such an existence prize?
Better have done with it, once for all,—
Be utterly nothing when death is past,—
Than prefer one's self to redeem one's soul,
And then come to this end at last.

There were light and life in the Blessed Isles;
Still nobody seemed to exactly know
How he might merit those Happy Fields,
Or in which direction his soul might go.
It was not a question of good and bad;
Only the sons of the gods went there,
And Pluto’s realm might receive a man
Of virtue and valor rare.

Valhalla offered a “lively time,”
Enough of excitement was there, at least;
It was gaudy and swell, then fight and kill,
Then come to life for another feast.

But mercy on us! a foeman’s skull,
A very suggestive wine-cup makes
And it can’t be pleasant to lose one’s head
Just after each meal one takes.

In the Indian’s Happy Hunting-grounds
A sporting spirit were fully placed;
But eternal camping-out won’t suit
A soul possessed of more varied taste.

Though a squaw has charms for her russet beau,
She has passing few for you and me,
And Eden devoid of a pretty face
Would a cheerless Eden be.

“Then turn to Mahomet’s Paradise,”
I think I hear you in triumph say;
“Bathed in the light of the houris’ eyes
Your taste for beauty can have full play.”

Softly, O friend! thou hast heard it said
Enough of a thing is good as a feast;
My ideas of “enough” of such company
Don’t agree with those of the East.

And thus in each heaven I find a flaw;
From first to last there is none complete;
Not one where a dreaming epicure
Can paint existence as nought but sweet.

He has to take an idea from each
To build an Eden of perfect bliss;
Tastes differ — but mine would assume a shape
Nearly, or quite, like this:

Elysium’s glory at break of day,
The Hunting-grounds in the cool of morn,
Valhalla’s banquet at glowing eve,
And the houris’ soft embrace till dawn;
Nirvana’s rest when the day is done,
For a blessing not to be lost is sleep,
And weariness is a pleasant boon,
That maketh the slumber deep.

The Argonaut.

T. A. HARCOURT.

IN A GRAVEYARD.

(From the German.)

“Here rests in God.” ’Tis all we read;
The mouldering stone reveals no more.
“In God.” Of other words what need?
These span the broad eternal shore.

Overladen with its starry blooms,
A jasmine bush conceals the mound,
Neatly placed in the place of tombs,
With spicy, golden sweetness crowned.

And deep within its leafy breast
Some tuneful bird has sought a home,
The tiny brood within the rest
Fearless and free to go and come.

A holy quietude is here,
Save where the happy birdling’s song
Breaks through the stillness pure and clear,
And echoes the dark airs among.

Sleep on, sleep on, thou pulseless heart,
Where jasmining stars drop golden rain,
From every troubled thought apart,
Forgotten every earthly pain.

Sleep on; thy long repose is sweet,
Tender and cool thy grassy sod,
O traveller! stay thy hurrying feet;
Step softly here — “he rests in God.”

The Catholic World.

REST.

When thou art weary of the world, and leaning
Upon my breast,
My soul will show to thine its hidden meaning,
And thou shalt rest.

When thou art eagerly but vainly aiming
At some far end,
Thou knowest not thy pining and complaining
Have pierced thy Friend.

My presence is around thee and about thee —
Thou dost not know —
But if thou knowest, thou wouldst not doubt me,
I love thee so.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Thou art a very child, and needest guiding,—
Thou I will lead;
Another guide might be too quick in chiding,
Nor know thy need.

Lean on me, child — nor faint beneath thy sighing,
With help so near;
I took upon me all thy grief and dying,
To heal thy fear.

When thou art resting in my secret dwelling,
Shadowed by me,
Thou shalt not tire of listening — I of telling
My love for thee.

Thine eyes are bent upon each loving token
Set by my hand;
With these alone thy spirit would be broken
In thy fair land.

Thou art a lover of all things of beauty
In earth and space;
Then, surely, 't were thy pleasure and thy duty
Their source to trace.

Track the bright river of each much-prized blessing
Back to its source;
See all the blooming growth thy foot is pressing
Along its course.

See, gathered in the storehouse of sweet dreaming,
Each glowing thought
Which daylight, starlight, or the moon's sweet gleaming
To thee have brought.
All real beauty which thy heart is greeting
In this fair earth,
All music which thy charmed ear is meeting,
From me had birth.
But this will be revealed when thou art leaning
Upon my breast;
Thy soul shall comprehend my hidden meaning —
And then shall rest.

Chamber's Journal.

THE PARADISE OF TEARS.

(FROM THE GERMAN.)

Beside the River of Tears, with branches low,
And bitter leaves, the weeping willows grow;
The branches stream like the dishevelled hair
Of women in the sadness of despair.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

On rolls the stream with a perpetual sigh;
The rocks moan wildly as it passes by;
Hyssop and wormwood border all the strand,
And not a flower adorns the dreary land.

Then comes a child, whose face is like the sun;
And dips the gloomy waters as they run,
And waters all the region, and behold!
The ground is bright with blossoms manifold.

Where fall the tears of love the rose appears,
And where the ground is wet with friendship's tears
Forget-me-nots and violets, heavenly blue,
Spring, glittering with cheerful drops like dew.

The souls of mourners, all whose tears are dried,
Like swans come gently floating down the tide,
Walk up the golden sands by which it flows,
And in that Paradise of Tears repose.

There every heart rejoins its kindred heart;
There, in a long embrace that none may part,
Pleasure meets desire, and that fair shore
Beholds its dwellers happy evermore.

NEARING PORT.

The noble river widens as we drift,
And the deep waters more than brickish grow;
We note the sea-birds flying to and fro,
And feel the ocean-currents plainly lift.
Our bark, and yet our course we would not shift:
These are but signs by which the boatmen know
They're drawing near the port to which they go
To land their cargo or to bring their gift.
So may our lives reach out on either hand,
Broader and broader, as the end draws near;
So may we seek God's truths to understand,
As the sea-birds shelter seek when storms appear;
So may the currents from the heavenly sea
Lift us and bear us to eternity.
GIVE ME REST.

ONLY one moment unfeathered by care,
Hushed as the temple devoted to prayer,
When heaven is painting the west,
Flooded the sky through its portals ajar,
Looping the curtains of night with a star —
Give me rest.

Spirit of power, forever you'll reign,
Tyrant, enslaving the heart and the brain,
With every endeavor oppressed.
Sick of the lessons that Nature has taught,
Weary with burdens of infinite thought —
Give me rest.

Grant me a potion loathen, a draught
Sparking with tranqul repose never quaffed
By mortals at pleasure's behalf.
Give me a peace the world cannot give —
Respite from action; to act is to live —
Give me rest.

Ceaseless toil of the spirit distraught,
Boundless the realm of invisible thought,
Where imagery lingers caressed.
Waves of oblivion over me roll,
Welcome forgetfulness bring to my soul —
Give me rest.

THE KING'S SHIPS.

God hath so many ships upon the sea;
His are the merchantmen that carry treasure,
The men-of-war, all banded galling,
The little other boats, and banks of pleasure.
On all this sea of time there is not one
That sailed without the glorious name thereon.

The winds go up and down upon the sea,
And some they lightly clasp, entwining kindly,
And waft them to the port where they would be,
And other ships they buffet long and blindly.
The cloud comes down on the great sinking deep,
And on the shore the watchers stand and weep.

LIFE, RELIGION, AND DEATH'S MYSTERY.

And God hath many wrecks within the sea;
Oh, it is deep! I look in fear and wonder;
The Wisdom throne'd above is dark to me,
Yet it is sweet to think his care is under;
That yet the sunken treasure may be drawn
Into his storehouse — when the sea is gone.

So I, that sail in peril on the sea
With my beloved, whom the waves may cover,
Say, God hath more than angel's care of me,
And larger share than I in friend and lover.
Why weep ye so, ye watchers on the land?
This deep is but the hollow of his hand.

THE PARSON'S COMFORTER.

The parson goes about his daily ways,
With all the parish troubles on his head,
And takes his Bible out, and reads and prays
Beside the sufferer's chair, the dying bed.

What'er the secret skeleton may be —
Doubt, drink, or debt — that keeps within his lab,
When parson comes, the owner turns the key,
And lets him out to "squeak and gibber" there.

It seems a possibility unguessed —
Or little borne in mind, if haply known —
That he who cheers in trouble all the rest
May, now and then, have troubles of his own.

Alas! God knows he has his foes to fight,
His closet-atomy, severe and grin;
All others claim his comfort as of right,
But, hapless parson! who shall comfort him?

A friend he has to whom he may repair
(Besides that One who carries all our grief),
And when his load is more than he can bear,
He seeks his comforter, and finds relief.

He finds a cottage, very poor and small,
The modest tenement where all are mean;
Yet decency and order mark it all —
The panes are bright, the steps severely clean.

He lifts the latch; his comforter is there,
Propped in the bed, where now for weeks she stays,
Or, haply, seated, knitting, in her chair,
If this be one of those rare "better days."
A tiny woman, sunned, beat, and thin;
Her features sharp with pain that always wakes;
The nimble hand she holds the needles in
Is warped and wrenched by dire rheumatic aches.

Sometimes she gets a grateful change of pain,
Sometimes for half a day she quits her bed;
And — lying, sitting, crawled to bed again —
Always she knits; her needles win her bread.

Too well she knows what ’tis a meal to miss,
Often the grate has not a coal of fire;
She has no hope of better things than this;
The future darkness, suffering grows more dire.

Where will they take her, if hidest it should
Her stiffened hands the needles cannot ply?
Not to the workhouse, — God is very good;
He knows her weakness — he will let her die.

Sometimes, but seldom, neighbors hear her moan,
Wrong by some sudden stress of fiercer pain;
Often they hear her pray, but none has known,
No single soul has heard her lips complain.

The parson enters, and a gracious smile
Over the poor, pinched features brightly grows;
She lets the needles rest a little while;
"You’re kindly welcome, sir!" — Ah, that he knows.

He takes the Book, and opens at the place —
No need to ask her which her favorite psalm;
And, as he reads, upon her tortured face
There comes a holy rapture, deep and calm.

She murmurs softly with him as he reads
(She can repeat the Psalter through at will):
"He leads me in green pastures, and he leads, —
He leads me forth beside the waters still.

"Yea, through death’s shadowy valley though I tread,
I will not fear, for Thou dost show the way;
Thy holy oil is poured upon my head,
Thy loving-kindness follows me for eye."

The reading’s done, and now the prayer is said;
He bids farewell, and leaves her to her pain:
But grace and blessing on his soul are shed, —
He goes forth comforted and strong again.

HE takes his way, on divers errands bound,
Abler to plead, and warn, and comfort woes;
That is the darkest house on all his round;
And yet, be sure, the happiest house he knows.

Will it not ease, poor soul, thy restless bed,
And make thee more content, if that can be,
To know that from thy suffering balm is shed,
That comforts him who comes to comfort thee?

FREDERICK LAMBDRIDGE

WE SHALL BE SATISFIED.

The course of the weariest river
Ends in the great, gray sea;
The acorn forever and ever
Strives upward to the tree.

The rainbow, the sky adorning,
Shines promise through the storm;
The glimmer of coming morning
Through midnight gloom will form.

By time all knots are riven,
Complex although they be.
And peace will at last be given,
Dear, both to you and me.

Then, though the path be dreary,
Look forward to the goal;
Though the heart and the head be weary,
Let faith inspire the soul.

Seek the right, though the wrong be tempting;
Speak the truth at any cost;
Vain is all weak exempting
When once that gem is lost.

Let strong hand and keen eye be ready
For plain or embossed foes;
Thought earnest and fancy steady
Bear best unto the close.

The heavy clouds may be raining,
But with evening comes the light;
Through the dark, low winds complaining,
Yet the sunrises gleams the height.

And Love has his hidden treasure
For the patient and the pure;
And Time gives his fullest measure
To the workers who endure;
And the word that no lore has shaken
Has the future pledge supplied;
For we know that when we "awaken"
We shall be "satisfied."

S. K. PHILLIPS.
"ACROSS THE LOT."

Do you remember, when we came from school
(You leading me, although not much the older),
How I would skip across the meadow cool,
Saucily calling backward, o'er my shoulder,
"Do as you please,—come on with me or not,
But I am going home across the lot"?

Away I danced, and you, though left alone,
Pursued the way, with face serene and smiling,
Singing beside the road with low, sweet tone,
And still one thought your tender heart beguiling;
Wild though I was, you knew that I would wait
To meet and greet you at the garden-gate.

There with a bunch of flowers would I stand,
Or fresh-plucked apples, with their ripeness blushing,
Or with a glass of water in my hand,
Just brought from where the hillside spring was gushing,
Saying, as you bent down to quench your thirst,
"Now, aren't you glad that I am home the first?"

I am dying, sister—start not! Well I know
That day by day my little strength is failing;
Strive not to hold me back, for I must go;—
God's mighty love o'er my weak will prevailing
Press you from care and me from pain accurst;
'Tis only that I shall be home the first.

And as of old, sweet sister, I will stand,
Until you come, beside the heavenly portal,
Keeping the fadless wreath within my hand
With which to crown you for your life immortal.
Others will call me dead; believe them not—
I only have gone home "across the lot."

C. S.
It may be glorious to write
Thoughts that shall glad the two or three
High souls, like those far stars that come in sight
Once in a century;

But better far it is to speak
One simple word, which now and then
Shall reach their true nature in the weak
And friendless sons of men;

To write some earnest verse or line,
Which, seeking not the praise of art,
Shall make clear faith and manhood shine
In the untutored hearts.

He who doth this, in verse or prose,
May be forgotten in his day,
But surely shall he crowned at last with those
Who live and speak for right.

LOWELL.

PART XI.

With a Story to Tell.

LITTLE PHIL.

"Make me a headboard, mister, smooth and painted. You see, our ma she died last winter, and sister and Jack and me last Sunday could hardly find her, so many new graves about, and Bud cried out, 'We've lost her.' When Jack gave a little about.

We have worked and saved all winter—been hungry, sometimes I own—but we bid this much from father, under the old door-stone: He never goes there to see her; he hated her; scolded Jack when he heard us talking about her and wishing that she'd come back.

But up in the garret we whisper, and have a good time to cry, for our beautiful mother who kissed us, and wasn't afraid to die. Put off that she was forty, in November she went away, that she was the best of mothers, and we have n't forgot to pray; and we mean to do as she taught us—be loving and true and square.

To work and read—to love her, till we go to her up there. Let the board be white, like moths (the small chin quivered here, and the lad coughed something under and conquered a rebel tear).

Here is all we could keep from father, a dollar and thirty cents. The rest he 's got for coal and flour, and partly to pay the rent, "Blushing the while all over, and dropping the honest eyes; "What is the price of headboards, with writing, and handsome size?"

"Three dollars!"—A young roe wounded just falls with a moan; and he, with a face like the ghost of his mother, sank down on his tattered knee.

"Three dollars! and we shall lose her; next winter the rain and the snow—" But the boss had his arms about him, and cuddled the head of tow.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Close up to the great heart's shelter, and womanly tears fell fast—
"Dear boy, you shall never lose her; oh, cling to your sacred past!
Come to-morrow, and bring your sister and Jack, and the board shall be.
The best that this ship can furnish; then come here and live with me."

When the orphans loaded their treasure on the rugged old cart
next day,—
The surprise of a footboard varnish, with all that their love
could say;
And "Edith St. John, Our Mother,"—Baby Jack gave his little shout;
And Bud, like a mountain daisy, went dancing her doll about;
But Phil grew white, and trembled, and close to the boss he crept;
Kissing him like a woman, shivered, and laughed, and wept.
"Do you think, my benefactor, in heaven that she'll be glad?"
"Not as glad as you are, Philip—but finish this job, my lad."

BILLY'S ROSE.

Billy's dead and gone to glory—so is Billy's sister Nell;
There's a tale I know about them I poet I would tell;
Soft it comes, with perfume laden, like a breath of country air
Waited down the filthy alley, bringing fragrant odors there.

In that vile and filthy alley, long ago, one winter's day,
Dying quick of want and fever, hopeless, patient Billy lay;
While beside him sat his sister, in the garret's dismal gloom,
Cheating with her gentle presence Billy's pathway to the tomb.

Many a tale of elf and fairy did she tell the dying child,
Till his eyes lost half their anguish, and her worn, was features smiled,—
Tales herself had heard haphazard, caught amid the Babel roar,
Lisp'd about by tiny gossips playing at their mothers' door.

Then she felt his wasted fingers tighten feebly as she told
How beyond this dismal alley lay a land of shining gold,
Where, when all the pain was over, where, when all the tears
were shed,
He would be a white-frocked angel, with a gold thing on his head.

Then she told some garbled story of a kind-eyed Saviour's love;
How he'd built for little children great big playgrounds up above,
Where they sang, and played at hop-scotch and at horses all
the day,
And where beadle's and policemen never frightened them away.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

This was Nell's idea of heaven,—just a bit of what she'd heard,
With a little bit invented, and a little bit inferred;
But her brother lay and listened, and he seemed to understand,
For he closed his eyes, and murmured he could see the Promised Land.

"Yes," he whispered, "I can see it—I can see it, sister Nell,
Oh, the children look so happy, and they're all so strong and well;
I can see them there with Jesus,—he is playing with them too;
Let us run away and join them, if there's room for me and you.

She was eight, this little maiden, and her life had all been spent
In the alley and the garret, where they starved to pay the rent;
Where a drunken father's curses and a drunkard mother's blows
Drove her forth into the gutter from the day's dawn to its close.

But she knew enough, this outcast, just to tell the sinking boy,
"You must die before you're able all these blessings to enjoy.
You must die," she whispered, "Billy, and I am not even ill;
But I'll come to you, dear brother, yes, I promise you I will.

"You are dying, little brother,—you are dying, oh, so fast! I heard father say to mother that he knew you couldn't last.
They will put you in a coffin, then you'll wake and be up there,
While I'm left alone to suffer in this garret bleak and bare."

"Yes, I know it," answered Billy. "Ah, but, sister, I don't mind;
Gentle Jesus will not beat me—he's not cruel or unkind;
But I can't help thinking, Nelly, I would like to take away
Something, sister, that you gave me, I might look at every day.

"In the summer, you remember how the Mission took us out
To the great, green, lovely meadow, where we played and ran about;
And the van that took us halted by a sweet white patch of land,
Where the fine red blossoms grew, dear, half as big as mother's hand.

"Nell, I asked the kind, good teacher, what they called such flowers as those,
And he told me, I remember, that the pretty name was 'roses.'
I have never seen them since, dear,—how I wish that I had one!
Just to keep, and think of you, Nell, when I'm up beyond the sand."

Not a word said little Nelly; but at night, when Billy slept,
On she hung her scanty garments, down the creaking stairs she crept;
Through the silent streets of London she ran nimbly as a fawn,
Running on and running ever, till the night had changed to dawn.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

When the foggy sun had risen, and the mist had cleared away,
All around her, wrapped in snow-drift, there the open country lay;
She was tired, her limbs were frozen, and the roads had cut her feet,
But there came no flower-gardens her keen, hungry eyes to meet.
She had traced the road by asking; she had learnt the way to go;
She had found the famous meadow — it was wrapped in cruel snow;
Not a buttercup or daisy, not a single verdant blade,
Showed its head above its prison. Then she knelt her down and prayed.

With her eyes upcast to heaven, down she sank upon the ground,
And she prayed to God to tell her where the roses might be found.
Then the cold blast numbed her senses, and her sight grew strangely dim,
And a sudden, awful tremor seemed to rack her every limb.

"Oh, a rose!" she moaned, "good Jesus, just a rose to take to Bill!"
Even as she prayed, a chariot came thundering down the hill;
And a lady sat there toying with a red rose, rare and sweet;
As she passed she flung it from her, and it fell at Nelly's feet.
Just a word her lord had spoken caused her ladyship to fret,
And the rose had been his present, so she flung it in a pet;
But the poor, half-blinded Nelly thought it fallen from the skies,
And she murmured, "Thank you, Saviour," as she clasped the daisy prize.

Lo! that night from out the alley did a child's soul pass away
From dirt and sin and misery, to where God's children play.
Lo! that night a wild, fierce snow-storm burst in fury o'er the land,
And at morn they found Nell, frozen, with the red rose in her hand.

Billy's dead and gone to glory — so is Billy's sister Nell;
And I hold, to say this happened in the land where angels dwell:
That the children met in heaven, after all their earthly woes,
And that Nelly kissed her brother, saying, "Billy, here's your rose!"

TOLD AT THE TAVERN.

I can see you're a gentleman; time has been —
Though you wouldn't think it to look at me, dressed
In these beggary rags, and bleated with gin —
I held my head as high as the best.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

Reduc'd? I should say not! Stand a treat —
I'm shaky, you see, and dead for a drink —
And then, if you've time, I'll tell you, complete,
A tale that will quicken your blood, as I think.

I was a countryman born, brought up on a farm
(It fell to my share when the old man died),
Got married at twenty, and little of harm
Was prophesied then of me and my bride.

Things ran along smoothly, and money came in,
And my acres increased as the years went by,
And nothing of sorrow, or care, or sin,
Came thither to trouble my wife and I.

We'd been married, I guess, a dozen of years,
When our only child, a girl, was born.
A husband yourself? You'll pardon my tears,
For the birth at night there was death at morn.

The girl grew up — was the village queen,
Reigning by right of her violet eyes,
Of her cheek's rich bloom, and marvellous sheen
Of the goldenest ringlets under the skies.

Poetical? Ay, but she was a saint,
And her pure, pale brow forever appears
When I tell the tale; and the old-time plaint
Stirs itself to a language of tears.

What gold could buy she had only to ask;
She was all I had, and should I be mean?
To humor her whims was an enviable task;
I'd have sold my soul for my golden-haired queen.

The love I lavished she paid tenfold;
I was all to her as she all to me;
No angel in heaven of gentler mould,
Or tenderer, lovinger heart than she.

But — your pardon again — her girlhood's prime —
Well, the child had no mother, knew nought of sin.
This bunch in my throat — please spare me a dime
To wash it down with a tumbler of gin.

In her beautiful prime the tempter came;
Through such as he the angels fell;
He had wealth of words, and men, and a name —
Ah, he bore the title of "Gentleman" well!

He made long prayers, to be seen of men;
Sinners he urged from the wrath to come;
He met my innocent girl — and then —
Let's mix that gin with a trifle of rum!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

You know it all? Yes, the tale is old,
And worn to threads by poets and priests;
But it’s little you know of the heart I hold —
Of its bitter, blasted, Dead Sea feasts.

Did she die? Of course! To fall was death;
Could the live dishonored, forsaken, betrayed?
Ho! Somewhere, I suppose, his scented breath
Lifts eloquent prayers to Him who made.

Remorse? Ay, ay; to the utmost stretch!
Repentance? Don’t pray, sir, trifle with me;
I could curse whoever would plead for a wreath
So lost to honor and mankind as he!

And so, as you see, I took to drink;
Can you stand another? I’m in your debt:
A pitiful tale! I should rather think!
And true as God’s own gospel, you bet.

THEO. F. HAVEN.

RETRIBUTION.

Here, you, policeman, just step inside;
See this young woman here —
Only just died.
Facts in the case look to be Somewhat peculiar;
Cause of death as you see,
Stabbed in the side.

Me and Maud Myrtle was standing right here,
Takin’ a drink;
In come a loafer, chock full o’ beer,
Leading a little child sweet as a pink;
Not more’n three years old, pretty and bright,
Such little chaps as him’s got for the right of it.
First thing we knowed the villain was rarin’,
An’ cursin’, and swearing,
To make the child drink.

Maud was the nearest by,
Sprung at him with a cry,
Dashed the glass down! Glared the brute’s evil eye,
Wicked his frown.
Quick as the lightning’s gleam
Flashed out the villain’s knife;
Maud gave one gurgling scream
As the steel reached her life —
Tore through her tender side.
So the girl died!

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

Policeman — there she lies,
Resting at last!
Trouble was twined with her;
That is all past!
Her life was hard enough,
Bore on her rather rough;
But to see that peaceful face,
Pale and sweet beneath the light,
Goes to argue that the place
Where she’s travelled to to-night,
Whatso sort of world it is,
Can’t be worse for her than this.

The murderer? Yes!
Vonder he lies;
Dead in the dirt,
Like a dog he lies.
Some says its doubtful if hanging’s played out,
It don’t suit me to admit of a doubt,
Think I’ve wanted! Do you, though?
Well, let’s go.

Daily Graphic.

ONLY JOE.

This grave were ye meanin’, stranger? Oh, there’s nobody much lies here;
It’s only poor Joe, a dazed lad — been dead now better’n a year.
He was nobody’s child, this Joe, sir, — orphaned the hour of his birth,
And simple and dazed all his life, yet the harmlessest creatur on earth.

Some say that he died broken-hearted; but that is all nonsense, you know,
For a body could never do that as were simple and dazed like Joe.
But I’ll tell you the story, stranger, an’ then you can readily see
How easy for some folks to fancy a thing that never could be.

Do you see that grave over yonder? Well, the minister’s daughter lies there;
She were a regular beauty, an’ as good as she were fair.
She’d a nod an’ a kind word for Joe, sir, whenever she passed him by;
But bless ye, that were nothin’ — she could n’t hurt even a fly.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

It warn't very often, I reckon, that people a kind word would say,
For Joe was simple an' stupid, an' alike in somebody's way;
So I 'ope he kind o' loved her; but then that were nothin', you know,
For there was n't a soul in the village but loved her better'n Joe.

An' when Milly took down with consumption, or some such weakness as that,
Joe took on kind o' foolish — there was nothin' for him to cry at;
An' he'd range the woods over for hours for flowers to place by her bed.
An' Milly, somehow or other, kind o' liked his dazed ways, they said.

But when winter was come, she died, sir, an' I well remember the day.
When we carried the little coffin to the old churchyard away;
It was so bitter cold, we were glad when the grave was made.
An' when we were done an' went home, I suppose poor Joe must have stayed;

They found him here the next mornin', lyin' close to the grave, they said.
An' a lookin' like he was asleep; but then, of course, he was dead.
I suppose he got chilled and sleepy — an' how could a body know
How dangerous that kind o' sleep is, as never knew nothin', like Joe?

So they say that he died broken-hearted; but that only shows, do you see,
How easy for some folks to fancy a thing that never could be;
For now you have heard the story, you'll agree with me, stranger, I know,
That a body could never do that, as were simple and dazed, like Joe!

San Francisco, 1874.

JAMES ROHAM REED.

THE OUTCAST'S DREAM.

From morn till noon the golden glow falls
Of bright October sunlight falls
On dewy glades, where fall flowers hide
Behind the dull, dark lichen walls.
From noon till night the slanting rays
Creep through the tangled winter vine,
Where berries fringe the bending sprays,
Like crimson drops of rare old wine.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

From morn till noon, from noon till night,
Relents the earth with jewelled robes,
And fire-flies light the purple dusk
With countless golden glowing globes;
A woman walks through dust and heat,
Until the fleece-like mists of night
End the thin and ilegal form
In trailing robes of bridal white.

Her feet are bruised with jagged stones,
Her tender feet that years ago
Her mother's hands had fondly wrapped
In infant robes of downy snow.
Her pale brow, that mother's lips
Had kissed with mother's kisses pure,
Is racked with pain that only they
Who homeless roam the world endure.

The clear, rich notes of wild birds break
The slumberous calm like Sabbath bells,
And from the branches the thrush's song
In sad, pathetic sweetness swells.
The cool night-air is fragrant with
The scents that rise from dewy flowers,
As by the new moon's waning light
She counts the twilight's fleeting hours.

Her wild, and eyes with wistful glare
Count all the landmarks, one by one,
Until she stands beyond the ridge
Where blossoms catch the morning sun;
And where the plover builds her nest
In meadow grasses lush and long,
And where in girlhood's happy years
She raked the hay, with mother's song.

The old white stone beside the spring
Is there, as white and smooth as when
She filled her pail and mocked the cow
Of blackbirds in the reedy glen.
And when the gates of moan unfold,
She knows the sunbeams drifting down
Will steal through casement's quaint old, and
And snow-white locks with glory crown.

She wanders on to where the spring
Is lost in countless silvery rills,
Then drops asleep, her silvery head
On pillows fringed with daffodills;
While in her dream her mother comes
And strokes her brow with soothing palms
That wash away the marks of shame,
And fill her soul with restful calm.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

She feels warm, quivering kisses on her face
(The dew that heaven kindly sends),
And hears again the dear, brave voice
That gently censures or commends.
The vesper hymns they sang at eve,
The Sabbath chants of humble praise,
Float through her dreams, sweet memories from
The deathless bliss of childhood's days.

Ah! once again she's young and pure;
Ah! once again her sable brow
Is bound with roses rich and red,
Whose hearts with crimson beauty glow;
She hears again the subtle voice
That taught her love's most bitter pain.
On cheek and lips and wrinkled brow
His kisses fall like summer rain.

She cries aloud, her reeking hands
Outstretched to meet each fond caress,
Then sinks in shame to hide her face
In dripping clumps of water-cress.
For what has life for such as her
But tortured thought, undying pain;
And what are dreams but stray chords from
Some old home song or old love strain?

Pittsburgh, 1874.

Olive Bell.

FISHERMAN JOE.

Well, young 'un, you're mighty smooth spoken, an' it all may be as you say,
That God never interferes with us, but lets each one go on his own way;
But when heaven has silvered your locks with the snows of some eighty odd year —
As it has mine, an' always in marcy — you'll regret this wild fancy, I fear.

Just let me spin ye a yarn, sir, as happened a long time ago
to me, an' if such in all luck, why, I hope it'll always hold on;
It's a now nearly threescore summers since this incident happened to me, —
Just after I married my wife, an' settled down here by the sea.

For I was a fisherman born, sir, lovin' always the wild waves
to ride;
They're the type of my life, an' I'm thinkin' that it's now near the ebb o' the tide.
There were three of us then as were partners in the trimmest
an' snug little boat
As ever was true to her colors, just a bright little "Sandbean" avoost.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

We had had a long run o' good luck, sir; wi' the weather as fair as could be,
An' the morrow were goin' again, when the gray light first dawned on the sea.
But before I was fairly turned out, it seemed as I heard something say,
"There's breakers ahead o' ye, Job; don't go on the sea, lad, to-day!"

At first I felt kind o' scared like, but I thought 't was all fancy,
you see,
So I took a good look at the sky; 'tis as clear and as bright
as could be.
But it still seemed to whisper, "Beware!" an' the breeze crept
by stoughin' an' slow,
An' a voice, like a wail for the dead, with each gust seemed to murmur, "Don't go!"

Then I got kind o' settled to think that my naves should serve me that way;
An' I says to myself, "You're an ass, Job, but you'll go for all that, lad, this day!"

So I kissed wife a hasty good-by, an' set off a-hummin' a song,
Till the path took a turn by that cliff at whose foot the sand stretches along.

Then what happened I never could tell; but the first I remember, I know,
The cliff were a prowlin' above me, an' I, stunned and bruised,
down below,
An' my wife kneelin' there by my side, an' lookin' as frightened
as if
I were dead. Says she, "Job, were ye crazy? Ye walked right straight off of the cliff!"

I did n't say much; an', of course, my partners went that day alone;
An' I lay on my bed kind o' happy to find, after all, I'd not gone.
But the strangest of all is yet comin'; for that mornin', as fair
as could be,
Was followed ere noon by a storm as was fairly terrific to see.

We waited in agony, knowin' such a sea the boat could not outside;
An' were thankful when even the bodies were laid at our feet
by the tide,
It's no use in askin' my fate, if that mornin' I only had gone;
An' if such things all happen by luck, why, I hope it'll always hold on.

James Roann Reed.
POOR LITTLE JOE.

Poor yer eyes wide open, Joey,
Fur I've brought you summint' great.
Apples? No, but something better!
Don't you take no interest? Wait!
Flowers, Joey,—I knew you'd like 'em—
Ain't them frumposous? Ain't them high?
Tears, my boy? Won't them fur, Joey?
There — poor little Joe! — don't cry.

I was skippin' past a whinder
Where a bang-up lady sot
All amongst a lot of bushes,
Each one climbin' from a pot;
Every bush had flowers on it—
Pretty? Mebbe! Oh, no!
Wish you could a seen 'em growin',
It was sick a stunnin' show.

Well, I thought of you, poor feller,
Lyin' here so sick and weak,
Never knowin' any comfort,
And I p'rs on lots o' check.

"Missus," says I, "if you please, mum,
Could I ax you for a rose?
For my little brother, missus,
Never seed one, I suppose."

Then I told her all about you —
How I brought yer up, poor Joe!
(Lackin' women-folks to do it)
Such a imp you was, you know,—
Till yer got that awful tumblin',
Just as I had broke yer in (Hard work too) to earn your livin',
Blackin' boots for honest tin.

How that tumblin' crippled o' you,
So's you could n't hyper much,—
Joe, it hurted when I seen you
Fur the first time with yer crutch.
"But," says I, "he's laid up now, num,
Pears to weaken every day!"
Joe, she up and went to cuttin',—
That's the how of this bokey.

Say, it seems to me, ole feller,
Yer is quite yourself to-night;
Kind o' chirk; it's been a fortnight
Since yer eyes has been so bright.

Better? Well, I'm glad to hear it.
Yea, they're mighty pretty, Joe.
Smellin' of 'em's made you happy?
Well, I thought it would, you know.

Never seed the country, did you?
Flowers growin' everywhere!

Sometimes, when you're better, Joey,
Mebbe I kin take you there.
Flowers in heaven? "M—I s'pose so;
Don't know much about it, though;
Ain't as fly as what I might be
On them topics, little Joe.

But I've heard it hinted, somewhere,
That in heaven's golden gates
Things is everlasting cheerful,—
Believe that's not the bible states.
Likewise, there folks don't get hungry;
So good people when they dies
Finds themselves well fixed forever —
Joe, my boy, wot all yer eyes?

Thought they looked a little singler.
Oh, no! Don't you have no fear;
Heaven was made for such as you is —
Joe, what makes you look so queer?
Here — wake up! Oh, don't look that way!
Joe! My boy! Hold up your head!
Here's your flowers — you dropped 'em, Joey —
Oh, my God! Can Joe be dead?

THE CURTAIN FALLS.

Clowns are capering in motley, drums are beating, trumpets blown,
Laughing crowds block up the gangway — husky is the showman's tone.
Rapidly the booth is filling, and the rustics wait to hear
A cadaverous strolling player who will presently appear.

Once his voice in tones of thunder shook the crazy caravan;
Now he entered pale and gasping, and no sentence gibbly ran;
Sad and vacant were his glances, and his memory seemed to fail.
While with feeble effort striving to recall Othello's tale.
O'er his wasted form the spangles glittered in the lamp's chill ray;
Ebony tresses, long and curling, covered scanty locks of gray;
Rouge and powder hid the traces of the stern, relentless years,
As gay flowers hide a ruin, tottering are its disappearances.

Not with age, serenely ebbling to the everlasting sea,
Calmingly dreaming of past pleasures, or of mysteries to be;
Nay, the melancholy stroller kept his onward pilgrimage,
Until Death, the palely prompter, called him from life's dusky stage.

Lofty hopes and aspirations all had faded with his youth,
And for daily bread he acted now in yonder canvas booth;
Yet there flashed a fire heroic from his visage worn and grave;
Deeper, fuller came his accents—Man was master, Time was slave.

And again with force and feeling he portrayed the loving Moor;
Told the story to the Senate—told the pangs which they endure
Who are torn with jealous passion,—while delightedly the crowd
Watched the stroller's changing aspect, and applauded him aloud.

Was it but a trick of acting to depict a frenzied mood,
That there came a sudden silence, and Othello voiceless stood?
Ah, 'twas all Othello's story Nature left the power to tell—
'Twas his own sad drama ending as the dark-green curtains fell.

While they shouted for the stroller, and the hero's fate would see,
He had made his final exit—joined a higher company,
With no loving kiss at parting, with no friend to press his hand,
The invisible scene-shifter had unveiled the spirit-band.

Husker still became the showman as he forward came and bowed,
Vaguely muttering excuses to appease the gaping crowd;
Then he knelt beside the stroller, but his words were lost on air—
Nevermore uprose the curtain on the figure lying there.

One brief hour their cares forgetting, his old comrades of the show
Stood around his grave in silence, and some honest tears did flow.
Then the booth again was opened, crammed with many a rustic boor,
And another strolling player told the story of the Moor.

_The Nation's Magazine._

JOSEPH VEEY.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

The boy returns with humble presents laden,
For on the morrow is his wedding morn;
To the old church he hopes to lead the maiden
Whose head now rests his mother's breast upon.
Now Hannah drops her cheek, the maiden presses,—
"He will return when come the morning hours,
And he will greet thee with his fond caresses,
And thou shalt meet him disdained with flowers."

Sweet Bay Chaleur!

Gray was the morning, but a light more tender
Parted at last the storm-cloud's lingering glooms;
The sun looked forth in mellowness and splendor,
Drying the leaves amid the gonian blooms.
And wrecks came drifting to the sandy reaches,
As inward rolled the tide with sullen roar;
The fishermen waded o'er the sea-washed beaches,
And gathered fragments as they reached the shore
Of Bay Chaleur.

Then Alice, with the village maidens running
Upon the beaches where the breakers swirl,
Bathed a fragment 'mid the waters foaming,
And found a casket overlaid with pearl.

It was a treasure. "Happy he who claimed it."
A maiden said, "It is worthy of a bride."
Another said, "The ocean's dowry" named it;
But gently Alice, weeping, turned aside,—
Sad Bay Chaleur!

And went to Hannah with the new-found treasure,
And stood beside the old arm-chair;
The maidens stood round her, radiant with pleasure,
And playfully wove the gentians in her hair.
Then Hannah said, her feelings ill dissembling,
"Some sailor lad this treasure once possessed;
And now, perhaps," she added, pale and trembling,
"His form lies sleeping 'neath the ocean's breast,
In Bay Chaleur."

Now on her knees the opened box she places,—
Her trembling hand falls helpless on her breast;
Into her face look up two pictured faces,
The faces that her sailor-boy loved best.
One picture bears the written words, "My mother."
Old Hannah drops her wrinkled cheek in pain;
"Alice," sweet name, is writ beneath the other—
Old Hannah's tears fall over it like rain.

Dark Bay Chaleur!

The spring will come, the purple swallows bringage,
The green leaves glitter where the gold leaves fell;
But nevermore the time of flowers and singing
Will hope revive in her poor heart to dwell.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

Life ne'er had brought to her so dark a chalice,
But from her lips escaped no bitter moan;
They, and the gentians, made the grave of Alice,
And Hannah lives in her old cot alone.

by Bay Chaleur.

THE NEW MAGDALEN.

The Memphi Appeal, a short time ago, told the story of a fallen woman of that place, Mollie Cooke by name, who, owning a glittering palace of stone, turned it into a hospital for the yellow-fever sufferers; and with her hands washed the sick and dying back to life again, until at last, wearied and exhausted with the long watching, she too fell a prey to the fever. I am told that a marble shaft, the gift of the city, marks her last resting-place in the churchyard there; and it seems but a fitting tribute to one who gave all she had—her life—to redeem the errors of the past.

The yellow death came stealing
Up from the river's edge;
Up from the dark, dark marshes,
With its tangled fringe of sedge;
Up from the misty bayous,
On the south wind's tainted breath,—
Till the skies grew dark at Memphis
With the shadowy wings of death.

The air grew dense and silent,
The wild bird ceased its song,
And strong men cried in anguish,
"How long, O God, how long?"
But the skies gave back no answer,
Death's pitiless scythe still swung,
And the harvest the reaper gathered
Was a harvest of old and young.

The bale in the cradle sleeping,
In the flush of morning light,
With a smile of dimpled features,
In a cotton sheet at night;
And the man who knelt at evening,
Thanking God for the strength he gave,
Lay down to sleep at dawning
In the cold and narrow grave.

The pavements only echoed
To the wheels of the passing hearse,
As it bore to the silent city
The victims of the curse;
And the voice of the stricken mourners,
Who heard not the rustling wing
But saw on the sleeper's forehead
The seal of the saffron king.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Then out from the gilded palace
Of sorrow, and sin, and shame,
Clad in the robes of scarlet,
A fallen woman came;
And the song of the noisy revel
Gave place in its stately hall
To a prayer for the sick and dying,
And a woman's soft footfall:
Back from death's dark portal,
From the verge of an unseen land,
Came many a wandering mortal,
At the touch of that woman's hand;
Till the fever, wrathful, sullen,
Teach'd her with his tainted breath,
And asleep, in snowy garment,
She lay in the arms of death.
Oh, girl with the jeweled fingers,
Oh, maid with the laces rare,
Will that woman's grand action
Count less than thy studied prayer?
Have the angels, looking earthward,
A love more tender seen
Than that of this fallen woman,—
The true new Magdalen? —
R. L. Casey, Jr.

FOR LIFE AND DEATH.

"Not fair to be done," — eh? — It was that he said.—
The doctor, as you stopped him at the door? —
Nay, never try to smile and shake thy head,
I could ha' told thee just as well afore.
I have a lived these thirty year to want
Parrons or women telling what is nigh
When the pulse hovers, and the breath is scant,
And all grows dim before the glazing eye.
I felt that something gave, here, at my heart,
In that last tussle down there on the Scars;
Nay, never cry, fond lassie as thou art,
Then will do fine without me — better far.
Thou'st been a good and patient wife to me
Since that spring day, last year, when we were wed;
I never meant so cold and strange to be:
Come, and I'll tell thee. Sit here by my bed.
So, where the sunshine rests upon thy hair,
It shows almost as smooth and bright as hers
The girl I wooed in Dunkerque, over there—
Fin, how the thought the slackening life-blood stirs!
THE HUMBLER POETS.

TO-MORROW.

The setting sun, with dying beams,
Had walked the purple hill to fire,
And cielde and dome and spire
Were gilded by the faroff gleams;
And in and out dark pine-trees crept
Full many a slender thread of gold;
Gold shafts athwart the river sweet,
And kissed it as it onward rolled;
And sunlight lingered, loath to go;
Ah, well! it causeth sorrow
To part from those we love below;
And yet the sun as bright shall glow
To-morrow.

Two hearts have met to say farewell
At even when the sun went down;
Each life-sound from the bassy town
Snores sadly as a passing bell.
One whispered, "Parting is sweet pain —
At mom and eve returns the tide;
" Nay, parting rends the heart in twain,
And still they linger side by side;
And still they linger, loath to go;
Ah, well! it causeth sorrow
To part from those we love below —
For shall we ever meet or no,
To-morrow?

DRIFTED OUT TO SEA.

Two little ones, grown tired of play,
Roamed by the sea, one summer day,
Watching the great waves come and go,
Frattling, as children will, you know,
Of dolls and marbles, kites and strings;
Sometimes hinting at graver things.

But she — No cloud on her bright life should rest
An I could ward it; love and hate at strife
A moment, then, snatched from the breaker's crest,
I dragged him, stunned and bleeding, back to life.
Somehow I buri myself, and so it's over,
And better so for all. Thou it rear the lad
To make some Yorkshire lass an honest lover,
Nor tell him all the wrong his mother had;
And sometimes, for thou're kind; when stars are out,
In the green country, where no tempests lower,
Thou it say, "Thy father had his faults, no doubt,
But still he died to save his bitterest foe."

With a Story to Tell.

At last they spied within their reach
An old boat cast upon the beach;
Helter-skelter, with merry din,
Over its sides they scrambled in—
Ben, with his tangled, nut-brown hair,
Bess, with her sweet face flushed and fair.

Rolling in from the briny deep,
Nearer, nearer, the great waves creep,
Higher, higher, upon the sands,
Reaching out with their giant hands,
Grasping the boat in boisterous glee,
Tossing it up and out to sea.

The sun went down, 'mid clouds of gold;
Night came, with footsteps damp and cold;
Day dawned; the hours crept slowly by;
And now across the sunny sky
A black cloud stretches far away,
And shuts the golden gates of day.

A storm comes on, with flash and roar,
While all the sky is shrouded o'er;
The great waves, rolling from the west,
Bring night and darkness on their breast.
Still floats the boat through driving storm,
Protected by God's powerful arm.

The home-bound vessel, "Sea-bird," lies
In ready trim, 'twixt sea and skie:
Her captain races, restless now,
A troubled look upon his brow,
While all his nerves with terror thrill,—
The shadow of some coming ill.

The mate comes up to where he stands,
And grasps his arm with eager hands.
"A boat has just swept past," says he,
"Bearing two children out to sea;
'T is dangerous now to put about,
Yet they cannot be saved without!"

"Nought but their safety will suffice!
They must be saved!" the captain cries
"By every thought that's just and right,
By lips I hoped to kiss to-night,
I'll peril vessel, life, and men,
And God will not forsake us then."

With anxious faces, one and all,
Each man responded to the call;
THE HUMBLER POETS.

And when at last, through driving storm,
They lifted up each little form,
The captain started, with a grooms:
"My God is good, they are my own!"

RISA HARTWICK THORPE
(Author of "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night").

TWO.

We two will stand in the shadow here,
To see the bride as she passes by;
Ring soft and low, ring loud and clear,
Ye chasting bells that swing on high!

Look! look! she comes! The air grows sweet
With the fragrant breath of the orange-blooms,
And the flowers she treads beneath her feet
Die in a flood of rare perfumes!

She comes! she comes! The happy bells
With their joyous claxon fill the air,
While the great organ dies and swells,
Soaring to trembling heights of prayer!

Oh! rare are her robes of silken sheen,
And the pearls that glisten on her bosom's snow;
But rarer the grace of her royal mien,
Her hair's fine gold, and her cheek's young glow.

Dainty and fair as a folded rose,
Fresh as a violet dewy sweet,
Chaste as a lily, she hardly knows
That there are rough paths for other feet.
For Love hath shielded her; Honor kept
Watch beside her night and day;
And Evil out from her sight hath crept,
Trailing its slow length far away.

Now in her perfect womanhood,
In all the wealth of her matchless charms,
Lovely and beautiful, pure and good,
She yields herself to her lover's arms.
Hark! how the jubilant voices ring!
Lo! as we stand in the shadow here,
While far above us the gay bells swing,
I catch the gleam of a happy tear!

The pageant is over. Come with me
To the other side of the town, I pray,
Ere the sun goes down in the darkening sea,
And night falls around us, chill and gray.

WITH A STORY TO TELL.

In the dim church porch an hour ago
We waited the bride's fair face to see;
Now life has a sadder sight to show,
A darker picture for you and me.

No need to seek for the shadow here,
There are shadows lurking everywhere:
These streets in the brightest days are drear,
And black as the blackness of despair.
But this is the house. Take heed, my friend,
The stairs are rotten, the way is dim;
And up the flights, as we still ascend,
Creep, stealthily, phantom dark and grim.

Enter this chamber. Day by day,
Alone in this chill and ghostly room,
A child — a woman — which is it, pray? —
Despairingly walks for the hour of doom!
Ah! as she wrings her hands so pale,
No gleam of a wedding-ring you see;
There's nothing to tell. You know the tale —
God help her now in her misery!

I dare not judge her. I only know
That love was to her a sin and a snare,
While to the bride of an hour ago
It brought all blessings its hands could bear!
I only know that to one it came
Laden with honor and joy and peace;
Its gifts to the other were woe and shame,
And a burning pain that shall never cease.

I only know that the soul of one
Has been a pearl in a golden case;
That of the other a pebble thrown
Idly down in a wayside place,
Where all day long strange footsteps trod,
And the bold, bright sun drank up the dew!
Yet both were women. O righteous God,
Thou only canst judge between the two!

THE COURT OF BERLIN.

King Frederick, of Prussia, grew nervous and ill
When pacing his chamber one day,
Because of the sound of a crazy old mill
That clattered so over the way.
"Ho, miller!" cried he, "what sum shall you take
In lieu of that wretched old shell?
It angers my brain and it keeps me awake."
Said the miller, "I want not to sell."

"But you must," said the king, in a passion for once.
"But I won't," said the man, in a heat.
"God! this to my face! Ye are daft, or a dunce —
We can raz your old mill with the street."

"Ay, true, my good sire, if such be your mood,
Then answered the man with a grin;
"But never you'll move it the tenth of a rood
As long as a court's in Berlin."

"Good, good," said the king, — for the answer was grand,
As opposing the Law to the Crown, —
"We bow to the court, and the mill shall stand,
Though even the palace come down."

Frankfort Yeoman.

PART XII.

Parting and Absence.
Why, why repine, my friend,
At pleasures split away?
Some the stern Fates will never lend,
And all refuse to stay.

I see the rainbow in the sky,
The dew upon the grass,—
I see them, and I ask not why
They glisten or they pass.

With folded arms I linger not
To call them back: "t were vain;
In this or in some other spot
I know they'll shine again.

WALTER S. LANDOR.

PART XII.

Parting and Absence.

"GOOD-BY."

We say it for an hour or for years;
We say it smiling, say it choked with tears;
We say it coldly, say it with a kiss;
And yet we have no other word than this,—
"Good-by."

We have no dearer word for our heart's friend,
For him who journeys to the world's far end,
And scars our soul with going; thus we say,
As unto him who steps out over the way,—
"Good-by."

Alike to those we love and those we hate,
We say no more in parting. At life's gate,
To him who passes out beyond earth's sight,
We cry, as to the wanderer for a night,—
"Good-by."

PARTING.

If thou dost bid thy friend farewell,
But for one night though that farewell may be,
Press thou his hand in thine,
How canst thou tell how far from thee
Fare or caprice may lead his steps ere to-morrow comes?
Men have been known to lightly turn the corner of a street,
And days have grown to months, and months to lagging years,
Ere they have looked in loving eyes again.
Parting, at best, is underlaid
With tears and pain.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Therefore, lest sudden death should come between,
Or time, or distance, clasp with pressure firm
The hand of him who goeth forth;
Unseen, Fate goeth too.
Yea, find thou always time to say some earnest word
Between the idle talk,
Lest with thee henceforth,
Night and day, regret should walk.

COVENTRY PATMORE.

FAREWELL.

The crimson sunset faded into gray;
Upon the murmurous sea the twilight fell;
The last warm breath of the delicious day
Passed with a mute farewell.
Above my head in the soft purple sky
A wild note sounded like a shrill-voiced bell;
Three gulls met, wheeled, and parted with a cry
That seemed to say, "Farewell!"
I watched them; one sailed east and one soared west
And one went flitting south; while like a knell
That mournful cry the empty sky possessed,
"Farewell, farewell, farewell!"
"Farewell!" I thought; it is earth's one sad speech,—
All human voices the sad chorus swell;
Though mightiest love to heaven's high gates may reach,
Yet must he say, "Farewell!"
The rolling world is girdled with the sound,
Perpetually breathed from all who dwell
Upon its bosom, for no place is found
Where is not heard, "Farewell!"
"Farewell, farewell,"—from wave to wave 'tis tossed,
From wind to wind; earth has one tale to tell;
All other sounds are dulled and drowned and lost,
In this one cry, "Farewell!"

Atlantic Monthly.

ONLY.

And this is the end of it all! it rounds the year's completeness;
Only a walk to the stile, through fields afoam with sweetness;
Only the sunset light, purple and red on the river;
And a lingering, low good-night, that means good-by forever.

PARTING AND ABSENCE.

So be it! and God be with you! It had been perhaps more kind,
Had you sooner (pardon the word) been sure of knowing your mind.
We can hear so much in youth—who cares for a swift, sharp pain?
And the two-edged sword of truth cuts deep, but it leaves no stain.
I shall just go back to my work—my little household cares,
That never make any show. By time, perhaps in my prayers,
I may think of you! For the rest, on this way we've trodden together.
My foot shall fall as lightly as if my heart were a feather,
And not a woman's heart, strong to have and to keep,
Patient when children cry, soft to lull them to sleep,
Hiding its secrets close, glad when another's hand
Finds for itself a gem where hers found only sand.

Good-by! The year has been bright. As oft as the blossoms come,
The peach with its waxen pink, the waving snow of the plum,
I shall think how I used to watch, so happy to see you pass,
I could almost kiss the print of your foot on the dewy grass.
I am not ashamed of my love! Yet I would not have yours now,
Though you laid it down at my feet; I could not stoop so low.
A love is but half a love that contents itself with less
Than love's utmost faith and truth and unwavering tenderness.
Only this walk to the stile; this parting word by the river,
That flows so quiet and cold, ebbing and flowing forever.
"Good-by!" Let me wait to hear the last, last sound of his feet!
Ah me! but I think in this life of ours the bitter outweighs the sweet.
The Argosy.

BEFORE SAILING.

Lend closer, darling, let thy tender heart
Beat against mine that aches with heavy woe;
Drop thy quick woman's tears to soothe thy smart.
Ah me! that I could ease my sorrow so!
But man must work, sweetheart, and women weep,
So says the song, so runs the world's behast;
Yet time will pass, and tender comfort creep
With hope in company unto thine breast.
Now ere we part, while yet on lip and cheek
Close kisses linger, clinging, passionate,
GOOD-NIGHT.

GOOD-NIGHT, dear friend! I say good-night to thee
Across the moonbeams, tremulous and white,
Bridging all space between us, it may be
Lean low, sweet friend; it is the last good-night.

For, lying low upon my couch, and still,
The fever flush vanished from my face,
I heard them whisper softly, "Tis His will;
Angels will give her happier resting-place!"

And so from sight of tears that fell like rain,
And sounds of sobbing smothered close and low,
I turned my white face to the window-pane,
To say good-night to thee before I go.

Good-night! good-night! I do not fear the end,
The conflict with the billows dark and high;
And yet, if I could touch thy hand, my friend,
I think it would be easier to die;

If I could feel through all the quiet waves
Of my deep hair thy tender breath a thrill,
I could go downward to the place of graves
With eyes ashine and pale lips smiling still;

Or it may be that, if through all the strife
And pain of parting I should hear thy call,
I would come singing back to sweet, sweet life,
And know no mystery of death at all.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Faith came at last, storm-beat and torn —
She recompensed me all my loss;
For, as a cargo safe, she brought
A crown linked to a cross.

---

HOPE DEFERRED.

His hand at last! By his own fingers writ,
I catch my name upon the wayworn sheet:
His hand — oh, reach it to me quick! And yet,
Scarce can I hold, so fast my pulses beat.

O feast of soul! O banquet richly spread!
O passion-lettered scroll from the sea!
Like a fresh burst of life to one long dead,
Joy, strength, and bright content come back with thee,

Long prayed and waited for through months so drear;
Each day methought my waiting heart must break;
Why is it that our loved ones grow more dear
The more we suffer for their sweetest sake?

His hand at last! Each simple word aglow
With truthfull tenderness and promise sweet.
Now to my daily tasks I'll singing go,
Fed by the music of this wayworn sheet.

---

FATE.

As two proud ships upon the pathless main
Meet once and never hope to meet again,—
Meet once with merry signalings, and part,
Each homeward bound to swell the crowded mart,
So we two met, one golden summer day,
Within the shelter of life's dreaming bay,
And rested, calmly anchored from the world,
For one brief hour, with snowy pinions furled;
But when the sun sank low along the west,
We left our harbor, with its peaceful rest,
And floated outward in life's tangled sea
With foam-kissed waves between us, wild and free.

As two ships part upon the trackless main,
So we two parted. Shall we meet again?

---

THOUGH LOST TO SIGHT, TO MEMORY DEAR.

_Sweetheart, good-by!_ The fluttering sail
Is spread to waft me far from thee,
And soon before the favoring gale
My ship shall bound upon the sea.

_Perchance, all desolate and forlorn,
These eyes shall miss thee many a year,
But unforgotten every charm,—_

_though lost to sight, to memory dear._

_Sweetheart, good-by!_ one last embrace!
_O cruel Fate, true souls to sever!
Yet in this heart's most sacred place
_Thou, thou alone shalt dwell forever!
And still shall recollection trace,
_In Fancy's mirror, ever near,
Each smile, each tear, that form, that face,—_

_though lost to sight, to memory dear._

_Verses written in an old memorandum-book.
The author unknown._

---

HIS MESSENGER.

_Marjorie, with the walking face,_
_Marjorie, with the pale brown hair,_
_She slits and sews in the silent place._
_She counts the steps on the outer stair._
_Two, three, four — they pass her door,_
The patient face droops low again,
_She's as it was before —_
_Oh! will he come indeed no more,_
_And are her prayers all prayed in vain?_

Through the warm and the winter night,
Marjorie, with the wistful eyes,
She keeps her lonely lamp alight
Until the stars are dim in the skies.

Through the gray and the shining day
Her pallid fingers, swift and slim,
Set their stitches, nor one astray,
_Dwight her heart it is far away,_
_Over the summer seas with him._

Over the distant summer seas
_Marjorie's yearning fancy fly;_
_She feels the kiss of the inland breeze,_
_She sees the blue of the tropic sky._
Does she know, as they come and go,
Those waves that lap the Island shore,
That under their ceaseless ebb and flow
Golden locks float to and fro,—
Tangled locks she will comb no more?

Many a hopeless hope she keeps,
Marjorie with the aching heart;
Sometimes she smiles, and sometimes she weeps,
At thoughts that all unbidden start.
I can see what the end will be:
Some day when the Master sends for her,
A voice she knows will say joyfully,
"God is waiting for Marjorie;"
And her lover will be his messenger.

PART XIII.

Tragedy and Sorrow.
PART XIII.

Tragedy and Sorrow.

THE ASH POOL.

Take wind sobs o'er the sodden leas,
And walks through the branches of leafless trees,
As mourning the seeds in the fallow lost,
And the pale buds peeping to die in the frost,
When Winter asserts his lingering reign,
And his sceptre glitters on hill and plain.
Drearily meadows and uplands lie
'Neath the low long sweep of sullen sky,
And, sad and still as the hushed green yule,
'Neath the straggling boughs lies the Great Ash Pool.

Black and cold, and stagnant and deep,
No silvery fins from its waters leap;
No brown-winged flutter, no pattering feet,
Told that life in its banes finds safe retreat;
No lily-buds to its surface cling,
But docken and nightshade around it spring;
The very trees that about it stand
Are twisted and gnarled as by witches' hand,
And the ghost of a story of sin and tale
Like a mist hangs over the Great Ash Pool.

When June's soft magic is on the earth,
And the rose and the violet spring to birth,
When the bright beaks dance 'neath the bright leaves' shade,
And the wild birds carol from glen and glade,
Not a sunbeam glints on its breast to play,
Not a murmur welcomes the golden day,
No children loiter beside its brink,
No shy fawn lingers its wave to drink;
The old tree's shadow is deep and cool,
Yet no lovers keep tryst at the Great Ash Pool.
Yet once by its waters wild vows were spoken,
In passion heard and in falsehood broken,
Two bright heads over its margin beat,
When the moon to its depths soft radiance lent;
A little while and one face lay there,
With its blue eyes glazed in their last despair,—
Eyes that stared upward through weed and slime,
With their story of sorrow, and shame, and crime;
So, in glory of summer, or gladness of Yul,
A curse hangs over the Great Ash Pool.

ACCURSED.

PAL I D white the moonlight gloweth
Through the shadows weird and dim;
Mournfully the river floweth
Past the cedars gaunt and grim.
Soft across the twilight bar,
In the rose light air,
Like a gem of antique splendor,
Gleams the mystic Eastern star.

Once o'er Judah's hill of purple
Shone the star like living flame;
Through her valleys, green and fertile,
Came the echo of His name.
In those years so long ago—
In religion's blessed dawn,
On my head the black curse falleth—
"Ever—evermore move on."

Eighteen hundred years I've wandered,—
And my eyes are dimmed with tears,—
Seeking death where storms have thundered,
With a heart unknown to fears.
Years may come and years may go
In their vast eternal flow,
But upon my vague, wild wanderings
Still my weary feet must go.

Shivering's the night wind wafteth
Sibilant dirges of my doom.
And the gold of evening paleth—
Fadeth into deeper gloom.
"Neath the star I kneel and cry,
"Mercy, mercy, Thou on high!
Thou whose heart is filled with pity,
List to my despairing cry!"

Sacramento Union, 1874.

---

SLANDER.

'T was but a breath—
And yet the fair, good name was wilted;
And friends once fond grew cold and stilled.
And life was worse than death.

One venomed word,
That struck its coward, poisoned blow,
In craven whispers, hushed and low—
And yet the wide world heard.

'T was but one whisper— one,
That muttered low, for very shame,
The thing the slanderer dare not name—
And yet its work was done.

A hint so slight,
And yet so mighty in its power,
A human soul in one short hour
Lies crushed beneath its blight.

---

CALUMNY.

A whisper woke the air,
A soft, light tone and low,
Yet hushed with shame and woe.
Ah! might it only perish there,
Nor farther go.

But no, a quick and eager ear
Cought up the little, meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear,
And so it wandered round
From ear to lip, from lip to ear,
Until it reached a gentle heart
That thrilled from all the world apart,
And that—it broke.

---

THE OUTCAST.

BL E AK winds of the winter, sobbing and moaning,
Pluck not my rage with your pitiless hand;
Here in the darkness, cold and despairing,
Homeless, and friendless, and starving I stand.
Scoured by the white, icy whips of the tempest,
I wander forlorn on my desolate way.
Forgotten of earth and forsaken of Heaven,
Too frozen to kneel and too hungry to pray.

I look at the stately and palace-like dwellings
That line their grandeur the pathway I tread;
I fancy the brightness and warmth of the hearthstone,
The plentiful board with the wine and the bread;
I see the heads bowed with a reverent meaning,
A blessing is breathed o'er the sumpituous fare;
Will it rise to the ear of the pitiful Father,
Or die of the cold, like the vagabond's prayer?

Hark! Midnight. The chime from the church-tower above me
Drops solemnly down through the whirl of the storm;
If one could pass through the gate to the portal,
Could sleep there, and dream it was lighted and warm!

Give away, cruel bars! Let me through to a refuge!
Give away! But I rave, and the fierce winds reply:
"No room in his house for his vagabond children,
No room in his porch for an outcast to die."

No room in his dwelling — no room in the churches,
No room in the prison — for hunger is no crime;
Is there room in the bed of the river, I wonder,
Deep down by the pier in the ooze and the slime?
Mock on, taunting wind! I can laugh back an answer,
An hour, and your bitterest breath I defy:
Since bars shut me out of God's house among mortals,
I will knock at the gate of his home in the sky!

MARY E. RITTER.

DESERTED.

Cold! So cold! and the night looks down
On a shivering form in a tattered gown,
On a lone, lone heart, and a pair of eyes
Abrim with life's keen miseries.
Kiss on kiss
By the flakes are told,
Kiss on kiss —
But oh! so cold.
Even the touch that ought to bless
Mocketh the wanderer's wretchedness.

How can the loved in the land of light
Peer through the dismal deeps of night,
With never a star to break the gloom,
Or sweep one cloud from the path of doom?

Flake on flake
O'er vale and hill,
Flake on flake
With touch so chill —
With touch that sinks like the shaft of hate
Deep in the heart so desolate.

"Cold! so cold!" and the ruddy glare
Of lights that glist in the frosty air
Reddens each flake that falls upon
A hapless, homeless, friendless one;
Drop by drop
Of the blood-red snow,
Drop by drop
In the cup of woe —
A chalice filled for Wan's pale bride,
A pauper's feast for a Christmas-tide.

Joy sails out on the winter's wings,
And tuned for self is the lay she sings;
Its echoes drift with the icy air,
And mock the sufferer's piteous prayer;
Wave on wave
With the night wind strong,
Wave on wave
Of the bitter song
That floats where the sails of hope are furled,
And crowns the wounds of a heartless world.

"Cold! so cold!" Not the cutting blast,
Nor the frosty cloak of the night-cloud cast,
But the cramped, uppitying hearts that heat
The rhymed life in the thronging street.
Throb on throb
With the chime of pelf,
Throb on throb
To the song of self,
But not one pulse to the measure sweet,
That times the love at the mercy-seat.

The night wears on, and the moon sails out,
And the clouds sweep back to the realms of doubt,
And the stars look down for the shivering form
That braved the threats of the cruel storm.
Fold on fold
Is the mantle white,
Fold on fold
'Neath the eyes of night;
The drifts are still on the winter's breath,
And the spotless robe is the wing of death.
ONLY A WOMAN.

Only a woman, shrivelled and old!
The play of the winds and the prey of the cold!
Cheeks that are sunken,
Eyes that are sunken,
Lips that were never o'erbald;
Only a woman, forlorn and poor,
Asking an alms at the bronze church-door.

Hark to the organ! roll upon roll
The waves of its music go over the soul!
Silks rustle past her
Thicker and faster;
The great bell ceases its toil.
Fain would she enter, but not for the poor
Swingeth wide open the bronze church-door.

Only a woman — waiting alone,
Icy cold on an ice-cold throne.
What do they care for her?
Mumbling a prayer for her,
Giving not bread but a stone.
Under old laces their laughingly hearts beat,
Mocking the woes of their kin in the street!

Only a woman! In the old days
Hope carolled to her, her happiest lays;
Somebody kissed her,
Somebody kissed her with praise;
Somebody faced up the battles of life,
Somebody crowned her when was mother or wife.

Somebody lies with a tress of her hair
Light on his heart where the death-shadows are;
Somebody waits for her,
Opening the gates for her,
Giving delight for despair.

Only a woman — nevermore poor
Dead in the snow at the bronze church-door!

BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

(As originally written, December, 1852.)

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Falling so lightly,
Dally and nightly,
Alike round the dwellings of lofty and low.
Horses are prancing,
Cheerily dancing,
Stirred by the spurt that comes from the snow.

TRAGEDY AND SORROW.

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Up at the dawning,
In the cold morning,
Children exult, though the winds fiercely blow;
Hailing the snowflakes
Falling as day breaks —
Joyful they welcome the beautiful snow.

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Childhood's quick glances
See the bright fancies
Decking the window-panes softly and slow;
Forest and city,
Figure so pretty,
Left by the magical fingers of snow.

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Atmosphere chilling,
Carriage-wheels stilling,
Warming the cold earth, and kindling the glow
Of Christian pity
For the great city
Of wretched creatures who starve 'mid the snow.

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Fierce winds blowing,
Thickly 'tis snowing!

Night gathers round us — how warm then the glow
Of the fire so bright,
On the cold winter night,
As we draw in the curtains to shut out the snow.

Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow!
Round the bright funeral,
In the long eventide,
Closely we gather though keen the winds blow;
Safely defended,
Kindly befriended,
Pity the homeless exposed to the cold, by snow.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

Out the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and the earth below!
Over the house-tops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet,
Dancing,
Flirting,
Skimming along.

Beautiful snow! it can do no wrong.
The veriest wretch that goes shivering by
Will take a wide sweep, lest I wander too nigh.
For all that is on or about me, I know,
There is nothing that's pure but the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
Should fall on a sinner with nowhere to go!
How strange it would be, when the night comes again,
If the snow and the ice struck my desperate brain!

Painting,
Freezing,
Dying alone,
Too wicked for prayer, too weak for my moan.
To be heard in the crash of the crazy town,
Gone mad in its joy at the snow's coming down;
To lie and to die in my terrible woe,
With a bed and a shroud of beautiful snow!

Helpless and frail as the trampled-on snow,
Sinner, despair not—Christ stoopeth low
To rescue the soul that is lost in its sin,
And raise it to life and enjoyment again.

Groaning,
Bleeding,
Dying for thee,
The Crucified hung on the accursed tree.
His accents of mercy fall soft on my ear;
Is there mercy for me, will he heed my weak prayer?
O God, in the stream that for sinners doth flow,
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

JAMES W. WATSON.

SISTER MADELEINE.

The blessed hush of eventide
Over the weary city fell,
And softly pealed the vesper-bell
Across the waters dim and wide,
Breathing a sacred spell.

Across the waters wide and dim,
And through the dusty, murky street,
The chimes passed on, with silver feet:
Chords of the never-silent hymn
With which the air doth beat.

They pulsed across the silent space
Which closed the old cathedral in,
And rang remotely through the din
That still was in the market-place,
With echoes faint and thin.
The humbler poets.

One of the bustling, careless throng
Listened apart, with low-bowed head;
A toiler, he, for daily bread,—
What time had such to heed the song?
Why works he not instead?

A far-off look is in his eyes,
He seemeth nothing that is near,
He only doth those bell-tones hear,
Soft ringing through the purple skies,
Distant, but ever dear.

Oh, happy magic of their chime!
The dreams of youth again enthrall;
That time-worn spirit, growing old
Too early in this alien clime,
Where hearts as snow are cold.

But fairest of the treasures sweet
By memory brought from their dim place,
Shineth the vision of a face
For angel habitations meet
In its transcendent grace.

He saw her as she used to stand,
With parted lips and lifted eyes,
Watching the wondrous sunset skies,
And pointing, with her slender hand,
Towards their changeful dyes.

Ah, what can give the world release
From under thraldom of this pain,
That life can never know again
The rapturous joy, the trust and peace
Of youth's departed train?

But not of this he thought to-night:
The happy days of long ago
Were round him, with unfaded glow;
The flowers as fresh, the skies as bright,
As those he used to know.

More deep and dark the shadows grew,
The bells last echoes died away
Within the heavens still and gray.
The peace of night seemed sweet and new
After the toilful day.

But lo! a sudden, blinding glare
Shot upward in the northern sky;
And loud and sharp rang out a cry
That human seemed in its despair,—
The bells of Trinity.

Tragedy and Sorrow.

Which but a few short hours ago
Breathed their good-night so tenderly
Over the quiet earth and sea,
And faded with the sunset glow
Peaceful exceedingly.

But now across the night they ring
With a wild terror and despair
That thrills through all the fearful air,
Till the wide heavens seem shuddering
With the impassioned prayer.

And human hearts have heard the call:
Thousands are thronging up the steep
Whereon the gray old tower doth keep
Its steadfast vigil over all
Within its shade as deep.

Too late, too late the help had come,
The flames were curling everywhere,
And, fainting in the scorching air,
The very bells at last were dumb
In uttermost despair.

But in the silence that succeeds
The sudden hushing of the bells,
One awful human cry upswells,
And a lamenting heart but bleeds
For her whose fate it tells.

"Ahi! 'tis Sister Madeleine!"
The nuns cry out, with faces pale,
And then they wring their hands, and wait;
For greater sister never was seen
Beneath a convent veil.

But while the thousands held their breath,
One listener sprang with footstep light,
Pushing the crowd to left and right,
Forcing his way to fiery death,
While every cheek grew white.

He vanished through the smoke-veiled door,
And higher yet, with fearful gleam.
The red flames clambers merrily,
Wrapping the lofty tower o'er
With splendor sad to see.

The abbess knelt, with ashen face—
"For those two souls we cry to Thee,
Through Him who died upon the tree,
That Thou wilt grant to them thy grace
In their extremity."
THE HUMBLER POETS.

A thousand voices cried, "Amen,"—
And as in answer to the prayer
Out from the blinding, stifling glare,
Like life that wakens from the dead,
Forth came the fated pair.

Scorched, blinded, deafened, on they pressed,—
The dreamer of the marketplace,
Close holding in a last embrace,
Close holding against a dying breast,
That dreamed-of angel face.

Parting and pain for both were done;
Together from the stranger's strand
Peacefully passed they, hand in hand,
Before the rising of the sun,
Into the "Silent Land."

CLARE EVEREST.

LAST AND WORST.

Upon life's highway I was hastening, when
I met a trouble grim,
Whom I had often seen with other men,
But I was far from him.

He seized my arm, and with a sneering lip
Looked o'er my happy past;
With sinking heart I felt his bony grip
Clutch tight and hold me fast.

"You look," said he, "so happy and bright,
That I have come to see
Why other troubles miss you in their flight,
And what you'll do with me."

"And have you come to stay with me?" I cried,
Hoping respite to win.
"Yes, I have come to stay. Your world is wide;
I'm crowded where I have been."

I would not look him in the face, but turned
To take him home with me
To all my other troubles, who had spurned
His hateful company.

So he was "crowded," and with me would roam?
I laughed with sullen glee;
At arm's length took him up the steps of home
Under my own roof-tree.

TRAGEDY AND SORROW.

And there I clutched his scrawny neck and thin,
To thrust him in the room
Where, locked and barred, I kept my troubles, in Seclusion's friendly gloom.

Grimly he looked at me with eyes that burned:
"You nothing know of me;
The key on other troubles may be turned,
But I — am Poverty."

Ah! soon I knew it was in vain, in vain,
No locks avail for him;
No double doors, nor thickly curtained pane
Could make his presence dim.

He wrote his name on all my threadbare ways,
And in my shrinking air;
He told the tale of useless shifts and stays
I made against despair;

He brushed the smile from off my sweet wife's face,
And left an anxious frown;
The fresh young joys that should my children grace
His heavy foot trod down;

He took my other troubles out, and walked
With them the public street;
Clad in my sacred sorrows, cheaply talked
With all he chanced to meet.

The hours he stretched upon the rack of days,
The days to weeks of fears;
The weeks were months, whose weary toil some ways
Stretched out through hopeless years.

To-day I stopped to fan with eager stride
A single hope which glowed,
And 'mid the fading ember's of my life
A fitful warmth bestowed.

Cheered by a spark, I turned with trembling limb
Once more the strife to wage;
But as I turned I saw my trouble grim
Linking his arm with Age.

Old age and poverty, — here end the strife!
And ye, remorseless pain,
Drape on the last, dim milestone of my life
Your banner of despair.

FRANCES EKIN ALLISON.
A LOST LETTER.

Just read this letter, old friend of mine;
I picked it up on Margate Pier,
In a whirling world of women and wine;
'T was blotted and blurred with a fallen tear.

Come, think one minute of years ago,
When the chance was with us — a soul to save,
The whim was in us to love, you know,
But the woman, she fell to a fool or knave.

"'Tis easy to picture the tortured heart
That faced despair and a grief like this!
She saw her lover unloved depart
And turn again to a hateful kiss.

"Had I been loved by a man like you" —
"O weary woman! O fearful fate!
'Tis a passionate cry; but it strikes me through,
Who sigh too soon, but who love too late.

"Who was the woman?" I seem to trace
Her footprints here in Vanit y Fair:
A mother, perchance, with an earnest face;
A wife with a glory of Titian hair;
A soul perplexed, and a faith at stake,
A life nigh lost — there are thousands such
Who face the world, when their heart-strings break
For the one kind word and the tender touch!

Who was the man? What matter at all?
'Tis man who weeps and sows the tears;
'T is man who tempt, but women who fall,
And are never absolved in the deathless years.
The least we can do, O brothers, is this;
Whilst love is with us, and life seems down,
We can soothe the sad with a gentle kiss,
And dry the eyes that our sins can drown!

Go back, lost letter of wild despair,
I will cast you forth on the infinite sea;
But the day gilds on, and the Margate air
Is piercing sweet to the world and me.
But still I can never forget — can you?
That cry that nothing can soothe or cease;
"Had I been loved by a man like you,
I had lived far better and died in peace!"

CLEMENT SCOTT.

Note. — Extract from a letter picked up on Margate Pier: "I am so sorry you are obliged to go away to-day. You do not know how much I care to be with you. You are so different to other men, — so kind to me. If I had known a man like you years ago, I might have been a better woman."
PART XIV.

Every-day Lights and Shadows.

NOTHING AT ALL IN THE PAPER TO-DAY.

Nothing at all in the paper to-day!
Only a murder somewhere or other;
A girl who has put her child away,
Not being a wife as well as a mother;
Or a drunken husband beating a wife,
With the neighbors lying awake to listen,
Scarce aware he has taken a life,
Till in at the window the dawn rays glisten.

But that is all in the regular way——
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

There's nothing at all in the paper to-day,
To be sure, there's a woman died of starvation,
Fell down in the street, as so many may
In this very prosperous Christian nation;
Or two young girls, with some inward grief
Maddened, have plunged in the inky waters;
Or father has learnt that his son's a thief;
Or mother been robbed of one of her daughters.
Things that occur in their regular way——
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

There's nothing at all in the paper to-day,
Unless you care about things in the city——
How great rich rogues for their crimes must pay
(Though all gentility cries out, "Fify!"")
Like the meanest shop-boy that robs a till.
There's a case to-day, if I'm not forgetting,
The lad only "borrowed"——as such lads will——
To pay some money he lost in betting;
But there's nothing in this that's out of the way——
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

The thoughtless world to majesty may bow,
Exalt the brave, and idolize success;
But more to announce their safety own
Than peace or genius for conspired to bless.

And then who, mindful of the unhonored Dead,
Dost in these notes their artless tales relate,
By night and lonely contemplation led
To wander in the gloomy walks of fate:

Hark! how the sacred calm, that breathes around,
Bids every fierce, tumultuous passion cease;
In still small accents whispering from the ground,
A grateful warning of eternal peace.

Lines rejected from the "Elegy."
Nothing at all in the paper to-day
But the births and bankruptcies, deaths and marriages,
But life's events in the old survey,
With Virtue begging, and Vice in carriages;
And kindly hearts under ermine gowns,
And wicked breasts under hidden gray;
For goodness belongs not only to clowns,
And of others than lords does sin bear sway.
But what do I read? "Drowned! wrecked!" Did I say
There was nothing at all in the paper to-day?

CITY CONTRASTS.

A barefooted child on the crossing,
Sweeping the mud away,
A lady in silks and diamonds,
Proud of the vain display;
A beggar blind on the curbstone,
A rich man passing along;
A tiny child with a tambourine
Wailing out her life in song.

A pauper in lone hearse passing,
Hurried away to the tomb;
A train of carriages, music grand,
And the flutter of waving plume.
For the one there is never a mourner,
He clamped the earth alway;
For the other the flags at half-mast droop,
And the city wears black to-day.

A soldier with one sleeve empty,
That sadly hangs by his side,
Another shuffling along the walk
In the flash of health and pride;
A cripple-girl slowly toiling
Through the weed and crowded street,
And tearfully gazing at those who pass
With hearts as light as their feet.

A wreck of a woman flaunting,
As if proud of her very shame,
A purer sister whose modest cheeks
Would crimson even at the name;
A petty thief stealing in terror,
Afraid in your face to gaze,
And one who has robbed by thousands,
Courting the sun's broad blaze.

THE Humbler Poets.

The millionaire in his carriage,
The workman plodding along,
The humble follower of the right,
And the slave of the giant wrong;
The murderer seeking a refuge,
Looking ever wearily back,
And the slumberers of the broken law
Following silently in his track.

The judge, freed now of the ermine,
Pompous of place and power,
And the shivering wretch his word will doom
To prison within an hour;
The miser clutching his pennies,
The spendthrift squandering gold,
The meek-eyed Sister of Mercy,
And the woman brazen and bold.

The widow, in weeds of blackness,
Meets the bride at the church door—
The future for one holds nothing but tears,
But joy for the other in store.
A cradle justifies a coffin—
Orange-flowers, with honeyed breath,
Are woven in the self-same fingers
That but now made a cross for death.

Dives and Lazarus elbow
Each other where'er they meet,
And the crumbs from the rich man's table
Feed the beggar upon the street.
And penury crowds the plenty,
And sin stalks boldly abroad,
And the infidel holds his head proudly
As the child of the living God.

The bee in its ceaseless searching
Finds sweets in each flower fair,
And the obscene spider, creeping up,
Finds nothing but poison there.
And so life is made up of contrasts—
Rich and poor, coward and brave,
Virtue and vice, and all will find
Equality in the grave.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

THE HUMMING OF THE WIRES.

Over the telegraph wires
The wild winds sweep to-day,
And I catch a musical humming
As of harpers at their play,—
As of distant bells slow ringing
At the dying of the day.

Many the messages shooting
Along the slender line,
And it seems as if every message
Must have left some voice behind,—
Must have set the bells to swinging,
That I hear in silvery chime.

Tidings of death are they sending?
So hushed the sad refrain!
Now it quickens, merrily quickens,
And it peals a blither strain!
Of its joy some heart is telling,
Ring, O bells, glad bells, again!

Here by the track I am asking,
These varying sounds so blend,
Whether God, who wills for his children
All events toward good shall tend,
May not hear our joys and sorrows
In like harmony ascend.

Over the marsh by the railroad
The wild winds sweep to-day,
And they touch the telegraph wires,
And a strange, weird tune they play,
Till the air is sweet with harpings,
And with church-bells far away.

Boston Journal.

EDWARD A. RAND.

THE TELEGRAPH CLERK.

Sitting here by my desk all day,
Hearing the constant click
As the messages speed on their way,
And the call comes sharp and quick —
Oh, what a varied tale they tell
Of joy and hope and fear!
The funeral knell and the marriage bell
In their steady tick I hear.

EVERY-DAY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS.

"Mother is dying; read at once!"
And the tears will almost start,
For tender daughters and loving sons—
God pity such aching heart!

Ah! how the haunting memories press
Back to the mind once more,
Of the mother's unailing tenderness,
That is now forever o'er.

"I am well: will come to-night!"
How bright some eyes will glow
All day long with a happy light
As they watch the moments go.

"Have had no letters: is something wrong?"
Some heart is sad to-day,
Counting the hours that seem so long
For the sake of one away.

"Arthur Rose, by accident killed;
Tell his mother, am coming home!"
Alas for the home with such sorrow filled,
When the bitter tidings come!

"Alice is better: cunning fast!
And hearts that have been bowed
Under their weight of fear, at last
Shall lose their weary load.

So over the wires the tidings speed,
Bitter and grave and gay;
Some hearts shall beat, and some shall bleed,
For the tale they have to say.

As I sit all day by my desk alone
I hear the stream go by,
And catch the wires' changeful tone,
With a smile and then a sigh.

GOING HOME IN THE MORNING.

A poor little bird trilled a song in the west,—
A poor little bird with a stain on its breast.
Beaten down by the rain and too weak for flight,
It fell in the clay unseen in the night.

As it trilled its sad song, other birds of the air,
The respectable ones, wondered who could be there.

Out in the darkness, while passing, I heard
The wail of the poor little vagabond bird.

Being homeless myself, I hunted and found
The weak little vagrant stretched out on the ground.
I raised it, and gave it of all I possessed,
A warm cozy shelter close up to my breast;
And I whispered: "Don't worry, rather whistle and sing,
You poor little innocent vagabond thing.
Very soon now the storm will have passed from the sky,
Very soon, too, the sun will be shining on high,
And you shall go home in the morning."

A broken-down man then was walking the street;
As I passed him I stayed for a moment my feet.
Cried the man: "It is hard! So many have health
And beauty and youth and pleasure and wealth,
Whilst we are unnoticed by God or by man,
Accursed and degraded, and under the ban."
"My brother," said I, "I am seeking, like you,
For a something to eat, for a something to do;
Let us keep on our way, let us keep it together,
Through the cold and the storm and the pitiless weather,
Hoping still for the best; soon the night will be gone,
And after the night always comes the dawn,
And we can go home in the morning."

We paused as we passed an old rickety shed;
We glanced well within—then we glanced overhead;
The sky with the darkness was all overcast,
The snowflakes whirled down and clung to us fast;
How I fondled my bird—it had no one to love it.
Said the man: "This is bad—grows worse and more of it;"
But we entered the shed, and out under the lamp
Slowly drifted anguish the form of a tramp,
To be out in the storm-blaze! Ah, no! It was a sin!
So I stopped from the shelter, invited her in,
And took the poor babe, without wasting of words,
And then, you'll perceive, I had two little birds!
And we all stood there hungry, haggard, wan,
Awaiting in silence the coming of dawn,
So we could go home in the morning.

An hour ere dawn, being cold and a-shiver,
We moved all together down to the river.
Thus passing, the poor little bird from the west
Trilled a poor little song. It was doing its best
To help us along, and it tried hard to sing;
But being a famished and pitiful thing,
It skipped now and then a few bars, and a note
Died out now and then in its weak little throat.
The babe on my arm lay and listened awhile,
Then looked in my face with a wondering smile,
As out through my vest, that was ragged and torn,
Kept the poor little bird, who thought it was moribund,
And twittered, and looked at the child and its mother;
And the child and the bird grieved the one for the other,
And thought it was strange in a city of priests
Two such innocent things should be out on the streets.
Well, we passed on our way—a vagabond crew,
Yet I think in our hearts every one of us knew
That we should go home in the morning.

We came to the ferry-house, stately and tall,
And crowded for warmth in the shade of the wall.
Then I saw, 'mid the dirt and the filth at my feet,
A crust of nice bread lying out on the street;
I grasped it and gave to the woman; she smiled
And said, "It don't matter now, me and the child,
We are going home in the morning."

It was very near daybreak, I noticed at last
A streak like the dawn afar off in the east.
Then we moved all together—they loosened the bar—
We passed through the gates that were standing ajar;
Moved down the incline where, toward us afloat,
From over the river was drifting the boat.
We had nothing to pay—no passage—no fares—
For the houseless and homeless there's nobody cares
With the bird and the child and the vagabond crew
I sailed from the shore, and I very well knew
Where we all should rejoice in the morning.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS.

DEAD IN HIS BED.

Only a man dead in his bed—that is all!
Stark, stiff, and rigid—white face to the wall.
Come out of yesterday somewhere, to here—
Well, no: don't think he had friends anywhere near.

Wanted employment—that's what he said;
No work to give him—next thing, he's dead.

What did he die of, sir? Can any tell?
A fit, did they think it was? Last night he was well.

Heart-disease? May be. What was his name?
Don't know; didn't register, sir, when he came.

Laund'nun; they say it was, there on the stand—
No, stranger; don't reckon he held a fair hand.

Suicide? Yes, that's what the coroner said—
Scooped out, was what put the thing into his head.
Money? Guess not, sir. Why, he had n't enough
To pay for this hole in the soil, of the stuff.

Friends, did you ask? Oh, yes! Sometime or other —
Reckon, of course, the boy once had a mother.

Rather rough on him, pard; but where ' s it to end,
When you ' re penned out of cash and can't count on a friend?

Down to the calaboose — that ' s where they took him;
Good enough place, when a man ' s money ' s forsook him!

Funeral? Just you see that express at the coroner's!
County can't pay for no hearse, nor no mourners.

Well, stranger, you ' ve got me! Can pray if you will —
Rather late in the day, when a man ' s dead and still.

Strikes me, it don't count, to this, under my spade;
And as for the rest of him — stranger, that's played.

No offence, sir; beg pardon, but strikes me as fair,
And a pretty sure way to get answer to prayer.

Better give a poor devil a lift while he ' s here,
Than wait till he ' s passed in his checks over there!

A. L. BALLOU.

GUILTY, OR NOT GUILTY?

She stood at the bar of Justice,
A creature wan and wild,
In form too small for a woman,
In feature too old for a child.
For a look so worn and pathetic
Was stamped on her pale young face,
It seemed long years of suffering
Must have left that silent trace.

"Your name," said the judge, as he eyed her
With kindly look, yet keen,
"Is —?" "Mary McGuire, if you please, sir."
"And your age?" "I am turned fifteen."
"Well, Mary," And then from a paper
He slowly and gravely read,
"You are charged here — I am sorry to say it —
With stealing three leaves of bread.
SCANDAL-MONGERS.

Do you hear the scandal-mongers
Passing by,
Breathing poison in a whisper,
In a sigh?
Moving cautiously and slow,
Smiling sweetly as they go,
Never noisy—gliding smoothly as a snake,
Sapping here and slitting there
Through the meadows fresh and fair,
Leaving subtle slime and poison in their wake.

Saw you not the scandal-monger
As she sat
Bosoming brightly 'neath the roses
On her hat?
In her dainty gloves and dress
Angel-like, and nothing less,
Seemed she—casting smiles and pleasing words about.
Once she shrugged and shook her head,
Raised her eyes and nothing said,
When you spoke of friends, and yet it left a doubt.

Did you watch the scandal-monger
At the ball?
Through the music, rhythm, beauty,
Light, and all,
Moving here and moving there,
With a whisper light as air,
Casting shadows on a sister woman's fame—
Just a whispered word or glance—
As she floated through the dance,
And a doubt forever hinged upon a name.

You will find the scandal-mongers
Everywhere;
Sometimes men, but oftener women,
Young and fair;
Yet their tongues drip foulest slime,
And they spend their leisure time
Casting mud on those who climb by work and worth!
Shun them, shun them as you go—
Shun them, whether high or low;
They are but the cursed serpents of the earth.

THE CHURNING SONG.

Ahoy on and dash in hand,
O'er the old churn here I stand,—
Cachug!
How the thick cream spurts and flies,
Now on shoes and now in eyes!—
Cachug! Cachug!
Ah! how soon I tired get!
But the butter lingers yet;
Cachug!
Aching back and weary arm
Quite rob churning of its charm!—
Cachug! Cachug!
See the golden specks appear!
And the churn rings sharp and clear,—
Cachink!
Arms, that have to flag begun,
Work on, you will soon be done,—
Cachink! Cachink!
Rich flakes cling to lid and dash;
Hear the thin milk's watery splash!—
Cachink!
Sweetest music to the ear,
For it says the butter's here!—
Cachink! Cachink!

St. Nicholas.

TURNED OUT FOR RENT.

Out, out in the night, in the chill wintry air,
Turned out on the pave with its stones cold and bare;
Shut out from her home with its sad dearth of bread,
Alone with her God and the stars overhead!
Cear out with her babe still asleep on her breast,
Asleep to the sorrow that mars not his rest;
Asleep to the new pearl's bedecking his hair,
Bright come from the sea of his mother's despair.
Out, out like her Lord, "with no place for her head,"
All friendless, and houseless, and starving for bread;
Thus brought face to face with her life's direst woe,
And yet 'tis unfelt 'neath a bitterer blow;
For this is the wall, voiceless, deep in her heart,
"Cast out like a thief, put to shame, set apart!"
But what hath she done, with her wild startled eyes,
And what with her tremulous, short, gasping sighs?
Ah, what, with her weary and faltering feet,
Now dragging like lead through the fast darkening street?
What! Is one so weak found a dangerous thing,
Concealing 'mid softness a treacherous sting.
That ye to expel her have borrowed a need
Of two brawny knights of the star and the reed;
This, this is her crime — O ye winds, whisper low!
Nor give to the echoes her sad tale of woe,
Lest they tell the hills, and the beasts cry, "For shame!"
— Gaunt poverty fills all her measure of blame.

M. L. S. Burke.

AT THE COURT-HOUSE DOOR.

No! no! I don't defend him
You need n't, sir, be afraid!
Of course he's bad, and he's broke the laws,
And they've got to be obeyed;
But I can't help kind of thinking
I beg your pardon, square!
If we had had a start like him
We might n't got much higher.

"So poor?" "I want that! — I want that, sir!
A home may be awful bare,
And keep some kind of quiet
And show of comfort there;
But when it's all dirt and disorder —
I never saw such a place! —
And you see folks said 't would always be,
Because it was in the race;
And it had been so — that's true, sir;
His father was very bad;
And the poor boy looked some like him —
And 'twas all against the lad.
Folks would n't allow that anything good
Could come of such a stock —
Kind folks they were, too, in everything else,
But here as set as a rock.
They would n't employ him to labor —
They didn't want him around;
There were plenty of nice young fellows,
That needed work, to be found.

And his mother — she was a drunkard;
And that was against him, too!
And so, no home, no comfort,
And nothing to get to do.

Oh, well! folks always expected —
His poor old father, you see —
"T is curious how their figures
And the way he went along!
But I've thought a good deal about it,
And I've kind of made it out,
That the way to bring up a fellow
Is n't just to kick him about!
I don't think much of talking,
And I haven't much to say;
But the better you use a creature,
The more you will get to pay.
And we who have had our chances,
And friends to give us a lift,
Won't be too hard on this one.
That the town has set adrift;
For if the neighbors had took to him,
And tried to help him along,
You see — it may be, brother,
He had n't gone quite so wrong!

TRUST.

SEARCHING for strawberries ready to eat,
Finding them crimson, and large, and sweet,
What do you think I found at my feet,
Deep in the green hillside?
Four brown sparrows, the cunning things
Feathered on back and breast and wings,
Proud with the dignity plumage brings,
Opening their four mouths wide.

Stooping low to scan my prize,
Watching the motions with curious eyes,
Dropping my berries in glad surprise,
A plaintive sound I heard.
And looking up at the mournful call,
I spied on a beech near the old stone wall,
Trembling and twittering, ready to fall,
The poor little mother-bird.

With grief and terror her heart was wrung,
And while to the slender bough she clung,
She felt that the lives of her birdlings hang
On a still more slender thread.
"Ah, birdie!" I said, "if you only knew
My heart was tender and warm and true!"
But the thought that I loved the birdlings too
Never entered her small brown head.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

And so through this world of ours we go,
Bearing our burdens of needless woe;
Many a heart beating heavy and slow
Under its load of care.

But oh, if we only, only knew
That God was tender, warm, and true,
And that he loved us through and through,
Our hearts would be lighter than air.

WABASH VIOLETS.

What? Sho! You don't! Do you mean it, though?
Are you really gone with me
To meetin' in all that bandbox rig?
I'm so awkward, don't you see?
A regular Hoosier. Yes, I know
We're cousins, as you say;
But I growed wild on the Wabash here,
And you like a sweet Nosegay

Sprung sprightly-like to life in the air
Miles away, in Boston town,
Why, 't would be like a schoolma'am, college bred,
A-walking with a clown.
No, I don't guess that's just what I'd say;
But — what? what's that? As we stroll
We'll gather some violets by the way,
To put in my buttonhole?

Do you know, I don't exactly see
What you find in them little things
To make you go as crazy as though
They was like an angel's wings?
If they was bright and handsome, now,
Like a poppy or a marigold,
I'd work like a man, and gather for you
All that your arms could hold.

It's culture that makes one like such flowers?
Yes, I reckon that's 'bout so;
But that a yarb that grows more near
In Boston than here, you know.
But some here too, finds a right smart chance
Of violets, cousin Kate —
Like schoolma'ams, you know, and notional gals,
As takes their poety straight.

Don't know but I might have liked 'em too,
But for memories of a thing
That happened a dozen years ago,
In the days of early spring.

EVERY-DAY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS.

It seems like a dream. Jim Brown and I
We used to spend whole hours,
When we could 'stend anything else to do,
A-battlin' with them flowers.

We called them "roosters." Don't you see
How their necks lap over, so?
And then, when we poll, the strongest one
 Jerks the other's head off. Oh,
The fun we had! We'd gather piles,
And hunt for the largest ones,
And then sit down on a rotten log
And fight like bloody Huas.

The violets' heads would drop in a pile,
Till I sometimes think a peck
Or more would be scraped up of the log,
Where the war was neck and neck.
A joke? Well, I reckon. But that's why
I can't give myself away.

Over the little posies, just as though
They was pinies or poppies gay.

Well, yes, I reckon there's a lesson here,
If you're bound to look for one;
There's many a page of poetry applid
From a draggin' it down to fun.
If the fountain-head of youth is fuel,
Its stream through life will be riled;
Because these flowers were "roosters" then,
My love for them now is spilt.

THE WATER-MILL.

LISTEN to the water-mill
Through the livelong day;
How the clanking of the wheels
Wears the hours away!

Languidly the autumn wind
Stirs the Greenwood leaves;
From the fields the reapers sing,
Binding up the sheaves;
And a proverb haunts my mind,
As a spell is cast:
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Take the lesson to thyself,
Living heart and true;
Golden years are flowing by,
Youth is passing too;
Learn to make the most of life,
Lose no happy day;
Time will never being thee back
Chances swept away.
Leave no tender word unsaid;
Love while life shall last,—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Work while yet the daylight shines,
Man of strength and will;
Never does the streamlet glide
Useless by the mill.
Wait not till tomorrow's sun
Beams upon the way;
All that thou taste call thine own
Lies in thy to-day.
Power, intellect, and health
May not, cannot last;
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Oh, the wasted hours of life
That have drifted by;
Oh, the good we might have done,
Lost without a sigh;
Love that we might once have saved
By a single word;
Thoughts conceived, but never penned,
Perishing unheard.
Take the proverb to thine heart,
Take it, oh, hold it fast!—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Sarah Doudney Clarke.

Note.—The authorship of this poem has been credited with singular persistency to Gen. Daniel C. McCallum, but without justitation.

STONE THE WOMAN, LET THE MAN GO FREE.

Yes, stone the woman, let the man go free!
Draw back your skirts, lest they perchance may touch
Her garment as she passes; but to him
Put forth a willing hand to clasp with his
That led her to destruction and disgrace.
Shut up from her the sacred ways of toll,
That she no more may win an honest meal;
But ope to him all honorable paths.

EVERY-DAY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS.

Where he may win distinction; give to him
Fair, pressed-down measures of life's sweetest joys.
Pass her, O maiden, with a pure, proud face,
If she puts out a poor, polluted palm;
But lay thy hand in his on bridal day,
And swear to cling to him with wifely love
And tender reverence. Trust him who led
A sister woman to a fearful fate.

Yes, stone the woman, let the man go free!
Let one soul suffer for the guilt of two—
It is the doctrine of a hurried world,
Too out of breath for holding balances
Where nice distinctions and injustices
Are calmly weighed. But ah, how will it be
On that strange day of small fire and flame,
When men shall whirl with a mystic fear,
And all shall stand before the one true judge?
Shall sex make there a difference in sin?
Shall he, the searcher of the hidden heart,
In his eternal and divine decree
Condemn the woman and forgive the man?

THE BAR-TENDER'S STORY.

When I knew him at first there was suthin'—
A sort of a general air,
That was very particular pleasant,
And what you might call—chepmair.
I'm aware that expression is French,
And highfalutin', perhaps,
Which accounts that I have the acquaintance
Of several quality chaps,
And such is the way they converses.
But, speakin' of this here young man,—
Apparently arter had shaped him
On a sort of a liberal plan;
Had give him good books and good language,
And manners expressin' with vim;
His belief in himself, and that others
Was just as good fellers as him.

Well, this chap was n't stuck up, by no means,
Nor inclined to be easy put down;
And was thought to be jolly agreeable
Wherever he went around town.
He used to come in for his beverage
Quite regular every night;
And I took a consid'able interest
In mixin' the thing about right.
A judicious indulgence in liquids
It is na’rul for me to admire;
But I’m free to admit that for some folks
They are pizen complete and entire;
For rum, though a cheerful companion,
As a boss is the Devil’s own charm;
And this chap, I am sorry to state it,
Was drowned in a wrastle with rum.

For he got to increasin’ his doses,
And took ‘em more often, he did,—
And it grewed on him faster and faster,
Till inter a humper he said.
I was grieved to observe this here feller
A shovin’ hisself down the grade,
And I lectured him onto it sometimes,
At the risk of its injurin’ trade.

At last he got thunderin’ seedy,
And lost his respect for hisself,
And all his high notions of honor
Was bundled away on the shelf.
But at times he was dreadful remorseful,
Whenever he’d stop for to think,
And he’d swear to reform hisself frequent,
And end it by takin’ a drink.

What saved that young feller? A woman!
She done it the singlerest way,—
He come into the bar-room one evenin’
(He had n’t been drinkin’ that day),
And sat hisself down to a table,
With a terrible sorrowful face,
And he sot there a groamin’ repeated,
And callin’ hisself a gone case.

He was thinkin’, and thinkin’, and thinkin’,
And cussin’ hisself and his fate,
And ended his thinkin’, as usual,
By orderin’ a Bourbon straight.
He was holdin’ the glass in his fingers,
When into the place, from the street,
There come a young gal like a spirit,
With a face that was wonderful sweet;

And she glided right up to the table,
And took the glass gently away,
And she says to him, “George, it is over;
I am only a woman to-day!”
I rejected you once in my anger,
But I come to you, lovelv and meek;
For I can’t live without you, my darling;
I thought I was strong, but I’m weak.

"Every-day Lights and Shadows."
THE HUMBLER POETS.

A rumble, a roar, — " She's coming now —
She's tracer to time to-day!"
He turns, and not far between the rails
Sees his youngest boy at play.

Not far, but too far! The train is at hand,
And the child is crawling there,
And patting the ground with crow of delight —
And not a moment to spare!
His face was dead white, but his purpose firm,
As straight to his post he trod,
And shifted the points and saved the down-train,
And trusted his child to God.

There's a rush in his ears, though the train has passed;
He gropes, for he cannot see,
To the place where the laughing baby crawled,
Where the mangled limbs must be.
But he hears a cry that is only of fear,
His joy seems too great to bear;
For his duty done, God saw to his son —
The train had not touched a hair.

GENTLEMAN JIM.

In the Diamond Shaft worked Gentleman Jim,
Handsome of face and stout of limb,
Coarse in dress; but something in him,
Whether down in the coal mine, soiled and grim,
Or wandering alone in holiday time,
Won the love and respect of all in that clime.

He had no sweetheart, he had no wife,
Some mighty sorrow had dimmed his life —
His earnings hardly won, and small,
Were aye at the orphan's and widows' call —
Of those who had perished in shaft or winze,
He was the friend of all living things,
And moving along in those collysome ways,
He wore the demeanor of gentler days.

In April last, when the mine fell in,
Beneath the timbers stood Gentleman Jim;
With a giant grasp he stung two of the boys
Clear of the danger — with devastating noise
The shaft gave way on every side;
The boys were safe, but Jim — he died;
Died as men die, and will die again,
Giving their lives for their fellow-men.

EVERY-DAY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS.

When rocks and timbers were cleared away,
And Jim borne up to the light of day,
They took from his bosom, stained with blood,
Two withered leaves, and a withered bud.

Placed on a card, "Toi à toi — Marie,"
Was written beneath them; beneath it he,
On this relic his heart for years had worn,
Had written, "All withered — except the thorn."

What life romance, what story of wrong,
This man had locked up in his soul so long.
No one who loved him may ever know;
But the tale of his glorious chivalric deed
Shall not perish as long as men hold this creed,—
That the hero whose blood for his kind is shed
Wins a deathless fame and an honored bed;
A monument grander than sculptor e'er gave,
In the glory that hallow the martyr's grave.

San Francisco Mail.

DANIEL O'CONNELL

FATHER JOHN.

He preached but little; argued less;
But if a girl was in distress,
Or if a kitchen came to grief,
Or trouble tackled rogue or thief,
There Father John was sure to be,
To blunt the edge of misery;
And somehow managed every time
To ease despair or lessen crime.

That corner house was allus known
Around these parts as Hodge's Own,
Till two pales in a drunken fight
Set the whole thing afire one night;
And where it stood they hippeded round,
And blasted rocks and shovelled ground
To build the factory over there —
The one you see; and that is where
Poor Father John — God give him rest! —
Preached his last sermon and his best.

One summer's day the thing was done;
The workmen set a blast and run;
They ain't so keerful here, I guess,
Where lives ain't worth a cent apiece,
As in the wards where things are dear,
And nothin ain't so cheap as here;
Leastwise, the first they seed or knowned,
A little chick had crossed the road;
THE HUMBLER POETS.

He seemed to be just out of bed—
Bare-legged, with nothink on his head;
Chubby and cunnin', with his hair
Blown criss-cross by the mornin' air;
Draggin' a tin horse by a string,
Without much care for anything;
A talkin' to himself for joy,—
A toddlin', keerless, baby boy.

Right for the crawlin' fuse he went,
As though to find out what it meant;
Till less'n three feet off he got
From where the murderin' thing lay still,
Just waitin' for to spring and kill—
Marching along toward his grave,
And not a soul dared go to save!

They hollered—all they durst to do;
He turned and laughed, and then bent low
To set the horsey on his feet,
And went right on a crowin' sweet!
And then a death-like silence grew
On all the tremblin', coward crew,
As each swift second seemed the last
Before the roaring of the blast.

Just then some chance or purpose brought
The priest. He saw, and quick as thought
He ran and caught the child and turned
Just as the slumberin' powder burned,
And shot the shattered rocks around,
And with its thunder shook the ground.

The child was sheltered! Father John
Was hurt to death. Without a groan,
He set the baby down, then went
A step or two; but life was spent.
He tottered, looked up to the skies
With ashen face, but strange, glad eyes.
"My love, I come!" was all he said,
Sank slowly down, and so was dead!

Stranger, he left a memory here
That will be felt for many a year:
And since that day this ward has been
More human in its dens of sin.

PART XV.

War and Peace.
But three feet good of that old wood,
So scarred in war, and rotten,
War thrown aside, unknown its pride,
Its honors all forgotten:
When, as in shade the block was laid,
Two robins, perching on it,
Thought that place best to build a nest,—
They planned it, and have done it:
The splintered spot which helped a shot
Is lined with moss and feathers,
And, chirping loud, a callow brood
Are nestling up together.
How full of bliss,—how peaceful is
That spot the soft nest waiting,
Where war's staring and blood-stained arms
Were once around it roving.

Part XV.

War and Peace.

Driving Home the Cows.

Out of the clover and blue-eyed grass
He turned them into the river-lane;
One after another he let them pass,
And fastened the meadow bars again.
Under the willows and over the hill
He patiently followed their sober pace;
The merry whistle for once was still,
And something shadowed the sunny face.
Only a boy! and his father had said
He never would let his youngest go,
Two already were lying dead,
Under the feet of the trampling foe.
But after the evening work was done,
And the frogs were loud in the meadow-swamp,
Over his shoulder be slung his gun
And stealthily followed the foot-path damp,
Across the clover and through the wheat,
With resolute heart and purpose grim,
Though cold was the dew to the hurrying feet,
And the blind bat's flitting startled him.
Thrice since then had the lane been white,
And the orchards sweet with apple-bloom;
And now, when the cows came back at night,
The feeble father drove them home.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

ROLL-CALL.

"CORPORAL GREEN!" the orderly cried;
"Here!" was the answer, loud and clear,
From the lips of the soldier who stood near;
And "Here!" was the word the next replied.

"Cyrus Drew!"—then a silence fell—
This time no answer followed the call;
Only his rear man had seen him fall,
Killed or wounded; he could not tell.

There they stood in the falling light,
These men of battle with grave, dark looks,
As plain to be read as open books,
While slowly gathered the shades of night.

KATE PUTNAM OSGOOD.

WAR AND PEACE.

THE COUNTERSIGN WAS MARY.

'T was near the break of day, but still
The moon was shining brightly;
The west wind as it passed the flowers
Set each one swaying lightly;
The sentry slowly paced to and fro,
A faithful night-watch keeping,
While in the tents behind him stretched
His comrades,—all were sleeping.

Slow to and fro the sentry paced,
His musket on his shoulder;
But not a thought of death or war
Was with the brave young soldier.
Ah, no! his heart was far away
Where, on a Western prairie,
A rose-twined cottage stood. That night
The countersign was "Mary."

And there his own true love he saw,
Her blue eyes kindly beaming,
Above them, on her sun-kissed brow,
Her curls like sunshine gleaming;
—
He heard her singing, as she chummed
The bitter in the dairy,
The song he loved the best. That night
The countersign was "Mary."

"Oh, for one kiss from her!" he sighed,
When, up the lone road glancing,
He spied a form, a little form,
With faltering steps advancing;
And as it neared him, silently
He gazed at it in wonder;
Then dropped his musket to his hand,
And challenged, — "Who goes yonder?"

Still on it came. "Not one step more,
Be you man, child, or fairy,
Unless you give the countersign;
Halt! who goes there?" — "I'm Mary,"
A sweet voice cried, and in his arms
The girl he'd left behind him
Half fainting fell. 'Tis many miles
She'd bravely toiled to find him.

"I heard that you were wounded, dear,"
She sobbed. "My heart was breaking;
I could not stay a moment, but,
All other ties forsaking,
I travelled, by my grief made strong,
Kind Heaven watching o'er me,
Until — unhurt and well?"
"'Yes, love —
At last you stood before me."

"They told me that I could not pass
The lines to seek my lover
Before day faintly came; but I
Pressed on ere night was over,
And, as I told my name, I found
The way free as our prairie,
"Because, thank God 't-o-night," he said,
"The countersign is 'Mary.'"

MARGARET EYTINGE.

OUR LAST TOAST.

We meet 'neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around are bare;
As they shout to our peals of laughter,
It seems that the dead are there.

But stand to your glasses, steady!
We drink to our comrades' eyes,
Quaff a cup to the dead already,
And hurrah for the next that dies!

Not here are the goblets glowing —
Not here is the vintage sweet;
'Tis cold as our hearts are growing;
And dark as the doom we meet.

But stand to your glasses, steady!
And soon shall our pulses rise, —
A cup to the dead already,
Hurrh for the next that dies!

Not a sigh for the lot that darkles,
Not a tear for the friends that sink;
We'll fall 'neath the wine-cup's sparkles
As mute as the wine we drink.

So, stand to your glasses, steady!
'Tis this that respite buys,
One cup to the dead already,
Hurrh for the next that dies!

Time was when we frowned at others —
We thought we were wiser then;
Ha, ha! let them think of their mothers.
Who hope to see them again.

No, stand to your glasses, steady!
The thoughtless here are wise;
A cup to the dead already,
Hurrh for the next that dies!

Here's many a hand that's shaking;
Here's many a cheek that's sunk.
But soon, though our hearts are breaking,
They'll burn with the wine we've drunk.

So, stand to your glasses, steady!
'Tis here the revival lies;
A cup to the dead already,
Hurrh for the next that dies!

There's a mist on the glass congealing —
'Tis the hurricane's fiery breath;
And thus doth the warmth of feeling
Turn to ice in the grasp of death.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Ho, stand to your glasses, steady!
For a moment the vapor flies;
A cup to the dead already,
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Who dreads to the dust returning,
Who shrinks from the sable shore,
Where the high and haughty Beacons
Of the soul shall sing no more?
Ho, stand to your glasses, steady!
The world is a world of lies;
A cup to the dead already,
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Cut off from the land that bore us,
Betrayed by the land we find,
Where the brightest have gone before us,
And the cruelest remain behind.
Stand—stand to your glasses, steady!
'Tis all we've got to prize;
A cup to the dead already,
And hurrah for the next that dies!

BAERTOLMEO DOWLING.

AT LAST.

O'er the sunlit hills of Berkshire drooped the drowsy summer calm,
Filling all the glen and valleys with the silence like a psalm;
Like an angel-chanted anthem thrilling toward a poet's ear,
Till he dreams the mystic rhythm God alone can live and hear.

By a little spring that bubbled from beneath a towering pine,
Hidden half and overshadowed by the spray of blackberry vine,
Stood a man and maiden, waiting till the parting hour should come,
When their clasping hands must sever at the rattle of the drum.

He to offer life for duty on the swart Virginian plain,
She to watch and hope his coming through the sunshine and the rain.
Very few the words they uttered as they waited hand in hand,
But the silence throbbed with voices that their hearts could understand.

Tender voices of the past, and the days forever done,—
Days divinely sweet and holy, when their love had just begun;
Hopeful voices of the future whispering of the joys to be,
When the clanging calls of battle hushed to hymns of victory.

WAR AND PEACE.

Sank the day into the sunset, and there came the tread of feet,
Marching to the sound of music, up the length of level street;
Then he drew her to his bosom, parting backward from her face
The long golden hair, whose halo made a glory in the place;

Almost calm above his passion, as he whispered, "I must go,
You will send me letters often? kiss them where you sign them—
And if I no more come home," trembling grew his lips and white,

"All these happy days together, you will not forget them quite?"

Answer none of word or gesture for a moment at she delign,
Save the mute, pathetic promise of her eyes' remonstrant pain.
Then, because her love sat higher than his doubts could lift their fronts,
She drew down his lips and kissed them, as a woman kisses once.

"Would to God," she said, "my lover, that my life for thine might be!
But where'er his voice shall call thee, in his time I'll follow thee."
That was all. The soldiers' tramping passed and slowly died away,
And she knelt beside the pine-tree all alone to weep and pray.

Came the solemn twilight genning sky and stream with starry spheres,
Came the tender twilight dropping over all its dewy tears;
And she sought once more her duties and the dull routine of life,
Tenfold harder in the bearing than the battle's frenzied stir.

Days of forced and weary marches and of combat fierce and red,
Nights of bivouac round the camp-fire with the star alone o'erhead,
Months of hopeless, hungry torture in the Southern prison-pen,
And a dumb, dead face that never love should wake to life again.

On the frozen hills of Berkshire white the snows of winter lie,
Scarlet red against the sunset where their summits pierce the sky.
In a little country churchyard climbing up the side of one,
Where the first arbutus blossoms, and the grass greens first of all.

Side by side two graves are sleeping. Over one the flowers have grown,
Ten long years, and bloomed and withered, and the autumn leaves have blown.
On the headstone of the other the first wreaths have hardly dried,
Where at last the soldier's sweetheart slumbers by her lover's side.
THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

Each thin hand resting on a grave,
Her lips apart in prayer,
A mother knelt, and left her tears
Upon the violets there.
O'er many a road of vale and lawn,
Of hill and forest gloom,
The reaperDeath had revelled in
His fearful harvest home.
The last unquiet summer shone
Upon a fruitless fray;
From yonder forest charged the blue—
Down yonder slope the gray.

The hush of death was on the scene,
And sanct o'er the dead,
In that oppressive stillness,
A pall of glory spread.
I knew not, dare not question how
I met the ghostly gale
Of each upturned and stilled face
That shrunk and whitened there.
I knew my noble boys had stood
Through all that withering day,
I knew that Willie wore the blue,
That Harry wore the gray.

I thought of Willie's clear blue eye,
His wavy hair of gold,
That clustered on a fearless brow
Of purest Saxon mould;
Of Harry, with his raven locks
And eagle glance of pride;
Of how they clasped each other's hand
And left their mother's side;
How hand in hand they bore my prayers
And blessings on the way—
A noble heart beneath the blue,
Another 'neath the gray.

The dead, with white and folded hands,
That hushed our village homes,
I've seen laid calmly, tenderly,
Within their darkened rooms;
But there I saw distorted limbs,
And many an eye aglare,
In the soft purple twilight of
The thunder-smitten air.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

Along the slope and on the sward
In ghastly ranks they lay,
And there was blood upon the blue
And blood upon the gray.

I looked and saw his blood, and his;
A swift and vivid dream
Of blended years flashed o'er me, when,
Like some cold shadow, came
A blindness of the eye and brain—
The same that seized one
When men are smitten suddenly
Who overstart the sun;
And while, blurred with the sudden stroke
That swept my soul, I lay,
They buried Willie in his blue,
And Harry in his gray.

The shadows fall upon their graves;
They fall upon my heart;
And through the twilight of this soul
Like dews the tears will start;
The starlight comes so silently
And lingers where they rest;
So hope's revealing starlight sinks
And shines within my breast.
They ask not there, where yonder heaven
Smiles with eternal day,
Why Willie wore the loyal blue,
Why Harry wore the gray.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the one, the Blue,
Under the other, the Gray.

Those in the roblings of glory,
These in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity med.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the laurel, the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,—
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor
The morning sun-rays fall,
With a touch, impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,—
Brothered with gold, the Blue,
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So when the summer calleth
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,—
Wet with the rain, the Blue,
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not upbraiding,
The generous deed was done;
In the storm of the tears that are fading
No braver battle was won.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,—
Under the blossoms, the Blue,
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever,
Nor the winding river be red;
They banish our anger forever,
When they laurel the graves of our dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,—
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

FRANCIS MILES FINCH.

WAR AND PEACE.

DECORATION DAY.

I.

The Eastern wizards do a wondrous thing,
Which travellers, having seen, scarce dare to tell;
Dropping a seed in earth, by subtle spell
Of hidden heat they force the germ to spring
To instant life and growth; no faltering
*Twist leaf and flower and fruit; they rise and swell
To perfect shape and size, as if there fell
Upon them all which seasons hold and bring.
But Love far greater magic shows to-day;
Lifting its feathery hands, which can but reach
The hand's-breadth up, it stretches all the way
From earth to heaven, and, triumphant, each
Sweet, willing blossom sets, before it dies,
Full in the sight of smiling angels' eyes.

II.

But ah! the graves which no man names or knows,
Uncounted graves, which never can be found;
Graves of the precious "missing," where no sound
Of tender weeping will be heard, where goes
No loving step of kindred. Oh, how flows
And yearns our thought to them! More holy ground
Of graves than this, we say, is that whose bound
Is secret till eternity disclose
There are no "missing" in her numbered ways;
In her great heart is no forgiveness;
Each grave she keeps she will adorn, caress.
We cannot lay such wreaths as summer lays,
And all her days are "Decoration Days!"

THE MESSAGE OF VICTORY.

"News to the king, good news for all!"
*The corn is trodden, the river runs red.
"News of the battle," the heralds call,
"We have won the field; we have taken the town,
We have beaten the rebels and crushed them down."
And the dying lies with the dead.

"Who was my bravest?" quoth the king,
*The corn is trodden, the river runs red.
"Whom shall I honor for this great thing?"
*There were but few, but none was worst;
But Walter Wendolph was the first.
And the dying lies with the dead.
"What of my husband?" quoth the bride.
The corn is reaped, the river is red.
"Comes he to-morrow? how long will he bide?"
"Put off thy bride-gear, bush thee in black;
Walter Wendolph will never come back,"
And the dying lie with the dead.

CONQUERED AT LAST.

Soon after the last yellow-fever scourge swept up the Mississippi Valley, the Mobile News offered a prize for the poems by a Southern writer which should best express the gratitude of the Southern heart towards the people of the North for the philanthropy and magnanimity so nobly and freely displayed during the pestilence. This offer called forth seventy-seven compositions from various parts of the South, and the prize was finally awarded to Miss Maria L. Eve, of Augusta, Ga., the author of Conquered at Last.

You came to us once, O brothers, in wrath,
And rude desolation followed your path.
You conquered us then, but only in part,
For a stubborn heart is the human heart.

So the mad wind blows in his might and main,
And the forests bend to his breath like grain,
Their heads in the dust and their branches broke;
But how shall he soften their hearts of oak?

You swept o'er our land like the whirlwind's wing,
But the human heart is a stubborn thing.

We laid down our arms, we yielded our will,
But our heart of heart was unconquered still.

"We are vanquished," we said, "but our wounds must heal;"
We gave you our swords, but our hearts were steel.

"We are conquered," we said, but our hearts were sore,
And "woe to the conquer'd" on every door.

But the spoiler came and he would not spare,
And the angel that walketh in darkness was there:

He walked through the valley, walked through the street,
And he left the print of his fiery feet.

In the dead, dead, dead, that were everywhere,
And buried away with never a prayer.
PART XVI.

Comedy, Burlesque, Parody, and Epitaph.
PART XVI.

Comedy, Burlesque, Parody, and Epitaph.

"In the smoke of my dear cigarito
Cloud castles rise gorgeous and tall,
And Eros, divine muchachito,
With smiles hovers over it all.

But dreaming, forgetting to cherish
The fire at my lips, as it dies,
The dream and the rapture must perish,
And Eros descend from the skies.

Oh wicked and false muchachito,
Your rapture I yet may recall;
But like my re-lit cigarito,
A bitterness tinges it all.

Camilla K. Von K.

IN PRAISE OF WINE.

Diogenes, surly and proud,
Who snarled at the Macedon youth,
Delighted in wine that was good,
Because in good wine there was truth;
But, growing as poor as Job,
Unable to purchase a flask,
He chose for his mansion a tub,
And lived by the scent of the cask.

Heraclitus ne'er would deny
To tipple and cherish his heart,
And when he was mauled he'd cry
Because he had emptied his quart;

Shakespeare.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Though some are so foolish to think
He went at men's folly and vice,
'Twas only his fashion to drink
Till the liquor flowed out of his eyes.

Democritus always was glad
Of a bumper to cheer up his soul,
And would laugh like a man that was mad,
When over a good flowing bowl.
As long as his cellar was stored,
The liquor he'd merrily guzzled;
And when he was drunk as a lord,
At those who were sober he'd laugh.

Copernicus, too, like the rest,
Believed there was wisdom in wine,
And thought that a cup of the best
Made reason the better to shine.
With wine he'd replenish his veins
And make his philosophy reel;
Then fancied the world, like his brain,
Turned round like a chariot wheel.

Aristotle, that master of arts,
Had been at a durance without wine;
And what we ascribe to his parts
Is due to the juice of the wine.
His belly, most writers agree,
Was as big as a watering-trough;
He therefore leaped into the sea,
Because he'd have liquor enough.

Old Plato, the learned divine,
His fondly to wisdom was prone;
But had it not been for good wine,
His merits had never been known.
By wine we are generous made,
It furnishes fancy with wings;
Without it, we never should have had
Philosophers, poets, or kings.

WHY TRUTH GOES NAKED.

Listen to a tale well worth the ear
Of all who wit and sense admire;
Incommodious, it is very clear,
Some ages prior to Matthew Prior.

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPITAPH. 423

Falsehood and Truth "upon a time,"
One day in June's delicious weather (T was in a distant age and clime),
Like sisters, took a walk together.
On, on their pretty way they took
Through fragrant wood and verdant meadow,
To where a beech beside a brook
Invited rest beneath its shadow,
There, sitting in the pleasant shade
Upon the margin's grassy matting
(A velvet cushion ready made),
The young companions fell to chatting.
Now, while in voluble discourse
On this and that their tongues were running,
As habit bids each speak—perforce,
The one is frank, the other cunning;
Falsehood, at length, impatience grown
With scandals of her own creation,
Said, "Since we two are quite alone,
And nicely screened from observation,
Suppose in this delightful rill,
While all around is so propitious,
We take a bath?" Said Truth, "I will—
A bath, I'm sure, will be delicious!"
At this her robe she cast aside,
And in the stream that ran before her
She plunged—like Ocean's happy bride—
As naked as her mother bore her!
Falsehood at leisure now undressed,
Put off the robes her limbs that hang,
And having donned Truth's snow-white vest,
Ran off as fast as she could scamper.
Since then the sable maid. In sooth,
Expert in lies and shrewd evasions,
Has borne the honest name of Truth,
And wears her clothes on all occasions.
While Truth, disdainful to appear
In Falsehood's petticoat and bodice,
Still braves all eyes from year to year
As naked as a marble goddess.

IF YOU WANT A KISS, WHY, TAKE IT.

There's a jolly Saxon proverb
That is pretty much like this,—
That a man is half in heaven
If he has a woman's kiss.
There is danger in delaying,
For the sweetness may forsake it;
So I tell you, bashful lover,
If you want a kiss, why, take it.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Never let another fellow
Steal a march on you in this;
Never let a laughing maiden
See you spoiling for a kiss.
There's a royal way to kissing,
And the jolly ones who make it
Have a motto that is winning—
If you want a kiss, why, take it.

Any fool may face a cannon,
Anybody wear a crown,
But a man must win a woman
If he'd have her for his own.
Would you have the golden apple,
You must find the tree and shake it;
If the thing is worth the having,
And you want a kiss, why, take it.

Who would burn upon a desert
With a forest smiling by?
Who would change his sunny summer
For a bleak and wintry sky?
Oh, I tell you there is magic,
And you cannot, cannot break it;
For the sweetest part of loving
Is to want a kiss, and take it.

---

TWO MEN I KNOW.

I know a duke—well, let him pass—
I may not call his grace an ass;
Though if I did I'd do no wrong,
Save to the asses and my song.

The duke is neither wise nor good;
He gambles, drinks, scorces womanhood,
And at the age of twenty-four
Was worn and battered as threescore.

I know a waiter in Pall Mall
Who works, and waits, and reasons well;
Is gentle, courteous, and refined,
And has a magnet in his mind.

What is it makes his graceless grace
So like a jockey out of place?
What makes the waiter—tell who can—
So very like a gentleman?

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPITAPH. 425

Perhaps their mothers—God is great!—
Perhaps 'tis accident, or fate!
Perhaps because—hold not my pen—
We can breed horses but not men.

English Newspaper.

---

DARWINISM IN THE KITCHEN.

I was takin' off my bonnet
One afternoon at three,
When a kitchin' jumped upon it
As proved to be a flea.

Then I takes it to the grate,
Between the bars to stick it,
But I had n't long to wait
Ere it changed into a cricket.

Says I, "Surely my senses
Is a-gettin' in a fog?"
So to down it I commences,
When it gathers to a frog.

Here my heart began to thump,
And no wonder I felt funky;
For the frog, with one big jump,
Leaped himself into a monkey.

Then I opened wide my eyes,
His features for to scan,
And observed, with great surprise,
That that monkey was a man.

But he vanished from my sight,
And I sunk upon the floor,
Just as if under a light
Come inside the kitchen door.

Then, beginnin' to abuse me,
She says, "Sarah, you've been drinkin'!"
I says, "No, mum, you'll excuse me,
But I've merely been a-thinkin'."

"But as sure as I'm a cinder,
That party what you see
Argentin' out the winder,
Have developed from a flea!"
A SONG FOR SUMMER.

Oh for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
Oh for an iceberg or two at control!
Oh for a vale that at midday the dew cumbers!
Oh for a pleasure-trip up to the pole!
Oh for a little one-story thermometer
With nothing but zeroes all ranged in a row!
Oh for a big double-barrelled hygrometer,
To measure the moisture that rolls from my brow!
Oh that this cold world were twenty times colder!
(That's fromy red hot, it seemeth to me.)
Oh for a turn of its dreaded cold shoulder!
Oh what a comfort an age would be!
Oh for a grotto frost-lined and rill-riven,
Scooped in the rock under cataract vast!
Oh for a winter of discontent even!
Oh for wet blankets judiciously cast!
Oh for a soda-fount spouting up boldly
From every hot lamp-post against the hot sky!
Oh for a maiden to look on me coldly,
Freezing my soul with a glance from her eye!
Then oh for a draught from the cup of cold poison,
And oh, for a through ticket on Coldgrave
To the banks of the Styx where a thick shadow lies on,
And deepens the chill of its dark running wave!

ROBERT J. WARD.

A COCKNEY WAIL.

The great Pacific journey I have done,
In many a town and tent I've found a lodgment,
I think I've travelled to the setting sun,
And very nearly reached the day of judgment.
Like Lamechot in quest of Holy Grail
From western Borselcha to Yankee Dan
I've been a seeker, yet I sadly fail
To find the genuine type American.

Where is this object of my youthful wonder,
Who met me in the pages of Sam Slick,—
Who opened every sentence with "By thunder!"
And whistled always on a bit of stick?

I WUD KNOT DYE IN WINTUR.

When whisky punches do;
When poory galls air skatlin'
'Or teals ov ice an' env;
When sawdidge-meat is playling,
Andickrie knuts is thick;
Owe! who knud think of dighing,
Or ev'n gettin' sick?

When wud knot dye in springtime,
And miss the turnup greens,
And the pootty song ov the keele fraugs,
And the ski-lark's airy screams,
When birds begin their wobbling,
And inters 'gin to sproult,
When turcky go a-gobblering,
I wud knot then peg out.
I wud knot dye in summer,
And leave the gaud's sass,
The roasted ham, and buttermilk,
The kool place in the grass;
I wud knot dye in summer,
When everything's so hot,
And leave the whiski jaw-lips —
Owe know! Ide ruther knot.

I wud knot dye in summer,
With peeches fit fur eating,
When the wavy corn is gettin' wipe,
An' Kandidatoes is treating;
Phor these and other wreasons
Ide knot dye in the fall,
And — since I'm thot it is over —
I wud knot dye at all.

---

THE LITTLE PEACH.

A little peach in the orchard grew —
A little peach of emerald hue;
Warned by the sun and wet by the dew,
It grew.

One day, passing the orchard through,
That little peach dawned on the view
Of Johnnie Jones and his sister Sue —
Those two.

Up at the peach a club he threw —
Down from the tree on which it grew
Fell the little peach of emerald hue —
Mon dieu!

She took a bite and he a chew,
And then the trouble began to brew —
Trouble the doctor couldn't subdue —
Too true!

Under the turf where the daisies grew
They planted John and his sister Sue,
And their little souls to the angels flew —
Boo hoo!

But what of the peach of emerald hue,
Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew?
Ah, well, its mission on earth was through —
Adieu!

EUGENE FIELD.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Though truth, ye can't climb Fortune's ladder so quick
When both of your shoulders are loaded with brick;
But I'll do it—I swear it—by this and by that;
Which makes what I dare n't say—from your own Pat.

Note.—Fifth line of fourth stanza evidently lost.

TOO GREAT A SACRIFICE.

The maid, as by the papers doth appear,
Whom fifty thousand dollars made so dear,
To test Lohars's passion, simply said:
"Forego the weed before we go to wed.
For smoke take flame; I'll be that flame's bright banner:
To have your Anna, give up your Havana."
But he, when thus she brought him to the scratch,
Lit his cigar and threw away his match.

"OWED" TO MY POCKET-BOOK.

How fair thou art, O little book
Of scented Russia leather!
With stitches fanciful and fine
To hold you well together;
But stitches strong are useless all,
There is no strain upon thee;
The great brogan of poverty
Is very heavy on thee.

What endless room is here for bills
Of large denominations,
With checks and bonds a goodly store—
Ah, vain imaginations!
The hungriest pocket-book thou art
That ever in a highway
Was picked up by a well-fooled man
And cast into a by-way.

Consumption settled on thy form
Till you cannot grow thinner;
In vain you plead with open mouth
Of me a greenback dinner.
'Tis very sad thou couldst not stand
The drain upon thy system;
I never knew what dollars were
Until I wholly missed them.

I'm safe to say that there's more cash
Outside of thee than in thee;
I'd stake thee on some risky bet,
Nor care much who would win thee.
I look at thee and nothing see,—
They say you can't see nothing;
Yet here it's very palpable—
In sooth, not very soothing.

Should some highwayman thee demand,
I'd gladly give thee to him;
"T'would lead him into suicide,
Or monstrously undo him.
Sad pocket-book! I feel for thee,
But not as in days sunny;
Henceforth the pocket of my vest
Will carry all my money.

SUCH A DUCK.

Once Venus, deeming Love too fat,
Stopped all his rich, ambrosial dishes,
Dooming the boy to live on chat,—
To sup on songs and dine on wishes.

Love, lean and lanky, flew off to prowl,—
The starveling now no beauty boasted,—
He could have munched Minerva's owl,
Or Juno's peacock, boiled or roasted.

At last, half famished, almost dead,
He shot his mother's doves for dinner;
Young Lily, passing, shook her head,—
Cried Love, "A shot at you, young sinner!"
"Oh, not at me!" she urged her flight—
"I'm neither dove, nor lark, nor starrling!"
"No," fainting Cupid cried, "not quite;
But then—you're such a duck, my darling!"

ANY ONE WILL DO.

A maiden once, of certain age,
To catch a husband did engage;
But, having passed the prime of life
In striving to become a wife
Without success, she thought it time
To mend the follies of her prime.
Departing from the usual course
Of paint and such like for resource,
With all her might, this ancient maid
Beneath an oak-tree knelt, and prayed;
Unconscious that a grave old owl
Was perched above — the mousing fowl!

"Oh, give! a husband give!" she cried,
"While yet I may become a bride;
Soon will my day of grace be o'er,
And then, like many maidens before,
I'll die without an early love,
And none to meet me there above!

"Oh, 'tis a fate too hard to bear!
Then answer this my humble prayer,
And oh, a husband give to me!"
Just then the owl from out the tree,
In deep base tones cried, "Who—who—who!"
"Who, Lord? And dost thou ask me who? Why, any one, good Lord, will do."

THE RABBi'S PRESENT.

A Rabbi once, by all admired,
Received, of high esteem the sign
From those his goodness thus inspired,
A present of a cask of wine.
But lo! when soon he came to draw,
A miracle in mode as rapid
But quite unlike what Cana saw,
Had turned his wine to water vapid.
The Rabbi never knew the cause,
For miracles are things of mystery:
Though some like this have had their laws
Explained from facts of private history.
His friends, whom love did aptly teach,
Wished all to share the gracious task,
So planned to bring a bottle each,
And pour their wine in one great cask.
Now one by chance thought, "None will know,
And with the wine of all my brothers
One pint of water well may go;"
And so by chance thought all the others.

Cornhill Magazine.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

A LESSON IN MYTHOLOGY.

I SAW to her, one summer day,
A little mythologic story.
About the maid who laughed at love,
She went a race for love and glory.

I closed the book. She raised her eyes
And hushed the song she had been humming;
Glancing across the shady lawn,
I saw my wealthy rival coming.

"These ancient tales," I gravely said,
"With meaning who are often laden;
And Atalanta well may stand
As type of many a modern maiden.

"Minus, of course, the classic scandal,
But with no less of nimble grace,
How many dainty slippered feet
Are running now that self-same race!

"And when Hippomenes casts down
His golden apples, is there ever
A chance for Love to reach the goal?
With sunny smile, she answered, "Never!"

I rose to go—she took my hand
("Oh Fate, you ne'er that elopment can sever!").
And, "Stay," she said, with sudden blush—
"You know that I meant—" hardly ever."

ELIZA C. HALL.

ZOÖLOGY.

On! merry is the Madrepore that sits beside the sea;
The cherry little Coraline hath many charms for me;
I love the fine Echinoderm, of azure, green, and gray,
That handled roughly fling their arms impulsively away;
Then bring me here the microscope and let me see the cells
Wherein the little Zoöphile like garden floweret dwells.

We'll take the fair Anemone from off its rocky seat,
Since Koebeleltus has said when tried 'tis good to eat.
Dyspeptics from Sea-Cucumbers a lesson well may win,
They hastily take their organs out and then put fresh ones in.
The Rotifer in whirling round may surely bear the bell,
With Oceanic Hydrozoa that Huxley knows so well.

You've heard of the Octopus,'tis a pleasant thing to know
He has a ganglion makes him blush, not red, but white as snow;
And why the strange Cercaria, to go a long way back,
Wears ever, as some ladies do, a fashionable "face;"
And how the Paw has parasites that on his head make holes;
Ask Dr. Cobbold, and he'll say they're just like tiny soles.

Then study well zoology, and add unto your store
The tales of Biogenesis and Protoplasmic lore;
As Paley neatly has observed, when into life they burst,
The frog and the philosopher are just the same at first;
But what's the origin of life remains a puzzle still,
Let Tyndall, Haeckel, Bastian, go wrangle as they will.

Punch.

OLD FIDDLING JOSEY.

Git yo' partners, just kvattilation!
Stomp yo' feet an' raise 'em high;
Time in, "Oh, dat watermillion!
Gwine to git home bime-by-bye."

Sniff yo' partners; scrape perpectly
Don't be bumpin' 'gin de res';
Balance all! now step out rightly;
Allez dance yo' 'lebel bo's;
Po'wa'd foah!—whoop up, biggers!
Back ag'in! don't be so slow—
Swing corns'k's 'min' de figgers,
When I hollers den yo' go.

Top ladies cross ober,
Hold on till I takes a dram—
Gemmon solo! yes, I's sober—
Kaint say how de fiddle am.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

Hands around! hol’ up yo’ faces;
Don’t be lookin’ at yo’ feet!
Swing yo’ pardners! to yo’ places!
Dat’s de way — dat’s hard to beat.

Sides to’w’d — when yo’ ready —
Make a bow as low’s you kin.
Swing acrost wid opposite lady,
Now we’ll let you swap ag’in;
Ladies change — shut up dat talkin’;
Do yo’ talkin’ arter while —
Right an’ let I don’t want no wallin’;
Make yo’ steps an’ show yo’ style.

IRWIN RUSSELL.

A SEASIDE INCIDENT.

"Why, Bob, you dear old fellow,
Where have you been those years?
In Egypt, India, Khiya,
With the Khan’s own volunteers?
Have you scaled the Alps or Andes,
Sailed to Islands of Amazons?
What climate, Bob, has wrought the change
Your face from brown to bronze?"

She placed a dimpled hand in mine,
In the same frank, friendly way;
We stood once more on the dear old beach,
And it seemed but yesterday.
Since, standing on this same white shore,
She said, with eyelds wet,
"Good-by. You may remember, Bob,
But I shall not forget."

I held her hand and whispered low,
"Madge, darling, what of the years —
The ten long years that have intervened
Since, through the mist of tears,
We looked good-by on this same white beach
Here by the murmuring sea?
You, Madge, were then just twenty,
And I was twenty-three."

A crimson blush came to her cheek,
"Hush, Bob," she quickly said;
"Let’s look at the bathers in the surf —
There’s Nellie and Cousin Ned."
"And who’s that portly gentleman
On the shady side of life?"
"Oh, he belongs to our party, too —
In fact, Bob, I’m his wife!"

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPIPHANY.

"And I tell you, Bob, it’s an awful thing,
The way he does behave;
Flirts with that girl in steel-gray silk —
Bob, why do you look so grave?"
"The fact is, Madge — I — well, ahem!
Oh, nothing at all, my dear —
Except that she of the steel-gray silk
Is the one I married last year."

New York Clipper.

LINES BY AN OLD FOGY.

I’m thankful that the sun and moon
Are both hung up so high,
That no presumptuous hand can stretch
And pull them from the sky.
If they were not, I have no doubt
But some reforming ass
Would recommend to take them down
And light the world with gas.

ASTRONOMICAL.

"Cousin Edward, what do these scientists mean,
With all their big words and new fangles?
This morning at breakfast they talked a whole hour
Of parallactical angles."

"Well, Lu, we will demonstrate here on the beach,
In a manner strikingly practical;
You’re the moon, I the earth, and Simpkins a star;
The angle is styled parallactical.

"The farther we get from our star, you perceive,
The shorter this line, which the base is,
Till it meets in the infinite azure, and then,
There’s no space at all between forces."

"Oh, Edward, how could you! and Simpkins right there,
With his handkerchief over his lips;
What will the man think?" "Oh, never mind, Lu,
He’ll think it a lunar eclipse."

Daily Graphic.
LINES ON A GRASSHOPPER.

(By a Granger Naturalist.)

I've got him, at last, in the focus
Of a powerful telescope glass,
But he, magnified, looks like a slow cow,
And his ears much like those of an ass.
His eyes are like two peeled potatoes;
His wings like the sails of a ship;
And his beard, which unshaven that way grows,
 Seems to cover an acre of lip.
His stomach is large and capacious,
It always is hungry, no doubt;
And, much like a hog, his ravenous
Desires may be gauged by his snout.
His legs are not merely for creeping,
They are muscular, angular, high;
Just fitted for gallantly leaping,
When he chooses, plumb into the sky!
From his brawny bull neck, saffron-tinted,
Suspended by weather-stained rope,
Hangs a medal with Sanscrit imprinted;
"With this monster no mortal can cope!"
"He's descended through long generations,
With a pedigree perfect and straight,
From the locust that scooped ancient nations
Whenever he fits at their gate."

CONVERSATIONAL.

"How's your father?" came the whisper,
Bashful Ned the silence breaking;
"Oh, he's nicely," Annie murmured,
Smilingly the question taking.
Conversation flagged a moment,
Hopeless, Ned essayed another:
"Annie, I — I," then a coughing,
And the question, "How's your mother?"
"Mother? Oh, she's doing finely!"
Fleeting fast was all forbearance,
When in low, despairing accents,
Came the climax, "How's your parents?"

A SADDENED TRAMP.

"Now unto yonder wood-pile go,
Where toil till I return;
And feel how proud a thing it is
A livelihood to earn."
A saddened look came over the tramp;
He seemed like one bereft.
He stowed away the victuals cold,
He — saw the wood, and left.

DELIGHTS OF CAMP LIFE.

Come to the home of the friendly mosquito,
List to his cheerful inspiriting hum;
With his exuberant spirits ho! hark, O,
All who will deign to his marshes to come.
Come where the bullfrogs are croaking around us,
Creaking our choruses back in our teeth;
Come, for the black flies above do surround us;
Come where the centipedes crawl underneath.

LAY OF A DAIRY-MAID.

The dairy-maid pensively milked the goat,
And pouting, she paused to mutter,
"I wish, you brute, you would turn to milk!
And the animal turned to butter.

A TRAGIC POEM.

Canto one.
Boy.
Gun.
Joy.
Fun.

Canto two.
Gun.
Boy.
Dust.

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPITAPH.
OLD TIME AND I.

OLD Time and I the other night,
Had a carouse together;
The wine was golden warm and bright—
Ay! just like summer weather.
Quoth I, "There's Christmas come again,
And I no farthing richer.
Time answered, "Ah! the old, old strain—
I prithee pass the pitcher."

"Why measure all your good in gold?
No rope of sand is weaker;
'T is hard to get, 't is hard to hold—
Come, lad, fill up your beaker.
Hast thou not found true friends more true,
And loving ones more lovely?"
I could but say, "A few—a few;
So keep the liquor moving."

"Hast thou not seen the prosperous knave
Come down a precious thumper,
His cheats disclosed?" "I have—I have!"
"Well, surely that's a bopper."
"Nay, hold awhile; I've seen the just Find all their hopes grow dimmer."
"They will hope on, and strive, and trust,
And conquer!" "That's a brimmer."

"'Tis not because to-day is dark,
No brighter day's before 'em;
There's rest for every storm-tossed bark."
"So be it! Pass the jorum!
Yet I must own I would not mind
To be a little richer."
"Labor and wait, and you may find—
Hallo! an empty pitcher."  MARK LEMON.

THE HIGHWAY COW.

The hue of her hide was dusky brown,
Her body was lean and her neck was slim,
One horn was turned up and the other turned down,
She was keen of vision and long of limb;
With a Roman nose and a short stump tail,
And ribs like the hoops on a home-made pail.

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPITAPH.

Many a mark did her body bear;
She had been a target for all things known;
On many a scar the dusky hair
Would grow no more where it once had grown;
Many a passionate, parting shot
Had left upon her a lasting spot.
Many and many a well-aimed stone,
Many a brickbat of godly size,
And many a cudgel swiftly thrown
Had brought the tears to her loving eyes,
Or had bounded off from her bony back
With a noise like the sound of a rifle-crack.
Many a day had she passed in the pound
For helping herself to her neighbor's corn,
Many a cowardly cat and hound
Had been transfixed on her crumpled horn;
Many a teapot and old tin pail
Had the farmer-boys tied to her time-worn tail.

Old Deacon Gray was a pious man,
Though sometimes tempted to be profane,
When many a weary mile he ran
To drive her out of his growing grain.
Sharp were the pranks she used to play
To get her fill and to get away.
She knew when the deacon went to town,
She wisely watched when he went by;
He never passed her without a frown,
And an evil gleam in each angry eye;
He would crack his whip in a surly way,
And drive along in his "one-horse shay."

Then at his homestead she loved to call,
Lifting his bars with crumpled horn;
Nimbly scaling his garden wall,
Helping herself to his standing corn;
Eating his cabbages, one by one,
Hurrying home when her work was done.

His human passions were quick to rise,
And striding forth with a savage cry,
With fury blazing from both his eyes
As lightnings flash in a summer sky,
Recker and redden his face would grow,
And after the creature he would go.

Over the garden, round and round,
Breaking his pear and apple trees;
Trampling his melons into the ground,
Overturning his hives of bees,
Leaving him angry and badly stung.
Wishing the old cow's neck was wrung.
THE HUMBLER POETS.

The masses grew on the garden wall,
The years went by with their work and play,
The boys of the village grew strong and tall,
And the gray-haired farmers passed away
One by one, as the red leaves fall;
But the highway cow outlived them all.

Country-side.

THE HINDOO'S DEATH.

A Hindoo died; a happy thing to do,
When fifty years united to a shew.
Released, he hopefully for entrance cries
Before the gates of Brahma's paradise,
"Hast been through purgatory?" Brahma said.
"I have been married!" and he hung his head.
"Come in! I come in! and welcome to my son!"
Marriage and purgatory are as one.
In bliss extreme he entered heaven's door,
And knew the bliss he ne'er had known before.

He scarce had entered in the gardens fair,
Another Hindoo asked admission there.
The self-same question Brahma asked again;
"Hast been through purgatory?" "No; what then?"
"Thou canst not enter!" did the god reply.
"He who went in was there no more than I."
"All that is true, but he has married been,
And so on earth has suffered for all his sin."
"Married?" "Tis well, for I've been married twice."
"Begone! We'll have no fools in paradise."

WHY DRINK WINE.

St. bene commemini causa sunt quinque bibere—
Hospitis adventus, praecons sitis, atque fuituram,
Aut vini bonitas, aut qualibet altera causa.

"If I the reasons well divine,
There are just five for drinking wine—
Good wine, a friend, or being dry,
Or lest you should be by and by,
Or—any other reason why."

Note.—Ascribed by Notes and Queries to Dr. Henry Aldrich, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, a. d. 1697-1711.

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPIGRAPH. 443

IMPROVED "ENOCH ARDEN."

Philip Ray and Enoch Arden
Both were "spoons" on Annie Lee.
Phil did not fall in her notion
She preferred to wed with E.

Him she married and she bore him
Pretty little children three;
But becoming short of "rhino,"
Enoch started off for sea,

Leaving Mrs. Arden mistress
Of a well-stocked village shop,
Selling butter, soap, and treacle,
Beeswax, whipcord, lollipop.

Ten long years she waited for him,
But he neither came nor wrote;
Therefore she concluded Enoch
Could no longer be aloof.

So when Philip came to ask her
If she would be Mrs. Ray,
She, believing herself widowed,
Could not say her suitor nay.

So a second time she married,
Gave up selling bread and cheese—
And in due time Philip nursed
A little Ray upon his knees.

But, alas! the long-lost Enoch
Turn'd up unexpectedly,
And was vastly discontented
At this act of bigamy.

But on thinking o'er the matter,
He determined to stone
For his lengthen'd absence from her
By just leaving well alone.

So he took to bed and dwindled
Down to something like a shade;
Settled with his good landlord,
Then the debt of nature paid.
And when both the Rays discovered
How poor Enoch's life had ended,
They came down in handsome manner,
And gave his corpse a fun'ral splendid.

This is all I know about it.
If it's not sufficient, write
By next mail to Alfred Tommson, son, M. P., Isle of Wight.

---

MARCH.

A SODDEN gray in the chilly dawn,
A burst of the red gold sun at noon;
A windy sea for the dying day,
And a wall at dusk like the distant loon;
A ghost at night in the leafless larch,
A sigh and a moan,
And this is March.

A frown in the morning black and dim;
A smile when the day is half-way run;
A moan when the wind comes up from the sea,
And tosses the larch when the day is done.
A penitent, changeful, gruesome thing,
Is this fierce love child
Of winter and spring.

It is mad with the love of an unloved one,
It is chill with the winters that long have set;
It is sad at times and anon it laughs,
And is warm with the summer that is not yet.
And its voice laughs loud in the leafless larch,
But to sigh again,
And this is March.

A dose of quinine when the sun comes up
From its tossed-up bed in the eastern sea;
Some castor-oil when the moon has sped,
A blue pill dark and catnip tea;
A decoction made from the leafless larch,
And another blue pill,
And this is March.

THE MAD, MAD MUSE.

(After Swinburne.)

Out on the margin of moonshine land,
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs,
Out where the whing-whang loves to stand,
Writing his name with his tail on the sand,
And wipes it out with his oogerish hand;
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs.

Is it the gibber of gungs and keeks?
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs,
Or what is the sound the whing-whang seeks,
Crouching low by winding creeks,
And holding his breath for weeks and weeks?
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs.

Anoint him the wealthiest of wraithy things!
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs.
'Tis a fair whing-whangess with phosphor rings,
And bridal jewels of rings and strings,
And she sits and as sadly and softly sings,
As the mildewed whir of her own dead wings;
Tickle me, dear; tickle me here;
Tickle me, love, in these lonesome ribs.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

---

A GIRL'S A GIRL FOR A'THAT.

Is there a lady in the land
That boasts her rank and a'that?
With scornful eye we pass her by,
And little care for a'that:
For Nature's charm shall bear the palm,—
A girl's a girl for a'that.

What though her neck with gems she deck,
With folly's gear and a'that,
And gayly ride in pomp and pride?
We can dispense with a'that:
An honest heart acts no such part,—
A girl's a girl for a'that.
The nobly born may proudly scorn
A lowly lass and all that;
A pretty face has far more grace
Than haughty looks and all that;
A bonnie maid needs no such aid,—
A girl's a girl for all that.

Then let us trust that come it must,
And sure it will for all that,
When faith and love, all arts above,
Shall reign supreme and all that;
And every youth confess the truth,—
A girl's a girl for all that.

OUT WEST.

I hear thee speak of a Western land,
Thou callest its children a wide-awake band —
Father, oh, where is that favored spot?
Shall we not seek it and build us a cot?
Is it where the hills of Berkshire stand,
Whence the honey comes already canned?
Not there, not there, my child!

Is it far away in the Empire State,
Where Horace Greeley feels first-rate,
Where the people are ruled by Tammany ring,
And Mr. Pink is a railway king,
With two thousand men at his command,
Besides a boat with a big brass band?
Not there, not there, my child!

Is it where the little pigs grow great
In the fertile vales of the Buckeye State,
And get so fat on acorns and meal
That they sell every bit of them, all but the squeal,
Where the butchers have such a plenty
That they don't make sausages out of dogs?
Not there, not there, my child!

Or is it where they fortunes make,
Where they've got a tunnel under the lake,
Where the stores are full of wheat and corn,
And divorces are plenty, as sure as you're born,
Where Long John Wentworth is right on hand,—
Is it there, dear father, that Western land?
Not there, not there, my child!

BRANDY AND SODA.

(After Swinburne.)

Mine eyes to mine eyelids cling thickly,
My tongue feels a mouthful and more,
My senses are sluggish and sickly,
To live and to breathe is a bore.
My head weighs a ton and a quarter
By pains and by pangs ever split,
Which manifold washings with water
Relieve not a bit.

My longings of thirst are unlawful,
And vain to console or control,
The aroma of coffee is awful,
Repulsive the sight of the roll.
I take my matutinal journal,
And strive my dull wits to engage,
But cannot endure the infernal
Sharp crack of its page.

What bad luck my soul had bedevilled,
What demon of spleen and of spite,
That I rashly went forth and I revelled
In riotous living last night?
HUMBLER POETS.

Had the fumes of the goblet no odor
That well might repulse or restrain?
O Insidious brandy and soda,
Our Lady of Pain!

Thou art golden of gleam as the summer
That smiled o'er a tropical sod,
O daughter of Bacchus, the blunderer,
A foamer, a volatile tod!
But thy froth is a serpent that hisses,
And thy gold as a baldfire doth shine,
And the lovers who rise from thy kisses
Can't walk a straight line.

I recall with a flush and a flutter
That orgy whose end is unknown;
Did they bear me to bed on a shutter,
Or did I reek home all alone?
Was I frequent in screams and in screeches?
Did I swear with a forced affright?
Did I perpetrate numerous speeches?
Did I get in a fright?

Of the secrets I treasure and prize most
Did I empty my bacchanal breast?
Did I buttonhole men I despise most,
And crown upon those I like best?
Did I play the low farmer and flunky
With people I always ignore?
Did I caricature round like a monkey?
Did I sit on the floor?

O longing no research may satiate —
No aim to exhume what is hid!
For falsehood were vain to expatiate
On deeds more depraved than I did;
And though friendly faith I would flout not,
On this it were rash to rely,
Since the friends who beheld me, I doubt not,
Were drunker than I.

Thou hast lured me to passionate pastime,
Dread goddess, whose smile is a snare!
Yet I swear thou hast tempted me the last time —
I swear it; I mean what I swear!
And thy beaker shall always forebode a
Disgust 't were not wise to disdain,
O luxurious brandy and soda,
Our Lady of Pain!

Hugh Howard.

COMEDY, BURLESQUE, PARODY, EPIGRAPH.

THAT AMATEUR FLUTE.

(After Poë.)

Hear the flutist with his flute —
Silver flutes,
Oh, what a world of wailing is awakened by its toot!
How does it reiterate its quavers
On the mackled air of night!
And oft the air's in the sound of sight
Of the flute, flute, flute,
With its tootle, tootle, tootle —
The long protracted tootlings of agonizing toots
Of the flute, flute, flute, flute,
Flute, flute, flute,
And the wheezings and the spittings of its toot.

Should be get that other flute —
Golden flute —
What a deep anguish will its presence instill!
How his eyes to heaven he'll raise
As he plays, all the days!
How he'll stop us on our ways
With its praise!
And the people, oh, the people
That dare not live up in the steeples,
But inhabit Christian parlor —
Where he visits and plays —
Where he plays, plays, plays,
In the crudelest of ways,
And thinks we ought to listen,
And expects us to be mute
Who would rather have an ear-ache
Than the music of his flute —
Of his flute, flute, flute,
And the tooings of its toot —
Of the toos whereby he toootheth the agonizing toot,
Of the flute, flute, flute, flute, flute,
Phute, phlewght, phlight,
And the tooote-tooote-tooote-tooying of its toot.

POKER.

To draw, or not to draw, that is the question.
Whether it is safer in the player to take
The awful risk of skinning for a straight,
Or, standing pat, to raise 'em all the limit.

29
THE HUMBLER POETS.

And thus, by bluffing, get it. To draw — to skin;
No more — and by that skin to get a full,
Or two pairs, or the fattest bouncing kings
That luck is heir to — 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To draw — to skin;
To skin! perchance to burst — ay, there's the rub!
For in the draw of three what cards may come,
When we have shuffled off the uncertain pack,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of a bobtail flush;
For who would bear the overwhelming blind,
The insolence of pat hands, and the lifts
That patient merit of the bluffer takes,
When he himself might be much better off
By simply passing? Who would tracts uphold,
And go out on a small progressive raise,
But that the dread of something after call,
The undiscovered ace-full, to whose strength
Such hands must bow, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather keep the chips we have
Than be curious about the hands we know not of.
Thus bluffing does make cowards of us all,
And thus the native hue of a four-heart flush
Is sullied with some dark and cussed club,
And speculators in a jack-pot's wealth
With this regard their interest turn awry
And lose the right to open.

ALL THE SAME IN THE END.

(Epitaph in the Homersfield, Eng., Churchyard.)

As I walked by myself I talked to myself,
And thus myself said unto me:
"Look to thyself and take care of thyself,
For nobody cares for thee."
So I turned to myself and I answered myself
In the self-same reverie:
"Look to thyself or not to thyself,
The self-same thing it will be."
INDEX OF FIRST LINES.

| A baby's boot and a skeleton of wood | 174 |
| A handkerchief and the counsellor | 482 |
| A bit of ground, a smell of earth | 328 |
| A dusty dream, forgotten ere it fades | 479 |
| A cloud came over a land of leaves | 120 |
| A daily, delicate swallow-feather | 93 |
| A dubious, strange, unconscious-headed life | 380 |
| A Hindoo died; a happy thing to do | 442 |
| A little elbow leans upon your knee | 235 |
| A little peach in the orchard grew | 428 |
| A little Pull-back sought one day | 433 |
| A little stream had lost its way | 49 |
| A lover gave the wedding ring | 351 |
| A maiden voice, of certain age | 431 |
| A narrow home, but very still is seemeth | 316 |
| A pair of very chubby legs | 43 |
| A poor little bird trilled a song in the next | 375 |
| A Rabbi once, by all admired | 438 |
| A sudden gray in the chilly dawn | 444 |
| A song for the girl I love | 135 |
| A whisper woke the air | 357 |
| Across in your neighbor's window | 64 |
| Across the heath and down the hill | 157 |
| Across the pathway, myrtle-fringed | 149 |
| Across the rapid stream of seventy years | 277 |
| "Aim not too high at things bey-ond thy reach!" | 217 |
| Alas! how hardly things go right! | 250 |
| Amid the myriad troubles that meet us day by day | 259 |
| And this is the end of it all | 339 |
| As I walked by myself I talked to myself | 450 |
| As sailors watch from their prison | 467 |
| As two young ships upon the path-less main | 360 |
| Aunt Nellie had fashioned a dainty thing | 70 |
| Beautiful snow! Beautiful snow! | 370 |
| Beside the River of Tears, with branches low | 320 |
| Beyond the light-house, standing sentinel | 158 |
| Billy's dead and gone to glory | 339 |
| Blank winds of the winter, seabing and meaning | 357 |
| Bounding like a football | 44 |
| Boy | 439 |
| Brighthand maiden, bright-shouldered maiden | 251 |
| Bring him not here, where our scaled feet | 309 |
| By Neba's lonely mountain | 310 |
| By the flow of the inland river | 413 |
| By the earnest chosen, in the twi-light gloom | 126 |
| By thine own soul's law learn to live | 308 |
| Christ died for all; and on the hearts of all | 58 |
| Clowns are peering in motley - | 144 |
| Cold! so cold! and the night looks down | 68 |
| Come, my wife, put down the Bible | 182 |
| Comes little Maud and stands by my knee | 47 |
| Come to the home of the friendly mosquito | 439 |
The page contains a collection of poems or excerpts from a book, including the following entries:

- "Death Cousin Do Draw" (lines 1-4)
- "Evening Fleet-flying Fold Git Friendship Grandmamma He cried..."
- "How fair thou art, O little book..."
- "How many miles to Baby-land?"
- "How much the world with thee..."
- "How strong they are, those subtle spells..."
- "How's your father?..."
- "If I could see with aウィンド眼's..."
- "If I had known in the morning..."
- "If I should die to-night..."
- "If the reasons well divine..."
- "In silence mighty things are wrought..."
- "In the best chamber of the house..."
- "In the Diamond Shaft worked Gentleman Jim..."
- "In the rush of the merry morning..."
- "Into all lives some rain must fall..."
- "Is it tree?..."
- "Is it true, then, my girl?..."
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>INDEX OF FIRST LINES</th>
<th>PAGE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>“Nought to be done,” oh? It was that he said.</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Oh, Betsy, it’s a bright and sunny day!”—repeat it, Betsy!</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Now unto you, wood-sprites!</td>
<td>439</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O dreadful Memory! why dost thou read? Call to me.</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, damn it all!—afoot of her.</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, for a breath of the moorlands!</td>
<td>319</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, for a ledge in a garden of cucumbers!</td>
<td>486</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, haunting dreams of a sweet summer land!</td>
<td>115</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh! let the soul its clamber break</td>
<td>279</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, let the boat-born wild re-</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh! merry is the Madcaprose that sits beside the sea.</td>
<td>425</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh! the quietest home on earth had I.</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh the snow, the beautiful snow!</td>
<td>371</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh the wonder of our life</td>
<td>257</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, thoughts that go in with the stitches.</td>
<td>226</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, touch that roused! it will bloom.</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oh, yes, we mean all kind words that we say.</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O little bird! sing sweet among the leaves.</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O memories of green and pleasant days.</td>
<td>368</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O star on the breast of the river!</td>
<td>97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O strange sweet loveliness! O</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Over the swift hills of Berkshire.</td>
<td>430</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Old Time and I the other night.</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Once in the days of old.</td>
<td>91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Once more we stand with half-refract feet.</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Once Vanea, luning, Love too fat.</td>
<td>413</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Once by the old-time fancies.</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Once I was a man, and the sea was balm!</td>
<td>387</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only a baby’s rattle.</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only a baby “thout any hair.</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only a man dead in his bed, that he’s!</td>
<td>387</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only a rose in a glass.</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only a woman, shrivelled and old!</td>
<td>370</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Only one moment unfettered by care.</td>
<td>372</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Our Dalry lay down.</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Out of the clover and blue-eyed thistles.</td>
<td>475</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Out of the mist of childhood.</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>INDEX OF FIRST LINES</th>
<th>PAGE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Spread a feast with choicest viands</td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Stay with me, Poezy! playmate of my childhood!</td>
<td>334</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Still are the ships that in haven</td>
<td>328</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Such beautiful, beautiful hands!</td>
<td>224</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sweetheart, good-by! The fluttering sail.</td>
<td>361</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sweet lady, let your lids unclose.</td>
<td>298</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Take for your hero some thoroughbred scampy.</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Talking of seas till late one eve.</td>
<td>296</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Teach you French? I will, my dear!</td>
<td>324</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tears of gold the heavens wept.</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The banks are all a-berin’, Nance</td>
<td>236</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The birds so rare in dewywood trees are singing.</td>
<td>243</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The blessed hush of eventides.</td>
<td>373</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The bluest gray—the grayest blue.</td>
<td>217</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The chimes, the chimæs of Motherland.</td>
<td>304</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The clock strikes seven in the hall.</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The course of the longest river.</td>
<td>325</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The crimson sunset faded into gray.</td>
<td>356</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The dainty-maid pensively walked the goat.</td>
<td>459</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Eastern wizards do a wondrous thing.</td>
<td>415</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The fairest flower upon the vine.</td>
<td>335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The fire in the west burns low.</td>
<td>434</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The glamour of the after-light.</td>
<td>499</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The great Pansie journey I have done.</td>
<td>460</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The hands are such dear hands.</td>
<td>303</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The hue of her hide is dusky brown.</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The kindly words that rise within the heart.</td>
<td>301</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The king from the council chamber.</td>
<td>310</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The lazy, languid breezes sweep.</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The mosses stretched from west to east.</td>
<td>96</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Lord, who fashioned my hands for working.</td>
<td>243</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The mail, as the papers doth appear.</td>
<td>439</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The nebulae have dropped from her hairless hands.</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The night has a thousand eyes.</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>There was a rose-leash in a garden.</td>
<td>438</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They come in the quiet twilight.</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They sit in the winter glowing.</td>
<td>211</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>INDEX OF FIRST LINES.</td>
<td>PAGE</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They soon grow old who grope for gold.</td>
<td>458</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They stood above the world.</td>
<td>399</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Things have come to a pretty pass.</td>
<td>159</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>These grave were ye meaning', stranger?</td>
<td>335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This mortal body that I wear</td>
<td>386</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This year — next year — sometime — never</td>
<td>324</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thou dark-robed man with solemn pace</td>
<td>313</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thou hast diamonds and pearls of rare beauty</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Then hast not gold? Why, this is gold.</td>
<td>357</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Time to me this truth hath taught</td>
<td>246</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tired! Well, what of that?</td>
<td>356</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T is home where'er the heart is</td>
<td>218</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T is really time you were out, I think.</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T is the golden gleam of an autumn day</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To draw, or not to draw, that is the question</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To touch a broken bough</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T was but a breath</td>
<td>357</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T was midnight; not a sound was heard</td>
<td>69</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T was near the break of day, but still</td>
<td>487</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T was springtime of the day and year</td>
<td>214</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two little ones, grown tired of play,</td>
<td>348</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Up in early morning light</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upon a mountain height, far from the sea</td>
<td>408</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upon life's highway I was hastening</td>
<td>395</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upon the brown and frozen sod</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Was it a lie that they told me</td>
<td>307</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Was the passing very bitter?</td>
<td>241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wave by wave over the sandy bar</td>
<td>263</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We asked where the magic came from</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We can only live once; and death's terror</td>
<td>269</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We die not at all, for our deeds remain</td>
<td>276</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We grasp a hand, we think it true and strong</td>
<td>264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We just shake hands at meeting</td>
<td>262</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We meet 'neath the sounding arch</td>
<td>403</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We say it for an hour or for years</td>
<td>355</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We slight the gifts that every season bears</td>
<td>230</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where the wind and in the shadow here</td>
<td>320</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Weary, Mary, day and night I landed at last</td>
<td>493</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Well, wife, I've found the model church!</td>
<td>399</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Well, young sir, you're mighty smooth spoken</td>
<td>328</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What care I for the tempest?</td>
<td>476</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What did the baby come for?</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What did the baby go for?</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is life?</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is the life of man? A passing shade</td>
<td>288</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What shall I wish thee for the coming year?</td>
<td>462</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What? Who? You don't! Do you mean it, though?</td>
<td>394</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When brethren leave the old hearthstone</td>
<td>518</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When Death from some fair face</td>
<td>313</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When I knew him at first there was nothing</td>
<td>397</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When life's troubles gather darkly</td>
<td>241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When she unfast her hair at night</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the day with all its splendor</td>
<td>204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the frost is on the pumpkin</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the hush shadows hover</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the morning fair and sweet</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the tribute of the midnight</td>
<td>286</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the world is weary, and leading</td>
<td>319</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When we see our dreamships</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where are the flowers? where the leaves?</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where burns the fireside brightest</td>
<td>247</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where grass grows short and the meadows end</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where morn-made beds are brightest by the river</td>
<td>259</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Whether my heart be glad or no</td>
<td>269</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Whichever way the wind does blow</td>
<td>577</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>While mother is tending baby</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>While o'er my life still hung the morning star</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Who'll take care of the baby?&quot;</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who shall judge man from his manner</td>
<td>263</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why all this talk for triumphs of an hour</td>
<td>384</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why, Bob, you dear old fellow</td>
<td>415</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yes, stone the woman, let the man go free!</td>
<td>376</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You came to us once, O brothers, in wrath</td>
<td>416</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You laughed as you turn the yellow page</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You see it first near the dusty road</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>